

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

Annual Catalogue, 1886.

THIS catalogue will be issued as early in February as photowork and printing can be completed. It will comprise (1) full titles and descriptive notes of all books recorded in 1886, re-arranged in one author-alphabet (of about 225 pages) and reproduced by photo-process; (2) short-title index by author, title, and subject, giving date of record (of about 75 pages); (3), supplementary index; (4) annual lists of publishers.

It will be an octavo of over 350 pages, ranging with Publishers' Weekly or English Catalogue. Price, to subscribers, $2.50 in sheets (for interleaving), $3.00, half leather, style of American Catalogue; after publication, $3.00 and $3.50.

The price charged is necessary to cover the large cost of photographic reproduction and setting of index.

The editions will be limited to immediate demand, and the type of index will be immediately distributed and photo-plates broken up. Subscriptions should be sent now.

Subscribers to the TRADE LIST ANNUAL will please note that it is not proposed to continue in it the reprint of the Weekly Record, which is replaced in better form by the Annual Catalogue. They should therefore make sure of the latter.

RECENT BOOKS:

The Rear-Guard of the Revo-

By EDMUND KIRKE, author of "Among the Pines," etc., With Portrait of John Sevier, and Map. 12mo, cloth. Price, $1.50.

Many readers will recall a volume published during the war entitled "Among the Pines," appearing under the penname of Edmund Kirke. The book attained a remarkable success, and all who have read it will recall its spirited and graphic delineations of life in the South. "The Rear-Ewre of the Revolution." from the same hand, is a narrative of the adventures of the pioneers that first crossed the Alleghanies and settled in what is now Tennessee, under the teachership of two remarkable men, James Robertson and John Sevier.

Won by Waiting.

MOVEL. By Edna Lyall, author of "Donovan,"
"We Too," etc. 1smo, cloth. Price, $1.50.

"We Too," etc. 18mo, cloin. Frice, $1.50.

"The Dean's daughter's are perfectly real characters—Like learned Cornelia especially; the little impulsive French becoine, who endures their cold hospitality and at last wins their affection, is thoroughly charming; while throughout the book there runs a golden thread of pure brotherly and sisterly love, which pleasantly reminds us that the making and marring of marriage is not, after all, the sum total of real life."—London Academy.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

A New Book by the Author of Dr. Jekyll.

KIDNAPPED:

BEING MEMOIRS OF THE ADVENTURES OF DAVID BALFOUR IN THE YEAR 1751.

How he was Kidnapped and Cast away; his Sufferings on a Desert Isle; his Journey in the Wild Highlands; his acquaintance with Alan Breck Stewart and other notorious Highland Jacobites; with all that he suffered at the hands of his Uncle, Ebenezer Balfour of Shaws, falsely so-called.

By Robert Louis Stevenson. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

If "all mankind love a lover," all boys (of from twelve to sixty) love almost as much a boyhero of the type of Davie Balfour in Mr. Stevenson's book. To be "Kidnapped and Cast Away" and to "Suffer on a Desert Isle" are both of them things which promise the best kind of story, but when we know in advance that David's adventures afterward bring him among wild Highland clansmen and Jacobite refugees, and that Mr. Stevenson can tell these experiences both by sea and land like nobody else since the author of Robinson Crusoe, we may be sure that "Kidnapped" will be read through at one sitting by every true boy (of the above-named ages) into whose hands it falls.

Crowded with action and daring, with wild mountain life, and pluck and loyalty of the good, unquestioning kind, Davie's relation is as manly as it is stirring. Mr. Stevenson draws his villainous kidnappers, his rough sailors and Highlanders, with that wonderful vividness and truth that makes everything he touches so real; but the air of his book is as healthy and fresh the Highland air itself; and false-flavored sensationalism of the later sort cannot live in it.

The 21st thousand of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" is now ready. A book which should be kept in stock in quantities.

CARLSBAD AND ITS EN-VIRONS

By John Merryles. With a Treatise on the Use of the Waters by B. London, M.D., Resident Physician at Carlsbad. Illustrated, 1 vol., 12mo, $2.50.

A very valuable book for travellers in search of health; besides describing the famous springs of Carlsbad and the medicinal value of the waters, it gives a delightful account of the town itself and the interesting country surrounding it.

NOTES IN SEASON.

W. S. GOTTSBERGER will publish on the 9th inst. Tolstor's "War and Peace," complete in six volumes.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have published the second edition of Victor Morawetz's "Treatise on the Law of Private Corporations;" also the sixteenth volume of "The United States Digest" for 1885.

JOHN ALLYN, Boston, has nearly ready "Cæsar's Gallic War," by Prof. Francis W. Kelsey, containing the seven books, with introduction, maps, plans, illustrations, notes and wocabulary.

WILLIAM R. JENKINS, New York, has nearly ready a new work for the study of French by the Natural Method, in which Prof. Sauveur and his numerous disciples have been so successful in the United States. The author of the new book, "La Methode Pratique," is Prof. Paul Bercy, a teacher of many years' experience in New York and in Paris. He has also nearly ready "L'Ami Fritz," by Erckmann-Chatrian, in the Romans Choisis.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS publish to-day a valuable book for travellers in search of health, entitled "Carlsbad and its Environs," by John Merrylees, with a treatise on the use of the waters by Dr. B. London, resident physician at Carlsbad. Owing to a delay in the preparation of the book in England, their edition of "Kidnapped," by Robt. Louis Stevenson, will not be published until July 12th, on which date it is hoped that the book can be issued simultaneously in both countries.

DAVID McKay, Philadelphia, has issued a handsome Library Shakespeare in four octavo volumes. It is sumptuously printed in large and clear type, on fine white paper, and bound with uncut edges, gilt top. It contains twenty-three steel engravings, and two photogravures, and has notes by Malone, Steevens, and others, together with a biography, concordance chamiliar passages, index to characters, and a glossary of obsolete terms. Altogether this is one of the handsomest octavo editions of Shakespeare now on the market.

JAMES J. CHAPMAN, Washington, D. C., solicits subscriptions for "The Statutes at Large of the Provisional and Permanent Governments of the Confederate States of America, from the institution of the Government, February 8, 1861, to March 18, 1865, inclusive, arranged in chronological order, together with the Constitution for the Provisional Government, and the permanent Constitution of the Confederate States, and the treaties concluded by the Confederate States with Indian tribes," edited by Raphael P. Thian, chief clerk, Adjutant-General's Office, War Department. The volume will be a royal-octavo of about twelve hundred pages, bound in sheep. The price has been fixed at $10.

LEE & SHEPARD have in preparation a work-by the Rev. Charles F. Thwing, to be entitled "The Family." It is a study in the history of family life, beginning with prehistoric family life, then tracing family life among the Greeks, Romans and Jews, through the first Christian centuries and the Middle Ages. It gives a history of the Church Protestant and Catholic in its influence on social order and its relations to family life, and also deals historically and philosophically with the question of divorce and other equally important social problems. They are also preparing a volume by George M. Towle, with introduction by John Boyle O'Reilly, devoted to a "Young Folks' History of Ireland."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Little Ones' Own is to be the title of Wana-maker's weekly magazine for children. It will be illustrated with colored pictures. The firsk issue is promised for July 17.

THE Printing Press is the title of a new quarterly journal devoted to the literature and mechanics of printing and printing machinery. Charles R. Brainard is the editor and publisher-His address is Tribune Building, New York.

REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER'S sermons delivered by him during his present visit to England are to be specially reported and published monthly in the Brooklym Magazine. Mrs. Beecher has promised to furnish the Magazine with a series of "Letters from England" during her sojourn abroad.

 The aim in compiling this work has been to offer to the student as well as to the analytical chemist a substitute for much of his laborious calculations. Very much of this laborious but necessary work, the author feels, can be very easily dispensed with by the use of such help as he here offers, and he is assured that if it be received, it will be found to be indispensable in laboratory calculations. For this purpose he has selected only those tables which are in constant use in an ordinary laboratory. They have been prepared with the utmost care, and can be relied on in every particular. All the calculations are based on the atomic weights as lately determined by Prof. F. W.

The notes, without which the text of the "Kurtzen Nachrichten" would now be practically unintelligible to the general public, form by far the largest part of this handsome volume, and will prove of value to the student whether he be interested in the rise and progress of a powerful religious denomination, or only in the early development of a race which from the start was active in defending the autonomy of its adopted country.

A narrative of the adventures of the pioneers that first crossed the Alleghanies and settled in what is now Tennessee, under the leadership of two remarkable men, James Robertson and John Sevier. Sevier is notably the hero of the narrative. His career was certainly remarkable, as much so as that of Daniel Boone. The title of the book is much so as that of Daniel Boone. The title of the book is derived from the fact that a body of hardy volunteers, under the leadership of Sevier, crossed the mountains to uphold the patriotic cause, and by their timely arrival secured the defeat of the British army at King's Mountain. Edmund Kirke will be remembered as the author of a novel "Among the pines." which had a marked success, and some sketches entitled "Down in Tennessee."

The scene is laid in Brunhill, Lancashire; a seemingly unimportant incident opens the story and really proves the turning-point in Caleb Carthew's life, as it caused him to be expelled from school, brought about the Damon and Pythias friendship between himself and Frank Preston, and finally was the cause of David's becoming a carpenter's apprentice. From this time Frank tells the story which cemprises the eventful things in Caleb's career, some interesting things in his own history, their joint romances, and the sad love affair of Kate Carthew.

In compiling the subjects of pathological anatomy for this work, the author was careful to select only such as were capable of representing typical forms of diseases, and used only those that were drawn from nature, under the immediate supervision of the reporter of the case. In giving the history of each case, he followed, verbatim, the original description, but in explaining the general and special pathology followed the most modern medical seachings and doctrines recognized by the profession as of standard authority, carefully avoiding all subjects still ander controversy, and not considered as yet established. The same rules are observed, and the same methods followed, in the treatment of physical diagnosis. All the improved methods and appliances now in use in physical diagnosis are carefully set forth and described. The illustrations are with few exceptions colored, and life size. From an artistic point of view the work is as nearly perfect as art can make a representation of life. as art can make a representation of life.

M. de Mabillon's wife had been an Englishwoman, whom he had married against the wishes of her father, the Dean of Rilchester. His children, in their poverty and distress, are, much against their will, forced upon their father's death to appeal to their grandfather for help. They so to England, and while Gaspard starves in London, Esperance receives a cold welcome at the Deanery. The unhappiness she suffers, brought into contact with the narrow, cold natures of her mother's people is very touching. Both the young people, after much injustice and indifference, was their way to a better standing with their relatives, and to a better worldly position. A murder committed in Paris under peculiar circumstances is the key-note. The murderer comes to England and takes possession of his cousin's property, living for nearly twelve years unsuspected of his crime, leading a apparently peaceful, happy life. At the end of this time, a man who had witnessed the murder, himself unseen, if freed from the galleys, where he had been serving a term for hurglary. His efforts to extort money from 'the man with a conscience' by trading upon his knowledge bring about some strange combinations of circumstances, which introduce many odd characters. introduce many odd characters.

It was written between 1852 and 1855, and was only intended as the beginning of a great novel, covering his whole career, that as yet has not been completed. This work is of particular interest, since it shows that many of the author's ideas of thirty years ago were precisely similar to those that he is putting in practice to-day in his own person.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JULY 3, 1886.

PUBLISHERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

HAVE MAGAZINES HURT THE BOOK

A STATEMENT has recently gone the rounds of the newspapers that "the magazines have killed books, and the newspapers are now killing the magazines." At first glance this seems plausible; but on investigation it proves to be only about half true. That there has been a change in the book business, and that the change is still going on, no one will deny. But we are living in an age of transition; and, having the utmost faith in human progress, we will trust that the change in this direction in some way may prove beneficial rather than detrimental to writers and readers.

That new books—books that are books, we mean—are not as numerous as once they were, is also beyond denial. As The Hour, in an article on the same subject, says:

"Who is there that reads that cannot recall the feast of announcements which used to be spread on the advertising pages of daily newspapers every Saturday?—the spirited rivalry be-tween New York and Boston publishers?—the competing promises of English books still to appear, which any printer might issue regardless of author's desires or rights, as soon as a single volume could reach these shores to be used as a copy? There are no such Saturdays now; a man who wishes to give a new book to a friend must choose between several at least a month old. The cheap "libraries," republishing in small type and on flimsy paper everything new that appears abroad and everything old that people will read, have frightened American publishers out of issuing anything but books by noted native authors; they have also frightened the said authors out of printing a book unless it has first earned them a comfortable sum by serial publication in a magazine or weekly paper, for the sale in book form will scarcely pay the board bill of the author for the time he was engaged upon his manuscript.

"Yet people who used to read continue to read, and they get numberless recruits from each generation that arises. Bookstores are full of books; the literary fecundity of England and America during the past forty years was amazing, and no person fond of reading has 'caught up' with the current. In the single department of fiction, millions of volumes of Dickens, and hundreds of thousands of Thackeray and of George Eliot have been printed in this country and most of them are still on library shelves, from which the second and third generations from the original purchasers take them down to read. More than twenty different editions of Tennyson have been published here, some of them exceeding a hundred thousand copies: and volumes of Longfellow are equally numerous, while Whittier's and Lowell's poems have outsold any novel ever published. Emerson and Hawthorne were voluminous writers whom all intelligent Americans hope to read, and do read when they get time. The list of popular writers which this generation is yet to read might be extended indefinitely, so a publisher has no encouragement to issue a book that has not qualities that will surely command attention."

For this result the magazines, it seems to us, have been no more responsible within the last decade than they were fifty years ago.

Our contemporary fears that perhaps in one direction the magazines may have hurt the book trade-namely, that they may have "discouraged publishers who used to issue illustrated books, for the cost of a magazine is distributed among so many thousand purchasers that the editor is enabled to print illustrations more expensive than any publisher would dare order for a book." We confess, we fail even here to see any baneful influence, for if there is one branch of the publishing business in which progress has been made it is in the department of art books. And in this the influence of the illustrated magazines has been stimulating only. Despite the fears, therefore, expressed on this subject, we hold to the conclusion that magazines have hurt the book business as little as newspapers are hurting the magazines. On the contrary, every one in turn becomes the recruiting field for the other in an ascending scale.

RECOLLECTIONS OF HENRY STEVENS.

HENRY STEVENS'S "Recollections of Mr. James Lenox, of New York, and the formation of his Library," which has recently been issued by his son, is a work that appeals to lovers of books in general, and to New Yorkers in particular. In point of typography, it at once creates a prejudice in its favor, being elegantly printed at the Chiswick Press, on hand-made paper, and bound in a dainty imitation half binding. Three India proof portraits adorn the volume—one of Mr. Stevens as he was known to a later generation, rugged, full of kindly humor, signed "Henry Stevens, of Vermont;" another, taken perhaps forty years ago, prim, not so much to our liking. with the mysterious "G. M. B." attached to the signature; and one of Mr. James Lenox. Nothing to find fault with in the get-up of this treasure, only the criminal lack of an index.

The volume opens with a brief biographical sketch of Mr. Lenox, no mean bibliographes himself, who employed Mr. Stevens for a period of twenty-five years to search the world over for scarce books and manuscripts. Then follows a record of this search, told in a pungent, gossipy style delightful to read, accompanied by anecdotes, many of them interesting—every one of them instructive. One of these—one that already belongs to the romance of bibliography—we cannot resist re-printing in full:

For nearly ten years Mr. Lenox entertained a longing desire to possess a perfect copy of "The Bay Psalm Book," the New England metrical version of the Psalms printed by Stephen Daye at Cambridge, N. E., 1640, the first book printed in what is now the United States. He gave me to understand that if an opportunity occurred for securing a copy for him I might go as far as a hundred guineas. Accordingly, from about 1847 till his death, six years later, my good-friend William Pickering and I put our heads and book-hunting forces together to run down this variety.

The only copy we knew of on this side the Atlantic was a spotless one in the Bodleian Library, which had lain there unrecognized for ages, and even in the printed catalogue of 1843 its title was recorded without distinction among the common herd of Psalms in verse. The book bears no name of place or printer, the imprint being simply "Imprinted 1640." I had handled it several times with great reverence, and noted its many peculiar points, but, as agreed with Mr. Pickering, without making any sign or imparting any information to our good and obliging friend, Dr. Bandinel, Bodley's librarian. We thought that when we had secured a copy for ourselves, it would be time enough to acquaint the learned Doctor that he was entertaining unawares this angel of the new world.

Under these circumstances, therefore, only an experienced collector can judge of my surprise and inward satisfaction when, on the 12th January, 1855, at Sotheby's, at one of the sales of Pickering's stock, after untying parcel after parcel to see what I might chance to see, and keeping ahead of the auctioneer, Mr. Wilkinson, on resolving to prospect in one parcel more before he overtook me, my eye rested for an instant only on the long lost Benjamin, clean and unspotted. I instantly closed the parcel (which was described in the catalogue as lot '531 Psalmes other editions, 1630 to 1675 black letter, a parcel"), and tightened the string, just as Alfred came to lay it on the table. blooded coolness seized me, and advancing toward the table behind Mr. Lilly, I quietly bid in a perfectly neutral tone "sixpence," and so the bids went on increasing by sixpences until half a crown was reached, and Mr. Lilly had loosened the string. Taking up this very vol-ume he turned to me and remarked that "This looks a rare edition, Mr. Stevens, don't you think so? I do not remember having seen it before," and raised the bid to five shillings. I replied that I had little doubt of its rarity, though comparatively a late edition of the Psalms, and at the same time gave Mr. Wilkinson a sixpenny nod. Thenceforward a "spirited competition" arose between Mr. Lilly and myself, until finally the lot was knocked down to "Stevens" for nineteen shillings! I then called out, with perhaps more energy than discretion, "delivered." On pocketing this volume, leaving the other seven to take the usual course, Mr. Lilly and others inquired with some curiosity, "What rarity have you got now?" Oh, nothing," said I, "but the first English book printed in America." There was a pause in the sale, while all had a good look at the little stranger. Some said, jocularly, "there has evidently been a mistake; put up the lot again." Mr. Stevens, with the book again sately in his pocket, said: "Nay; if Mr. Pickering, whose cost mark of y [3s], did not recognize the prize he had won, certainly the cataloguer might be excused for throwing it away into the hands of the right person to rescue, appreciate, and preserve it. I am now fully rewarded for my long and silent hunt of seven years."

On reaching Morley's I eagerly collated the volume, and at first found it right, with the usual signatures correct. The leaves were not paged nor folioed. But on further collation I missed sundry of the Psalms, enough to fill four leaves. The puzzle was finally solved when it was discovered that the inexperienced printer had marked a sheet with the signature W after V,

This was a very distressing disappointment, but I held my tongue, and knowing that my old friend and correspondent, George Livermore, of Cambridge, N. E., possessed an imperfect copy, which he and Mr Crowninshield, after the noble example of the "Lincoln Nosegay," had won from the committee of the "Old South," in Boston, together with another and perfect copy, I proposed an advantageous exchange, and obtained the four missing leaves. Mr. Crowninshield strongly advised Mr. Livermore against parting with his four leaves, because, as he said, "they would enable Stevens to complete his copy, and place it in the library of Mr. Lenox, who would then crow over us because he also had a perfect copy of the Bay Psalm Book."

Having thus completed my copy, and had it bound by Francis Bedford in his best style, I sent it to Mr. Lenox for £80. Five years later bought the Crowninshield Library in Boston for $10,000 mainly to obtain his perfect copy of the Bay Psalm Book, and brought the whole library to London. This second copy, after being held for several months, was, at the suggestion of Mr. Thomas Watts, offered to the British Museum for £150. The Keeper of the Printed Books, however, never had the courage to send it before the trustees for approval and payment; so after waiting five or six years longer the volume was withdrawn, bound by Bedford, taken to America in 1868, and sold to Mr. George Brinley for 150 guineas. At the Brinley sale in March, 1878, No. 847, Part I., it was bought by Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt for $1200, or more than three times the cost of my first copy to Mr. Lenox. The British Museum still lacks the first book printed in New England.

Mr. Henry N. Stevens, in the preface to this delightful volume, remarks that his father "has left several essays on important historical and geographical subjects which he will hope to publish in course of time." This is good news, for all of Mr. Stevens's work is thorough and genuine, and so much knowledge constantly perishes with its possessor, that every fragment that can be saved is something out of the fire.

FAMOUS WORKS AT FIRST REJECTED.

From the Paper World.

WHEN Godwin submitted "Caleb Williams," the work on which his fame principally rests, to the judgment of another man of letters, he did all in his power to dissuade him from publishing it, saying it would be the ruin of his literary reputation. But for this book, as a matter of fact, he would now be forgotten, except as the father-in-law of Shelley. With all our enlightenment in modern times, mistakes are frequently made in regard to books that will take, even by publishers, who should be the best of judges. Would any one believe that "Self-Help," a book that has had an immense sale, as well as a vast influence for good, was at first refused because it was thought unlikely to pay the expense of printing? The gentleman who is known to fame as Cuthbert Bede, states that the publisher of his book, "Verdant Green," told him that it would not pay for advertising, whereas 170,000 copies have been sold.

Lord Lytton's novel, "Pelham," might also be included in the rejected list. It was on the point of being returned to its author, when the publisher happened to take up the Ms., and, having read the first chapters, at once reversed the verdict of his "reader." 'Vice Versa," a book which has passed through more than twenty editions in less than twelve months, was rejected at least once, if not twice, before it save the light. Will Carlton's "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" was thrown into the waste-paper basket. "The Fool's Errand" was refused by several publishers, and so was "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which was finally brought out at the earnest solicitation of the wife of its original publisher.

Although Thackeray sent his "Vanity Fair" to every place where it would have a chance of being accepted, he was obliged at last to have it printed at his own cost. There is something unaccountably strange in the fact that one of the first writers of the nineteenth century should have a difficulty in getting his best known book introduced to the public, and still, perhaps the greatest work of the century, Carlyle's "French Revolution," was rejected. Thackeray used to say, laughingly, that it was amusing how little he earned when in his early days he wrote carefully, and how much he received for poor work after he had acquired a name.

When the poet Campbell sent one of his best-known lyrical pieces to a provincial newspaper, he had the mortification to read in its notice to correspondents that his lines were not up to the standard of excellence required by the editor of that obscure print. In the same way Tom Hood's "Song of the Shirt" was rejected in two or three places before it fell into the hands of the then editor of Punch, Mark Lemon. This was to have been its last chance, so it was accompanied by a note to the effect that, if unsuitable, it might be destroyed, as the author did not wish to have another sight of it.

Washington Irving, who created Rip Van Winkle, could not find a publisher for his "Sketch-Book" that would take the risk, and so it was first printed at his own expense. Cooper, his countryman, was equally unfortunate with his famous novel "The Spy." He was an unknown author, and by Gifford's advice, the publisher to whom he offered the Ms., declined it. The reviewer had made a blunder, for as soon as the book appeared its success was instantaneous. To some persons it may be surprising to learn that "John Gilpin," the far-renowned hero of burlesque, was coldly received by the public on his first appearance. It was not till an actor thought fit to recite the famous ride on the stage that the poem sprang into popularity into popularity.

"Pickwick," the immortal, is said to have run a very narrow chance of being doomed to oblivion. The book was brought out in numbers, which were written as they were required for the press. The public refused to buy the earlier ones, and to say the truth they gave little promise of the ability that was displayed later on. The publishers, thinking they had entered into a losing speculation, were about to discontinue its further issue, when Sam Weller came on the scene, and introduced them to a veritable gold mine.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MR. HEMAN W. CHAPLIN, of Boston, says the New York Tribune, is the author of "The Village Convict," "In Madeira Lane," and other magazine stories published over the signature of "C. H. White."

It seems to be settled that Miss Rose Cleveland has decided to make Chicago her home. The Elder Publishing Co. of that city is said to have made arrangements with Miss Cleveland to take editorial charge of Literary Life.

MR. JULIAN HAWTHORNE is reported as being "sorry to say" that three new books of his will probably be published during the summer and autumn. The first is a short novel entitled "John Parmelee;" the second a volume of critical essays written since 1883, and the third a volume of two short stories written some years ago.

MRS. ARTHUR H. NOYES, ("Toler King,") whose death was recorded in our last issue, was not the author, we are informed, of any volume in the No Name series, or of any other book published by Roberts Brothers. The same is also true of a Mrs. Emily Fox, who claimed to be the author of "Gemini" and "Will Denbigh." We have no means of determining whether the two names stand for the same person.

MR. LAURENCE OLIPHANT's forthcoming novel.
"Masollam: a Problem of the Period," is said to deal largely with a class of subjects in which he shows an increasing interest. The "problem" of which Mr. Oliphant treats is "psychometrical," and in the view that he takes of phenomena which have engaged the attention of spiritualists, Esoteric Buddhists, and the members of the Psychical Research Society, he differs, so far as the Athenaum has been able to gather, from them all.

MR. WILLIAM BLACK has completed a new novel, the chief scenes of which are laid in London and Brighton. "The story," says the London Academy, "deals in some measure with artistic life in the metropolis, while one of the characters is of a sporting turn, and a good deal of racing is introduced. The heroine, Sabina, whose name gives the title to the story, is the daughter of a rich M.P., who quits her father's house and lives in lodgings so as to devote herself entirely to labor among the London poor."

BUSINESS NOTES.

AKRON, O.—R. C. West, bookseller, has sold out.

BALTIMORE, MD.—J. W. Bond & Co., booksellers and stationers, have offered to settle at thirty-three and a third per cent cash.

NEW YORK CITY.—The business of the late D. Van Nostrand will be continued under the name of "Estate of D. Van Nostrand, William H. Farrington, agent."

TACOMA, WASH. TERE.—Holt & Pendergast, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

WHITEWATER, WIS.—Taylor & Caldwell, booksellers, have sold out.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

LUDWIG ROSENTHAL, Munich, Bavaria, has issued an interesting catalogue of works on America, Asia, Africa, and Australia. The catalogue is numbered xlvi., and contains 242 pages.

An interesting catalogue of eighty-two numbers, of books (in the English language) "relating to the Celts, Druids, Ancient Britain, Wales and the Welsh," is issued by Henry Blackwell, 207 East Twelfth Street, New York.

LE SOUDIER, Paris, has published a "Bibliographie de la Guerre Franco-Allemande 1870-71 et de la Commune de 1671: catalogue de tous les ouvrages publiés en langues française et allemande de 1871 à 1885 inclusivement, suivi d'une table systématique," par Albert Schultz. (128 p. 8vo.)

MACMILLAN & Co. have in preparation a catalogue of their publications which they intend making the most elaborate and most useful catalogue they have ever issued for the American market. It will be classified and indexed with much care, so that, containing, as it necessarily will do, all of their own publications, besides the miscellaneous works of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, it should have an interest and value to the librarian and the trade of this country not easy to surpass. With the index, it is calculated the catalogue will make a volume of nearly 150 pages.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

C. A. MONTGOMERY & Co. have presented Mrs. Grover Cleveland with a copy of their Goodholme's "Domestic Cyclopædia," richly bound in full crushed levant by R. W. Smith.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & Co., London, will publish this fall the first volume of an English translation of Karl Marx's important work "Das Kapital." It will be edited by Dr. Friedrich Engels, one of Marx's literary executors.

D. LOTHROP & Co. sent Mrs. Grover Cleveland a copy of their handsome volume, "June," by Oscar Fay Adams, which was acknowledged by an autograph letter of thanks. This volume is peculiarly adapted for a wedding present.

THE Historical Commission of the German Booksellers' Union has published a posthumous work of the late Dr. Frederick Kapp, "History of the German Book Trade until the Seventeenth Century," of which seven hundred and eighty-two copies were sold before May 15.

THE Forest and Stream Publishing Company will publish shortly "Our New Alaska, or, The Seward Purchase Vindicated," by Mr. Charles Hallock. It will be a crown octavo volume of about two hundred and fifty pages, illustrated from sketches made on the spot.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & Sons have just published "Men of the Reign," a biographical dictionary of eminent persons of British or of Colonial birth who have died during the reign of Queen Victoria. It is edited by Mr. Thomas Humphrey Ward.

D. LOTHROP & Co. will publish shortly in book form Mrs. Fremont's "Souvenirs of My Time," the interesting series of reminiscences which she has been contributing to Wide Awake. They have just ready two new issues of the Wide Awake Art Prints—"Up a Tree," by Miss L. B. Humphrey, representing two tiny sinsters, the tiniest proudly perched in the crotch of an old apple-tree; and "Little Great-Grandpapa's Singing Lesson," by Frank T. Merrill, a quaint study of colonial times—little great-grandpapa and his papa and mamma, by the spinet.

CHARLES H. KERR & Co., Chicago, propose to issue in October, provided enough advance orders are received, "Heart's Own," verses by Edwin R. Champlin, a volume of about seventy-five pages, comprising some fifty pieces, varying in length from two to forty lines, nearly all of which will then appear for the first time. The subjects will be Love, Duty, and Friendship; the form of verse, the sonnet, the couplet, and the quatrain. The book will be a 16mo, with wide margins, well printed and tastefully bound in cloth, and the price will be seventy-five cents.

THE Critic's "Lounger" is "informed by one who knows. that Thomas Hughes's Life of Peter Cooper will never be published. Not because it will never be written, for it has been written and the manuscript put into type. Indeed, fifty copies of the book were actually printed, but it was suppressed by the family of Mr. Cooper before it got to the public. They did not think it quite eulogistic enough, I believe. They wanted no criticism, and because there was a little in the book, though of the gentlest sort, it could not be printed." We sincerely hope this information is not altogether reliable.

H. V. & H. W. Poor have now ready for de-livery the first number of "Poor's Directory of Railway Directors," a work which hereafter will be published annually in March, and which contains a list of the officials of every railroad (inclusive of street railroads) in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Central America, South America, West Indies, Great Britain, and Ireland; a list of the directors of all railroad companies in North America; a list of officials of organizations auxiliary to the railway systemsuch as fast freight lines, steamboat companies, express companies, etc.; a list of officials of industrial establishments dependent on the railroad system-such as car works, rail mills, etc., and other information of use to those doing, or to those contemplating transacting business with every class associated with the railway interests of the country.

BOOKS WANTED.

Under the heading " Books Wanted," sub-Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address, in each issue. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, as well as repeated master, must be charged for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

THE

For 1886 [Seventeenth Year].

The Educational Catalogue has been found so valuable to the Trade, not only as a finding list, but for circulation among educational customers, for the purpose of soliciting orders and saving at the same time much troublesome correspondence, that its permanent continuance is recognized as a necessity.

The catalogue this year follows the alphabetical system pronounced by the experience of the trade the most satisfactory for practical use. It includes a price-list arranged alphabetically by author's or editor's name, and a detailed subject-index, referring from each specific subject to authors of books on that subject, so that the advantages of both a finding list for the trade and a class catalogue for the use of schools are combined. No other list in the market gives this practical combination.

The list has been entirely reset, to include the new books in their proper alphabetical order, and also to embody all the corrections of prices, omissions, or other errors in last year's catalogue.

Publishers' prices are in all cases given—retail, if retail (in first column); "net," if "net," (in second column); where a "mailing" percentage is specified by the publisher, the "mailing price" is given in the retail column marked with an asterisk. A carefully drawn explanation in the heading, to private buyers, adapts the catalogue to the use of the retail trade.

It should be understood that, of the regular retail-price publishers, only the retail price is given, and the net prices only of those publishers who make it a practice to mail net-price lists to schools—in fact, make their net prices their regular school-supply prices. This point is emphasized in order to meet the objections raised to the quotation of pet prices.

● It should be well considered that any attempt at withholding, from the educational public, what the publisher, through his agents, advertisements, lists, and circulars, takes special pains to make known, must be an unwise policy. It is not objectionable, but quite proper and legitimate, to charge the retail or mailing price for single copies of any book; but the Educational Catalogue is not generally given away to single-book customers. It is intended only for those who purchase for schools in quantities. Now any one putting himself on record by quoting fictitious prices, or prices other than those quoted by the publisher (which prices, it is now understood, are generally still subject to a trade discount), necessarily must drive his school trade into the hands of those who solicit their orders from a catalogue, the prices of which tally with that of the publishers.

The following paragraph from a previous year's Educational Catalogue further elucidates the reasons for our strict adherence to publishers' prices: "Plainly, if it wished to sustain its official character, it was bound to respect the desire of those who have a right to stand by their prices, and who, should their established prices be disregarded, could by their public protest soon discredit the Educational Catalogue as well as those who handled it for circulation. At a time when the public mind, from causes so often discussed and lamented in these columns, is fast losing faith in honest prices, so far as books are concerned, it is of the utmost importance that there be one official list which can be consulted with confidence by the public, as well as by the trade.

In making up special orders for the Educational Catalogue, booksellers should bear in mind that it possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS.

With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5; per 1000, $40.

A HITHERTO UNWRITTEN CHAPTER IN AMERICAN HISTORY.

The Rear-Guard of the Revolution.

By EDMUND KIRKE, author of "Among the Pines," etc. With portrait of John Sevier, and Map. 12mo, cloth. Price, $1.50.

Many readers will recall a volume published during the war entitled "Among the Pines," appearing under the pen name of Edmund Kirke. This book attained a remarkable success, and all who have read it will recall its spirited and graphic delineations of life in the South. "The Rear-Guard of the Revolution," from the same hand, is a narrative of the adventures of the pioneers that first crossed the Alleghanies and settled in what is now Tennessee, under the leadership of two remarkable men, James Robertson and John Sevier. Sevier is notably the hero of the narrative. His career was certainly remarkable, as much so as that of Daniel Boone. The title of the book is derived from the fact that a body of hardy volunteers, under the leadership of Sevier, crossed the mountains to uphold the patriotic cause, and by there is the book is controlled to the British army at King's Mountain.

"His book is one to be read with delight, simply for its vivid narrative and the exciting story it tells."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

NOTES IN SEASON.

HENRY HOLT & Co. will publish at once, in the Leisure Hour series, "Hannibal of New York," by the author of "A Latter Day Saint."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have added "Through One Administration" and "Louisiana" to their new and uniform library edition of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's works.

THE O. JUDD Co. announce that they have now ready a new edition of Gen. George W. Wingate's delightful book "Through the Yellowstone Park on Horseback," profusely illustrated by Forbes, Cary and Bennett; also, "Profits in Poultry—Useful and Ornamental Breeds," in which is given the combined experience of practical men in all the departments of poultry-raising, edited by Weld, Jacobs and Ferris, with over one hundred illustrations.

THE WORTHINGTON Co. will publish next week Swinburne's new book of prose, "Miscellanies," to which the Athenaum of June 19 devotes a notice of three pages. It contains among others an essay on Lamb and Wither.

Mr. Swinburne has always been a lover and student of Lamb, and he has here given the world his long-treasured collection of Lamb's marginalia upon a copy of Wither's poems, and his own comments upon them. They have nearly ready what promises to be a most delightful illustrated volume by Miss Mary A. Lathbury. It is entitled "From Meadow to Mistletoe," and is quite a novelty—the whole being reproduced in the most artistic manner, from the original drawings, by the photogravure process. The pictures are charmingly life-like and vividly brought out in colors, and illustrate the text in the liveliest manner. "Worthington's Annual," also under way, it is promised, will excel all its predecessors. It will be printed in a new patent tint process in colors. There will be nearly five hundred illustrations, and the text, by Mr. E. O. Chapman, will be all that can be desired.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

WE regret to learn that little hope is entertained of the recovery of Mr. Escott, the talented editor of the Fortnightly Keview.

MR. THURLOW WEED BARNES is writing an account of "The Settlement and Early History of Albany," which is his native place.

"An Irish History for English Readers," which has had a large sale in England, and was issued as the work of a man, was, it is discovered, written by Miss Mabel F. Robinson, author of "Mr. Butler's Ward."

MR. NOAH BROOKS, formerly a New York journalist, but now editor of the Newark (N. J.) Daily Advertiser, and the author of three popular books for boys, is preparing, says the Literary World, a "Life of Lincoln for Young People."

CAPTAIN R. F. COFFIN'S valuable series of articles on yachting will, when they have rum their course in Outing, be published in book form along with Cozzen's no less valuable illustrations. This will, it is said, be the first comprehensive history of American yachting ever published.

MR. GOLDWIN SMITH has written a brochure apropos of the present political crisis in England entitled "Dismemberment no Remedy," which will be published at once by Cassell & Co., whohave just issued "False Hopes; or, Fallacies Socialistic and Semi-Socialistic briefly answered," by the same author.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS announce that Mr. Robert Grant is the author of "Face to Face," which was published anonymously a few weeksago. Touching as it does the problem of capital and labor, the book came at an opportune moment, and its authorship has excited a good deal of curiosity, but until now no hint has been given as to the writer.

LEOPOLD VON RANKE has left, it is reported, the manuscript of the seventh volume of his "History of the World" ready for the press. He has also left an immense number of unpublished manuscripts, and there is reason to believe that some of these are very important and valuable. The manuscripts are to be looked over and prepared for publication by Dr. Wiedemann, who has been Ranke's intimate friend and fellowworker for nearly twenty years. He is to have the use of Ranke's splendid library, which contains 30,000 volumes, and which is insured for 120,000.

The story is that of a young girl, Jeannie Bartlett, who athrough a long and painful illness became, as it was supposed, crippled for life. From time to time stories came to her of the miraculous cures effected by prayer, and a hope grews up in her that even her case may not be beyond help. grews up in her that even her case may not be beyond neigh-A time is set for a season of united prayer in the sick room. The friends gather about her in the large arm-chair in which she has been placed. One eager, heartfelt prayer follows another, and at the close the invalid, full of faith, and endowed with a new and wonderful strength, rises to her feet, and walks with a firm step across the no temporary cure; her strength remains, and from that time forth she is whole and well. The author claims that the main incident of the story, as narrated, is true.

The author, a missionary located on the Skokomish Reservation in Washington Territory, tells of ten years of work among the Twanas, Clallams, and other Indians. He does not try to excite interest and enthusiasm by making an overdrawn picture. Those reading the book will see just what are the difficulties with which missionaries among the Indians have to contend, and just what results they reap after their arduous labors. Mr. Eells gives much interesting information relative to the native religion and superstitions of those for whom he was working. The manners of the Indians, their customs, languages, besetting sins, etc., receive full treatment.

Montague, C: Howard. The romance of the lilies. Bost., W. I. Harris & Co., 1886. 214 p. D. pap., 50 c.

One night, in an obscure village on the coast of Maine, the pure young wife of an absent sea-captain is startled by the appearance of an erring schoolmate, who, having deserted her home two years before, now returns repentant to find the doors of her father's house closed against her. She comes to the home of her old playmate to die. Through the shock of this sad event, the daughter of the good woman is born with the face of her unfortunate friend. On this curious assumption Mr. Montague has built up a charming story. The central character is the young girl, herself an embodiment of innocence and light-hearted joy, destined to play a strange part, unconsciously, by reason of her novel inheritance. By the author of "Two strokes of the bell."

Here most of Milly's romance is enacted, and a graphic picture offered of French character and French life. The scene afterwards changes to London, and Milly is made very unhappy for a time through her mother's desire to have her marry a man she does not love.

The work approaches the elementary facts and conceptions of geology from the inductive side. This, without question, is the natural and most pleasing method; and it is specially suited to students of immature years. The method introduces the learner first to the most familiar facts—pebbles and bowlders, the common kinds of minerals and sold the second statement of the second se facts—pebbles and bowlders, the common kinds of minerals and rocks, drift phenomena at large springs and wells, sediments and erosions, strata and fossils. All these things he is expected to observe in the field. It leads him then by degress over the inductive evidences of internal heat, metamorphism, disturbance, upheaval and subsidence, and thus to the broader generalizations of the science. In this part of the work occur features thought to be peculiarly practical and welcome—such as tables constructed like those well known in botany, for the determination of common minerals and rocks; particular descriptions and illustrations of the external and internal characters of genera of corals and shells common in the drift, showing the student how to manipulate, prepare and determine them, and ending with tabular synopses. The second part is a compact, systematic review of the subject, bringing into order the matter of the first part, and supplying further information in the several departments. Here the student into order the matter of the first part, and supplying further information in the several departments. Here the student will be glad to find tables of geological equivalents—American and European; superior geological maps, and others illustrating the growth of the continent, together with various other new expedients which teachers will appreciate. The treatment will be found original and fresh, the matter largely from American geology, with full use of all the lately reported materials, and illustrated full use of all the lately reported materials, and illustrated by beautiful cuts, mostly new to text-books.

CATHOLIC BOOKSELLING.

MR. LAWRENCE KEHOE, of the Catholic Publication Society Co., New York, has recently been interviewed by the London Register, which, in its issue for June 12, gives two columns of Mr. Kehoe's racy and characteristic talk about Catholic books and bookselling.

Among others, Mr. Kehoe mentions, as one of the great difficulties in the way of the sale of Catholic books, the enormous extent of our territory. If it were not for the priests, who are at present the only efficient Catholic book-agents in the country, the work of introducing Catholic books to the people would be less effective than it is.

About the circulation of Catholic books Mr. Kehoe states that it is very difficult to dispose of a thousand copies of the best book within a year after the date of publication. "This means," as Mr. Kehoe says, "starvation to author and publisher." This statement may astonish those who clamor for cheaper Catholic books, under the impression that publishers keep the price of them up merely for an additional profit. If a Catholic publisher could count on selling put it five thousand copies of a book, he could afford to sell the first thousand almost at cost, for he could count on recouping himself from the comparatively inexpensive later editions. As it is, he must depend on the first thousand—which soaks up a great deal of money, and it takes a whole year to get it back. Mr. Kehoe gives some interesting statistics:

"Barring some books of instruction and controversy, such as Challoner's 'Catholic Christian,' Father Bruno's 'Catholic Belief,' and Milner's 'End of Controversy' (a work which has, however, declined in popularity lately), Cardinal Wiseman's 'Fabiola' has had a greater run than almost any other book. 'Callista,' on the contrary, did not sell so well. But Cardinal Newman's 'Letter to the Duke of Norfolk' had a sale of five thousand copies. But the swiftest success achieved by Mr. Kehoe with any recent book—and this in spite of piracy—was with Cardinal Manning's 'Eternal Priesthood,' of which about three thousand copies were sold within six months after its publication. Of standard works such as these, by the foremost Catholic writers, there is a steady sale in the States. Gerald Keon's 'Dion and the Sybils' has had a good sale, and Burns and Oates' 'Missal for the Laity' is a great and general favorite. One of the freaks of bookselling — a business which seems to be as full of freaks and surprises as the veriest game of chance—is recorded by Mr. Kehoe as to the sale of Cardinal Newman's 'Apologia.' He has published that work for eighteen years, but in the last two years it has sold in larger numbers than in the whole of the previous sixteen. The fact that Cardinal Newman publishes some of his works with Protestant publishers in England tells very much against the sale of those works in America, in Mr. Kehoe's opinion. In the case of books published by Messrs. Burns & Oates, for in-stance, Mr. Kehoe becomes in the usual course the sole and direct agent for the States, and to these books he naturally gives his first thoughts and his best energy. The duty on all English books imported prevents the American publisher from treating his English brother as liberally as he would wish; but Mr. Kehoe thinks that in spite of this obstacle—which he is too devoted a citizen to condemn—there is a fairly good time in store in America for the English Catholic author, working friendlily hand in hand with the English Catholic publisher. He reiterates, however, that it is a great mistake for Catholic authors to have their books published by non-Catholic houses, which cannot reach the Catholic trade.

As a remedy for the limited circulation of Catholic books, Mr. Kehoe suggests the establishment of parish libraries.

PROTECTING SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS. IMPORTANT DECISION IN FAVOR OF BLAINE'S "TWENTY YEARS IN CONGRESS."

On July 3 Judge Hammond, of the United States Court, held at Memphis, Tenn., forwarded to be filed his opinion involving the copyright of Blaine's "Twenty Years in Congress. According to an Associated Press dispatch, "the case was argued before Judge Hammond, while holding court for Judge Sage, in Ohio, and is of highly important interest to the book trade in the United States, as it is said to go further than any previous decision in the protection of the author's property in books. Henry Bill Publishing Company sells Blaine's book only by subscription, and has done everything possible to keep it away from the general trade; but an agent to whom they sent copies for delivery sold the books to a dealer and pocketed the money. Some copies of this purchase were procured by the Ohio merchant without notice of the fraud, and Judge Hammond enjoins him from selling them, holding it "piracy" on the copyright to sell without the author's consent surreptitiously obtained copies of the genuine print as much as it is to sell unlawfully printed copies. The opinion holds that it is the duty of the proposed dealer, when he knows the book is sold only by subscription, to make inquiry as to the authority of any one offering to sell in any other mode, and a failure to make inquiry is equivalent to notice of any fraud.

The act of Congress is held to have conferred on the author a monopoly of sale, which is itself a property incident, and that one is entitled to be protected in the exclusive use of that which is exclusively his. The following quotation from the opinion will explain its importance and scope of argument:

"'I do not exalt literary property above other kinds, nor hedge it about with a divinity of right and remedy, but place it in the category of all the sort, only finding, that because of the delicate and peculiar characteristics it is especially liable to piraticric depredation like that attempted in this case, whereby the owner loses his fair profits, and Congress has provided as a convoy for its fleet of rights and remedies particularly adapted for defence against pirates, whether they sail under the black flag of the marauding printer or the ordinary flags of commerce, dis-played for purposes of spoliation.' "

NEW YORK DIRECTORIES.

THE centennial volume of the New York City Directory was issued by the Trow City Directory Co. on the 6th inst. The first edition of what is now the Trow City Directory was issued 100 years ago by David Franks, from No. 66 Broadway. It contained 846 names. In the preface to this year's volume these names are reprinted. The extreme northern limit from which names appear to have been then taken was Roosevelt and Cherry streets on the east side and Dey Street on the west. The little book had 82 pages. The Directory of 1886 contains 2166 pages and 313,992 names.

The interesting fact is made known that if the same ratio of names printed to the actual population-namely, one name to every five persons, as is the case now, was also the case then, the population at that time was 4330, while now it is 1,569,960. In 1786 the Directory contained 77 names beginning with M; there are now 34,048. The letter S was then first in number of names, with 90; now it is second, with 33,652. The letter B had 76; now it has 29,721. The letter X had none; now it has 10. The letter Z had 1; now it has 1453. The letter Q also had 1; now it has 919.

The preface to the first Directory is given in this year's volume, and the publisher spells the name of the greatest city thoroughfare in America with a hyphen, thus: Broad-way.

"The volume has been continued from the originator to the present publishers," says the New York Times, "in the following order: From 1786 to 1789 by David Franks, from 1790 to 1816 by David Longworth, from 1817 to 1841 by Thomas Longworth, from 1842 to 1849 by John Doggett, Jr., 1850 and 1851 by Charles R. Rode, from 1852 to 1870 by John F. Trow, from 1871 to 1886 by the Trow City Directory Company. The number of men employed by Mr. Franks in gathering names and compiling his Directory is unknown, but the present publishers employed this year 160 canvassers and compilers. Owing to the great growth of the city north of East and West Fifty-ninth streets, the labor of compiling has been very greatly increased; but the entire work of preparing the Directory was done in 52 days."

"GYP" BOOKS.

From the Philadelphia Times.

THE quarrel in the trade about the sale of Grant's Memoirs will be a happy thing if it have the effect of shaking up the subscription business and putting it on a sounder basis. There is no inherent objection to the sale of a book by subscription only." The bookseller waits for the purchaser to come to him; the agent or canvasser takes the book to the customer, and no doubt introduces some sort of literature to many a house that would otherwise be bookless. He must be paid for his labor, and the book is thus sold by agents at the door at a higher price than the bookseller need charge in the shop. To this there could be no objection, if the books thus sold were always honest books.

That many very excellent and well-made books are sold by subscription is a familiar fact. In the case of costly serial publications this is often the only possible plan. But it is also a familiar fact that the system encourages a kind of trade that is no better than that of the gyp. In order to allow a margin of profit for the several agents and sub-agents, it is necessary to charge the highest possible price for the cheapest possible work, and at the same time to make the book big and showy in order to impose upon those ignorant persons whom it is the special purpose of the book agent to beguile. The result is that the rural districts are flooded with gyp books that are a disgrace to the trade, and that the experienced book-buyer looks with distrust upon a "subscription edition" even of a book that he would be glad to buy.

There is really no reason why books intended to be sold by agents should not be honestly made, tastefully printed and bound and sold at reasonable rates. If this were done there would be no wrong in charging the purchasers an extra price for bringing the book to them and no harm could be done any one in the sale of the same book in the shops with the agent's profit thrown off. There is still a wide and legitimate field for the book agent in this country, but the book gyp, with the other gyps, must go.

THE COUNT OF PARIS' "HISTORY OF THE CIVIL WAR."

THE recent Expulsion Act passed by the French legislature has compelled, among others, the Comte de Paris to retire to England. Messrs. Porter & Coates, who are his publishers and correspondents in this country, and who have been in correspondence with him relative to the conclusion of his great work, "The History of the Civil War in America," have been quite anxious as to the completion of the work, of which about half of the fourth and last volume is now ready for publication. The following letter was received last week from the Count:

CHATEAU D'EU, Seine Inferieure, 6, 8, '86.

To Porter to Coates, Philadelphia.

Gentlemen: The present events in France make my prospects of residence here so uneertain that I must be prepared to live for a time without a home. If I am obliged to leave this place for a time I shall be deprived of the use of my library. . In consequence of this I be you not to send me any more books concerning the civil war uneer should an even event than interest, such not to send me any more books concerning the civil war on-less some should appear of a very exceptional interest, such as the "Memoirs of General Grant."

The political events leave me, unfortunately, little time to devote to my library. Believe me, yours very truly, PHILIPPE, COMTE DE PARIS.

MY FRIEND, THE CATALOGUE. From Book-Lore, May, 1886.

Among books which are no books Charles Lamb included catalogues, and the stigma which some folk perceive in this dictum of that genial litterateur is still thought to belong to all catalogues. Be it so, then. There are many good things besides books, and certainly library catalogues are not among the least of them. The catalogue is the jackal to the book-lion. Instances are known of his providing him with food on which he has grown to bulk and importance. Whether he provide food or not, he almost always introduces visitors to the king of the literary forest. If the book may not grow without meat, certainly he cannot live, in the best sense, without appreciative visitors. The Catalogue, then, is an important creature.

Catalogue, then, is an important creature.

Ay; but you say, "He is dull and uninteresting as a suddenly rich coalfactor, though he too is important." Let us see. That depends upon yourself. Have you the knack of drawing out of him his wonderful treasures of information, of worming yourself into his state secrets, of securing his guidance into the most beautiful paradises of fairyland? There are those who have and these do not find him dull.

Only study his ways a little, and you will be astonished at finding what an excellent fellow he is. Ah, I hear you now! You are saying to yourself: "That fellow not dull! That creature with the blurred face excellent! I don't know where you see it!" But study his features. You will be repaid for the trouble, which after all is no trouble. There is order there. Looking through the glasses of ignorance you have not perceived it; but it is true, nevertheless, that every feature is well formed, regular, and, if not beautiful, at least pleasing. He has, too, a wonderful faculty for raising a smile on the face of any friend of his. So the sooner you enroll yourself as his friend the better for you. The Catalogue is a most catholic person, and his catholicity comes out in his choice of friends and his tastes. "Choice," did I say? Nay; for he has no choice—all is fish that comes to his net. Among his friends are numbered the most learned savant and the village schoolboy, Chinese mandarin and Virginian negro, emperor and nihilist, pope and scripture-reader. At any of his favorite haunts you may introduce yourself to him sans cere-mony. You will be welcome as the daylight, and he will extend the same courtesy to you as to the Queen.

His simplicity, you will find, is perfectly captivating. Learned as he is, he still retains an immense veneration for the alphabet. This peculiarity is the secret of his marvellous memory. for every fact or item of knowledge is connected in his mind with a certain position in the alphabet. Ask him about anything, and he will answer with great brevity. He has too many things to mind to say much about each, but he will generally tell you where you may learn more. Thus a friend of mine, wishing to know something about meteorology, ascertained from this courteous Catalogue the names of a large number of recent books specially dealing with the subject. This he had expected; but the Catalogue told him much more, for he put him on the track of information in such unlookedfor publications as Chambers's "Book of Days;" Conferences held in connection with the Special Loan Collection, South Kensington; Goethe's "Naturwissenschaftliche Correspondenz," and Lloyd's "Miscellaneous Papers." Besides this, the Catalogue was good enough to suggest that, if my friend wished, he would supply information on various subdivisions of the subject and on allied subjects, such as atmospere, physiography, storms, weather, winds, the barometer, and the thermometer. Perhaps now it is apparent why a consultation with the Catalogue is provocative of good-humor.

His respect for dates almost equals his veneration for Alpha Beta. Do you want to know when an obscure writer published his treatise on the Nativity, or which was the earliest of the many books written by the Rev. So-and-so? He will do his best to aid you, and his best is often the best you can get.

Of editions and editors of the great ancient and modern classics he has a long inventory, and his notes and cursory remarks upon many of these are not only curious and interesting, but often important.

You wish to trace the history of a periodical that has several times changed its name in consequence of repeated marriages with other periodicals? Ask the Catalogue. Ten to one he knows all about it, and will readily tell you what you want to know.

The Catalogue has his prejudices—who has not? He has a mortal aversion to calling things by wrong names. "Knickerbocker" publishes a "History of New York;" "Boz" issues some "Sketches" from the press; "H. H." writes some "Poems," and gives them to the world. "Ah, ah!" says he; "you, Knickerbocker, Boz, H. H., you don't deceive me! I will hold you up to public notice, you pseudonymous rascals!" And so Washington Irving, Charles Dickens, and Helen Hunt Jackson are made known as the authors of their respective works.

Protean changes of title are frequently exposed by this relentless foe to deception. In telling of one title, he will notify the fact that it is a re-issue or an adaptation of such a book with another title. Thus one learns from him that a book in Arabic entitled "The Pearl of the Seas" is simply an adaptation of the English Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe;" and that "Pen Pictures of Modern Authors" is a reprint on large paper of Vol. II. of "The Literary Life," with illustrations added.

Many books are published with misleading titles, and many more with non-descriptive titles. The class of such the catalogue is anxious to indicate. So people are warned that "Proserpina" is not a work on mythology, nor a poem, but a book on botany; and that The American Register is a journal devoted to the interests of the Democratic party.

It is to be hoped that henceforth no reader of this plea for my friend the Catalogue will scorn him or say hard things about him, and that many who have not yet known him will hasten to make his acquaintance.

COMMUNICATIONS.

"TOLER KING'S" IDENTITY.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 9, 1886.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: Mrs. Emily Fox, the late Mrs. Arthur Noves, wrote "Rose O'Connor' and "Off the Rocks" under the name of "Toler King."

The last named was published by us, as was also the later editions of "Rose O'Connor."

Toler King, Mrs. Emily Fox, and Mrs. Arthur

Noyes were one and the same.

HAND-MADE PAPER.

From the British and Colonial Printer and Stationer.

As to the differences between machine-made and hand-made papers, they are most important, and give to each some essential qualities not possessed by the others.

The Fourdrinier machine may be relied on to give an evenly-made sheet, with a freedom from hairs and irregularities of all kinds; also a small proportion of retree, quite unapproachable by hand making. Yet it can never produce a sheet so well felted, so perfect in structure, so tough and strong as can the human hand. The reason is apparent to any one possessing the smallest knowledge of paper making.

By hand the pulp in its liquid state is taken on a rectangular mould and shaken, and "shut" or felted together by a motion from all four sides. It is then couched and pressed by direct vertical pressure, and never at any stage of the process subjected to any severe strain. By machine the pulp receives a shake and is felted only one way, usually across the machine—this is done while travelling; and this, and the rolling pressure of the dandy, must of necessity tend to dispose the fibres all or mainly in one direction. In addition to this, the paper being made in a continuous web, drawn through the machine, is of necessity strained; and, being compacted and dried under tension, is never able to shrink upon itself.

In consequence it will be found that though machine paper, if carefully and slowly made of the best materials, may (in one direction across the sheet) approach in strength to hand-made, it will in the other direction be greatly inferior. The web is, in fact, unequal in structure, and cannot bear a strain or rough usage in any degree equal to the same pulp properly made in a hand-made sheet.

If a practical illustration be desired of the difference between the two makes, take a carefully cut perfect square of each, soak them in water till quite soft and pulpy, then drain off the water and lay the squares out to dry. When thoroughly dry, measure them; and it will be found that while the hand-made retains its square form, the machine-made, being now free to shrink in the direction in which while on the machine it was kept in tension, is appreciably shorter in that direction.

Unless an entirely new form of machine is invented, imitating in the formation of the sheet the method of the hand-maker, it is safe to predict that for account books, drawings, loans, bank notes and all purposes for which strength and durability are necessities, hand-made will continue to enjoy the supremacy, and in spite of its necessary and probably incurable defects will command the highest price.

OBITUARY.

PAUL H. HAYNE, the Southern poet, died at his home, Copse Hill, near Grovetown, Ga., on the 6th inst. He was born January 31, 1830, at Charleston, S. C., and was educated at the College of Charleston, from which he graduated with high honors in 1850. He then studied law and was admitted to the bar; but, like many another, the dry, unromantic profession was but little to his taste, and finding himself in possession of an ample fortune, he was able to devote his entire time to his favorite occupation. In 1852, we learn from the New York Times, "he became the editor of the Southern Literary Gazette, a weekly paper published in Charleston. After this paper failed he began writing sketches for the Southern Literary Messenger, and also contributed to the daily papers of Charleston. In 1857 he became editor of Russell's Magazine, which had been started in that city. Before taking charge of this magazine he published, through Ticknor & Fields, his first volume of poems. In 1857 his second volume of poems appeared, and had an extensive sale. Two years later he published his third volume.

"At the breaking out of the war he cast in his lot with his fellow-citizens of the South. His delicate constitution, however, could not endure the hardships of army life, and he was compell d to retire from active service. At this time he was almost in destitute circumstances. In 1865 he became an editor of the Constitutionalist, of Augusta, Ga., but his health failing, he retired and settled at Copse Hill, about sixteen miles from Augusta, and made it his home.

During the last twelve or thirteen years of his life he did a great deal of literary work for different journals. He wrote a memoir of William Gilmore Simms, and in 1873 he published a collection of Henry Timrod's poems, with a sketch of the poet's life. In 1882 a complete edition of his works was published by D. Lothron & Co.

"Mr. Hayne married Mary Middleton Michel on May 20, 1852, immediately after being admitted to the bar. She was the granddaughter of General de Michel, of the Imperial Army of

BUSINESS NOTES.

LAMAR, Mo.—Peters & Foster, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

LIMA, O.—Trevor & Robinson, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

LINCOLN, NEB.—F. A. Falkenberg, book-seller, has sold out his retail business.

New York City.—We learn from the Critic that the copartnership of Taintor Bros., Merrill & Co., educational publishers, expired by limitation on July 1. Messrs Charles N. and J. L. Taintor and Mr. E. L. Gates succeed the old firm, under the title of Taintor Bros. & Co. Mr. Charles E. Merrill, the retiring partner, sailed for Europe on the "Britannic" on Thursday last. He has purchased the interest of the late firm in the Critic, and as president of the Critic Co. will, on his return, devote his energies for some time to the growing interests of this journal. J. L. and J. B. Gilder continue in editorial charge of the paper, and retain their interest in its ownership.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—We are informed by a unique circular printed in "japanesque" style that Jos. & H. C. McKnight have succeeded S. A. Clarke. The new firm will do business as H. C. McKnight & Bro. at the old stand, 443 Wood Street. They have our best wishes.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The International Book and News Co. (E. P. Gray, manager) has secured the commodious, well-lighted, central and convenient store No. 501 N. 4th Street., N. W. corner of St. Charles Street, and have fitted it up in first class style.

STURGIS, MICH.—W. Harrison, bookseller, has sold out.

WHITEWATER, WIS.—Taylor & Caldwell, booksellers, have sold out,

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE Critic for July 3 contains an interesting article on Donald G. Mitchell (Ik Marvel) and his farm at Edgewood.

MRS. LAMB, editor of the Magazine of American History, has written an entertaining article for the July number on Lafayette Place, New York City, which she entitles "A Neglected Corner of the Metropolis."

Hubbard Bros., Philadelphia, are to publish Major Ben: Perley Poore's "Reminiscences, Social, Anecdotal, Political—of sixty years—in the National Metropolis." It will be in two volumes, and sold by subscription.

THE Appleton and Funk & Wagnalls "nines" played a game of base-ball on the 3d inst. at Prospect Park, Brooklyn, which resulted in the victory of the Funk & Wagnalls nine. The score stood: Appleton, 12; Funk & Wagnalls, 14. Seven innings were played.

THE Tower Manufacturing Co., 306 Broadway, N. Y., now controls the manufacture of a series of "Geographical Tablets of the United States." Each of these tablets has on the cover a good map of some State or section of the country. They are furnished in 40 and 80 sheets, commercial size, and retail for 5 and 10 cents.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. are to be the publishers of "Harvard University in the War of 1861—1865: a Record of Services rendered in the Army and Navy of the United States by the Graduates and Students of Harvard College and the professional Schools," by Francis H. Brown, M.D.

IT seems, says the Bookbuyer, "that the question 'The Lady or the Tiger?' has been solved. Mr. Stockton, when at Vassar College a few weeks ago, put the matter before the senior class. The opinion was almost unanimous in favor of the tiger, only three votes being recorded for the lady. With such weight of authority the question of 'The Lady or the Tiger?' Mr. Stockton thinks should be considered as settled."

WE regret to learn that an unfortunate accident happened to E. L. Jansen, formerly of Jansen, McClurg & Co. Mr. Jansen went to the Beaurivage flats to call on a friend. He started for the elevator, and seeing the door open he stepped in and fell to the ground, sixteen feet below. Some time afterward the janitor picked him up senseless and carried him to his friend's rooms, where doctors were hastily summoned and restoratives given. The consultation announced the serious character of the accident, but strong hopes for his recovery are entertained.

The work upon the second volume of the great "Cyclopedia of Painters and Paintings," edited by Mr. J. D. Champlin, Jr., is going on very rapidly, and the book will be ready for delivery in the autumn. In the matter of illustrations the volume is especially rich. Among its full-page plates are reproductions of paintings of Meissonier, Sir Frederick Leighton, J. P. Laurens, Puvis de Chavannes, Millais, Jules Breton, Rossetti, and others; while the fine outline illustrations will reach one hundred or more, as in volume one. The portraits are even more numerous than in that volume, numbering more than two hundred; while the monograms and signatures reproduced are nearly as many.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, London, will issue in October next Mr. George Augustus Sala's Autobiography.

HURST & BLACKETT, London, will issue next month a new novel, entitled "The Courting of Mary Smith." by Mr. F. W. Robinson, the author of "Grandmother's Money."

ELEANOR MARX AVELING has translated into English Lissagary's "Histoire de la Commune." For this work the Socialists make claim that it is the only authentic account of the Commune.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & Co., London, will publish early in September a life of Danton, from the Socialist point of view, by Laurence Grouland, author of "The Co-operative Commonwealth."

EDWARD CURTICE, London, has published a useful little book by Robert Allbut, entitled "London Rambles en Zigzag with Charles Dickens." Charles Dickens was essentially a Londoner, and these references from all parts of his writings to London localities will be interesting to English and American readers alike.

THE office of the India-rubber, Gutta-percha and Electrical Trades Journal, 16 Finsbury Street, London, E. C., has published on a broad-side an interesting "Statistical Statement from the Official Returns of the India-rubber, Caoutchouc, and Gutta-percha Trade of the United Kingdom of Great Britain during the last decade." It gives the figures of the imports and exports and the value declared by the trade to the customs per cwt. in shillings. The work of compiling the chart was done by R. Rhens.

The success of Sir Richard Burton's privately printed version of "The Thousand Nights and a Night," says the Academy, "has been so great that he has consented to allow the issue to the general public of a 'chastened' edition. The modifications that the necessity of the case demand will be confined to the removal of certain 'archaic crudities' of the original; but the vigorous and simple language of the translation will otherwise be preserved throughout. Lady Burton has already made arrangements with a competent literato for the execution of this task."

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

JULY.—Medical library of the late Dr. Louis Elsberg.— Leavitt.

Bangs & Co., 739-741 Broadway, New York City.
Davie (W. O.) & Co., 16 E. 4th St., Cincinnati, O.
Leavitt (G. A.) & Co., 787-780 Broadway, New York.
Libbie (C. F.) & Co., 27 Franklin St., Boston, Mass.
Thomas (M.) & Sons, 137-141 S. 4th St. — 1519-21 Chestnut St., Phila.

It is understood that the library of a bibliopegist, or rather bibliognost, which Geo. A. Leavitt & Co. have announced somewhat extensively, is really that of General Rush C. Hawkins, of "Hawkins' Zouaves" fame. We believe that this remarkable collection of books, which is particularly strong in vellum, mediæval manuscripts and black letters, as well as the Elizabethan drama and the ratest Americana, is computed to be worth some $45,000 to $50,000. General Hawkins, himself a bibliographer of repute, and the author of 'Titles of the First Books from the Earliest Presses in Europe,' has left the cataloguing of his library absolutely to Mr. Charles Sotheran.—Bookmart,

For 1886 (Fourteenth Year).

A Large 8vo, over 2500 pages. (Ready in September.)

The improvements of recent years in the Trade-List Annual have given such general satisfaction that there will be no change in the forthcoming volume (fourteenth year) as to the essential features, which are:

- 1. The latest CATALOGUES OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS AND MANUFACTURERS, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm names.
- 2. A complete reprint of the "Publishers' Weekly" full title RECORD OF BOOKS published (inclusive of all the descriptive notes) from July 4, 1885, to June 26, 1886. In order to facilitate reserve, it will be accompanied by a full INDEX, by which every book on record can be found, whether it is looked for under author, title, or subject.
- The "EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE" for 1886, which is used by the entire trade and educational interests as the most representative reference-list of School-books.

The above Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase and sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction last year, we have decided to apply it to all copies of the "Annual" this year. The price of the book before publication will be ONE DOLLAR AND A HALF NET, including the index. Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut. The price of the book will be raised to Two Dollars net after day of publication.

Delayed or unpaid subscriptions are not entitled to the subscription price ($1.50).

Remittances should be made by check, express or Post-Office money-order, or registered letter, as we cannot be responsible for any losses. Receipt for remittance will be sent by return mail.

Unless special shipping directions are received, copies ready for delivery will be dispatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for 70 cents per copy extra.

AMERICAN EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE

For 1886 [Seventeenth Year].

The Educational Catalogue has been found so valuable to the Trade, not only as a finding list, but for circulation among educational customers, for the purpose of soliciting orders and saving at the same time much troublesome correspondence, that its permanent continuance is recognized as a necessity.

The catalogue this year follows the alphabetical system pronounced by the experience of the trade the most satisfactory for practical use. It includes a price-list arranged alphabetically by author's or editor's name, and a detailed subject-index, referring from each specific subject to authors of books on that subject, so that the advantages of both a finding list for the trade and a class catalogue for the use of schools are combined. No other list in the market gives this practical combination.

The list has been entirely reset, to include the new books in their proper alphabetical order, and also to embody all the corrections of prices, omissions, or other errors in last year's catalogue.

Publishers' prices are in all cases given—retail, if retail (in first column); "net," if "net" (in second column); where a "mailing" percentage is specified by the publisher, the "mailing price" is given in the retail column marked with an asterisk. A carefully drawn explanation in the heading, to private buyers, adapts the catalogue to the use of the retail trade.

It should be understood that, of the regular retail-price publishers, only the retail price is given, and the net prices only of those publishers who make it a practice to mail net-price lists to schools—in fact, make their net prices their regular school-supply prices. This point is emphasized in order to meet the objections raised to the quotation of set prices.

■ It should be well considered that any attempt at withholding, from the educational public, what the publisher, through his agents, advertisements, lists, and circulars, takes special pains to make known, must be an univise policy. It is not objectionable, but quite proper and legitimate, to charge the retail or mailing price for single copies of any book; but the Educational Catalogue is not generally given away to single-book customers. It is intended only for those who purchase for schools in quantities. Now any one putting himself on record by quoting fictitious prices, or prices other than those quoted by the publisher (which prices, it is now understood, are generally still subject to a trade discount), necessarily must drive his school trade into the hands of those who solicit their orders from a catalogue, the prices of which usly with that of the publishers.

The following paragraph from a previous year's Educational Catalogue further elucidates the reasons for our strict adherence to publishers' prices: "Plainly, if it wished to sustain its official character, it was bound to respect the desire of those who have a right to stand by their prices, and who, should their established prices be disregarded, could by their public protest soon discredit the Educational Catalogue as well as these who handled it for circulation. At a time what the public mind, from causes so often discussed and lamented in these columns, is fast losing faith in honest prices, so is as books are concerned, it is of the utmost importance that there be one official list which can be consulted with confidence by the public, as well as by the trade.

In making up special orders for the Educational Catalogue, booksellers should bear in mind that it possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS.

With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5; per 1000, $40.

THE BABY'S JOURNAL

Designed and compiled by S. ALICE BRAY. Oblong. Fully Illustrated in Gold and Colors. Price, $1.50.

"A happy conceit, and gotten up in excellent taste. It will especially please young mothers and their children as soon as their minds unfold enough to enjoy a peep at themselves as here pictured. The 'Journal' consists of an ornamental page for the inscription of the baby's name and date of birth, blank pages for the record of gifts and other interesting events, nursery rhymes and pictures. The cunning pictures, however, speak louder than the printed verses—'Weighing the Baby,' 'Morning Bath,' 'Lullaby,' 'Oft in the Stilly Night,' Learning to Walk,' 'Old Shoes'—all representing humorous and engaging incidents that enter into the history of every child."—Intelligencer.

"An exquisitely beautiful book. The mechanical work is perfect."—Observer.

"The great characteristic of modern life is worry."

Five Essays. By the Author of "The Recreations of a Country Parson," etc. 16mo, fancy paper, 40 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

"The characteristic of modern life to which the sympathetic essayist directs his attention is 'Worry.' With us it almost rises to the dig-nity of a national vice, and the preacher who can teach us how to overcome the habit may be sure of an interested audience. Mr. Boyd treats the subject with his customary sense and suavity, and shows the inquiring Christian how to use trial as a moral discipline and convert weakness into an element of religious strength. -N. Y. Tribune.

"A discussion in five essays on worry and worrying. They are short but wholesome, full of that suggestiveness with which the conversation of wise men abounds, with a delicate appreciation of human nature and an earnest desire to be helpful. It is a charming and serviceable book."-Congregationalist.

"A pleasant little book of thoughtful reading."—Mail.
"A great deal of sober common sense may be found in this little book. Almost every line has something in it for any who indulge in this special weakness, and who does not in this age and generation?"—Journal.

KIMBALL'S OLMSTED'S COLLEGE PHILOSOPHY.

NEW EDITION, WITH INDEX.

An Introduction to Natural Philosophy. Designed as a Text-Book for Students in College. By DENISON OLMSTED, LL.D., Professor of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy in Yale College, and E. S. Snell, LL.D., Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in Amherst College. Third Revised Edition. By RODNEY G. KIMBALL, A.M., Professor of Applied Mathematics in Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. 8vo, pp. xiii.-510. Extra cloth.

This revision of OLMSTED'S NATURAL PHILOSOPHY has been made in accordance with the plan of the former editions, the object being to produce a text-book in physics adapted to the requirements of a college course; it is believed that as now presented it includes all that is necessary in this department of a liberal education.

The work has been revised throughout, and contains over one hundred pages of new matter, and one hundred and thirty-two new engravings. The complete Index recently appended greatly increases its value, both as a text-book and as a work of reference. Notwithstanding its enlarged size, the price of the work has not been advanced.

Copies for examination mailed to Professors upon receipt of Two Dollars.

SNELL'S OLMSTED'S COLLEGE ASTRONOMY.

An Introduction to Astronomy. Designed as a Text-Book for the Use of Students in College. By DENISON OLMSTED, LL.D., Yale College, and E. S. SNELL, LL.D., Amherst College, Third Edition, carefully Revised, with Additions. 8vo, pages vi.-234, with numerous-Illustrations and Diagrams Price, $2.00.

This edition contains the latest emendations of Prof. Snell, and also various numerical corrections in accordance with the best authorities, for which the publishers are indebted to Prof. Selden J. Coffin, Lasayette College. Prof. Coffin has also added (to Art. 264) Appendix M, and has enlarged and thoroughly revised Tables II., IV. and V.

THREE GREAT DICTIONARIES.

"Surpasses all its predecessors."-N. Y. Tribune.

STORMONTH'S ENGLISH DICTIONARY.

A Dictionary of the English Language. Pronouncing, Etymological, and Explanatory, embracing Scientific and other Terms, Numerous Familiar Terms, and a Copious Selection of Old English Words. By the Rev. James Stormonth. The Pronunciation carefully revised by the Rev. P. H. Phelp, M.A. pp. xiv., 1234. Imperial 8vo, cloth, $6.00; half roan, $7.00; full sheep, $7.50.

"A work which is certainly without a rival among dictionaries of our language. It is equally well adapted to the uses of the man of business, who demands compactness and ease of reference, and to those of the most exigent scholar."-

N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It should be in every library, public and private, and at the hand of every writer and reader. It is not the unauthorized work of a single individual, but the result of conference, and has had the careful supervision of a number of eminent scholars."—Observer, N. Y.

"Stands without a rival."-London Times.

LIDDELL & SCOTT'S GREEK-ENGLISH LEXICON.

NEW EDITION.

eek-English Lexicon. Compiled by Henry George Liddell, D.D., Dean of Christ Church, and Robert Scott, D.D., Master of Balliol College, with the Co-operation of Professor Drisler, of Columbia College, New York. Seventh Edition, Revised and Augmented. pp. xvi., 1776. 4to, sheep, $10.00; abridged edition, small 4to, ball A Greek-English Lexicon. leather, $2.00.

"Facile princeps among Greek dictionaries."—Academy, London.
"It is truly a magnificent work, both in its exterior form and in its contents. It would be difficult to say wherein it falls short of the ideal of a Greek-English Lexicon. I shall use it constantly myself, and shall take great pleasure in recommending it to my classes."—Professor W. S. Tyler, Amherst College.
"Very decidedly the best Greek Lexicon for constant service now in the world."—Nation, N. Y.

"It is the ripest fruit of modern scholarship."-Observer, N. Y.

HARPER'S LATIN DICTIONARY.

A Latin Dictionary founded on the translation of "Freund's Latin-German Lexicon." Edited by E. A. Andrews, LLD. Revised, enlarged, and in a great part rewritten by Charlton T. Lewis, Ph.D., and Charles Short, LLD., Professor of Latin in Columbia College, New York. pp. xiv., 2020. Royal 8vo, sheep, $6.50; full Russia, $10.00.

"It forms a more complete guide to the entire literature than any previous work. In regard to the Latin orthography, the present Dictionary, moreover, claims the attention of students as the only work which embodies the results of recent investigations by philologists like Ritschel, Corssea, Brambach, and others. The present state of the science of etymology is more completely represented in this work than in any previous Dictionary."—N. V. Tribans.

"The Lexicon must supersede all its rivals for common use. It contains many new words. It removes many errors. Orthography, etymology, and accidence have been corrected by the best and latest authorities. Many words are rightly explained which have long misled lexicographers."—J. E. B. Mayor, "Professor of Latin at Cambridge University, England, in 'Notes and Queries,' London."

[PUBLISHERS' PRICES.]

NOTICE.—In this Catalogue only prices made by publishers themselves are given—retail, if retail, in first column; "net" (wholesale), if "net," in second column; where a "mailing" percentage is specified by the publisher, the "mailing price" is given in the retail column marked with an asterisk (), in addition to the wholesale price. When price-columns are left blank, the publisher fail d, on application, to furnish price. A double asterisk () in price-columns designates books forthcoming. New books, issued since the publication of the Catalogue of 1885, are designated by a single asterisk () before title.

In comparing prices or ordering at retail, private buyers should bear in mina that a percentage must be added to prices quoted at wholesale, to cover freight, handling, delivering, etc. Discounts on quantities vary on different lines, according to the kind of prices adopted by the respective publishers.

For subject classification (and for collective references to classic authors entered here under separate editors), see the second part of the Catalogue, following this main alphabet.

HENRY HOLT & CO.'S

IMPORTANT NEW TEXT-BOOKS.

CLARK'S PRACTICAL RHETORIC.

A Practical Rhetoric, English Composition and Revision. By J. Scott Clark, Instructor in Syracuse University. 12mo, $1.50.

Its main source of inspiration was an attempt to work Herbert Spencer's "Philosophy of Style" in the classroom, the result of which was the accumulation of a body of rules which adapt the principles of that incomparable treatise to acctual work with untrained students. The author attempts no impossibilities. He believes that rhetorical training must be largely negative; that it cannot teach "invention," but can develop the ability to arrange and revise. The exercises, which are a leading feature, are treated somewhat after the manner of Abbott's "How to Write Clearly." They deal mot with errors that have been committed by authors of reputation, but rather with those that are peculiarly apt to be committed by students in school and college.

JOHNSTON'S HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

History of the United States for Schools. With an Introductory History of the Discovery and English Colonization of North America. By Alexander Johnston, Professor in Princeton College. 12mo, 473 pp., $1.25.

A history of the United States, and not principally a history of the colonies from which the United States sprang.

It is not a story-book, or a picture-book. The author has written in the conviction that what the mass of pupils need is to learn from the history of the past how best to perform the simple and homely duties of good citizenship. Mr. John Fiske says of it: "Incomparably the best short history of the United States with which I am acquainted." The Nation calls it "The best school history which has yet been presented to the public."

PACKARD'S ZOOLOGY-ELEMENTARY COURSE.

First Lessons in Zoölogy. By A. S. PACKARD, Professor in Brown University. 12mo (American Science Series), 290 pp., $1.00.

In method this book differs considerably from the large books in the series. Since it is meant for young beginners, it describes but few types, mostly those of the higher orders, and discusses their relations to one another and to their surroundings. The aim, however, is the same with that of the others—namely, to make clear the general principles of the science, rather than to fill the pupil's mind with a mass of what may appear to him unrelated facts.

REMSEN'S CHEMISTRY-BRIEFER COURSE.

An Introduction to the Study of Chemistry. By IRA REMSEN, Professor in the Johns Hopkins University. 12mo (American Science Series), 389 pp., $1.40.

The one comprehensive truth which the author aims to make clear to the student is the essential nature of chemical action. With this in view, he devotes the first 280 pages of a carefully selected and arranged series of simple experiments, employing only the four common elements—Oxygen, Hydrogen, Nitrogen, and Carbon. In these experiments are gradually developed the main principles of the subject. His method is purely inductive; and, wherever experience has ahown it to be practicable, the truths are drawn out by pointed questions, rather than fully stated. Next, when the student is in a position to appreciate it, and not at the start, as is usual in elementary treatise, comes a simple account of the theory of the science. The last 150 pages of the book are given to a survey, fully illustrated by experiments, of the leading families of compounds. leading families of compounds.

WHITNEY'S FRENCH CRAMMAR.

A Practical French Grammar. By WILLIAM D. WHITNEY, Professor in Yale College. (Shortly.)

A practical class-book for academies, high-schools, and colleges. Part first opens with a full account of the pronunciation of the language. In the next forty-two lessons the author unfolds those important facts of the grammar which the student must master as a foundation. The regular verbs are gradually introduced and fully explained, then the more common of the irregular verbs are taken up, and their conjugation exhibited by a new method of arrangement. The exercises carefully avoid the error of bringing in too many new words at a time, but give repeated practice in a carefully-selected vocabulary of common terms. Part second is a more systematic presentation of the facts of French usage, in the order usual in scientific treatises on grammar. Its matter is meant to supplement and extend that of part first. The sentences for translating in this part are all quotations from French authors.

GOODELL'S THE GREEK IN ENGLISH.

First Lessons in Greek, with special reference to the etymology of English words of Greek origin. By Thomas D. Goodell, Instructor in the Hartford (Ct.) High School. (Shortly.) Origin. By IHOMAS D. GOODELL, Instructor in the Hartlord (Ct.) High School. (Shortly.)

The Greek element of English in conversation, and especially in literature, carries many of the key-words to the thought, and he to whom these key-words are not alive with meaning is at a great disadvantige; and yet mere dictionaries or etymological handbooks alone cannot give what is wanted. The words in their Greek form, and with some fragment of their Greek associations, must become somewhat familiar before one can be sensible of that grasp of their English derivatives which will enable one to use those derivatives correctly and fearlessly. The Greek vocabulary surviving in English can be presented in a sort of Greek primer, with its relations to English pointed out; and this is just what this book aims to do. It is not intended to lessen the number of those who shall enter on a full course of study in the Greek language, but it is rather hoped that it may increase that number.

SPENCERIAN PENCIL COMPASS.

PATENTED MAY 4, 1886.

FOR SCHOOL USE.

Adapted to Every Variety of Drawing Requiring Instruments.

Useful Drawing has for its chief purposes the exact representation of the size, form, and construction of the objects, in such a manner that the things themselves may be made from the knowledge conveyed by the drawings.

The Spencerian Pencil Compass is made with a view of meeting the general demand for a practical drawing instrument for schools that is not liable to get out of order and can be supplied at reasonable prices. The Compass is made of metal, nickel-plated; the leg is secured to the tube holding the pencil by a rivet passing through a convex steel washer, which binds the leg so that it will remain firmly at any required angle.

ESPECIALLY DESIGNED AND ENGRAVED FOR USE IN SCHOOLS.

Most Complete, Handsome and Substantial School Maps ever Published.

These Maps are distinguished by several new and useful features, being beautifully bold in outline, free from unimportant names, and so distinct that no difficulty is experienced in reading any name. They show the latest geographical discoveries and political changes in every part of the world. They are handsomely and artistically covered, so that the political boundaries can be readily distinguished at a distance. The names of towns are engraved in clear, bold type, and are also indicated by large black dots, so that the series can, if preferred, be used for "outline" maps. The lampths of the principal rivers and the altitudes of the bidget mountains are argrayed on the maps.

maps. The lengths of the principal rivers and the altitudes of the highest mountains are engraved on the maps.

The Map of Canada, United States and Mexico shows the new boundary line between Manitoba and Ontario, and gives to Canada and the great Northwest more accurate prominence than has ever been attempted by any other publishers. The regions traversed by the Greeley Expedition, together with the geographical features of the adjacent parts, are exhibited by the map of North America. The one of South America presents the colonial possessions of European countries, and the boundaries recently established. The contested territory in Afghanistan, the Congo Free State, with its Lakes, Rivers and Missions, and all the late changes made by settlement and colonization in South Africa, are shown on their respective maps. The paths of oceanic currents and the locations of the submarine cables are special features on the maps of the hemispheres. Various colored diagrams showing the area and population of the several great States of the World, their comparative production of cereals, the tonnage of their merchant marines, etc., accompany the maps, making them complete in every respect.

The following are a few of the many educators who heartly endorse the series:

"POPULAR" MAP CASE, SHOWING THE MAP PARTIALLY DRAWN DOWN.

We furnish with each Case two screw eyes and two hooks, with which to attach it to the wall.

PORTABLE SPRING ROLLER.

The Most Convenient of all Mountings.

The attachments for each Roller are fastened to a handsome hard wood moulding made of cherry, mahoganized, and furnished with screw eyes for hanging up. The map can be brought to view, and again rolled up out of the way, in the same manner as a window curtain on a spring roller can be lowered or raised.

This plan of mounting is especially convenient for graded schools, as any map wanted can readily be carried to any room in the building, and in this way one set of maps will be sufficient for the entire school.

"This is eminently the work of a man of wisdom and experience. perience. He takes a broad and comprehensive view of the work of the teacher, and his suggestions on all topics are worthy of the most careful consideration."—New England

"This book indeed treats of practical subjects in a practical way. . . The book is an excellent one, and no teacher can read it without being profited."—Penn. School

Monna. By HENRY CALDERWOOD, LL.D., F.R.S. Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Eis-burgh. rómo, 30 cents.

"For young teachers this work is of the highest order.
It is a book every teacher will find helpful in his respessible work."

THEORY AND PRACTICE OF TEACHING. By the Rev. EDWARD THEIRS, MANNEW Edition, 16mo, $1.00.
"We hope we have said enough to induce teacher a America to read Mr. Thring's book. They will find it a mine in which they will never dig without some substantial return, either in high inspiration or sound practical advix Many of the hints and illustrations given are of the greats value for the ordinary routine work of the class-took."

BSTER'S UNABRIDGED DICTION

Now contains 3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Illustrations than are found in any other American Dictionary.

It is the best practical English Dictionary extant .- Quarterly Review, London.

In various Styles of Binding, with and without Patent Index.

"An invaluable companion in every School, and at every Fireside."

To the many other valuable features of the work, there was added in 1880

A Supplement of New Words AND MEANINGS,

(nearly 5000) including such as the constant growth of the language has brought into use since the last general revision was made.

Also added in 1880

A Biographical Dictionary, giving brief facts concerning nearly 10,000 Noted Persons.

The latest improvement (Just Added, 1885) and one that leaves but little to be desired in the work as a Dictionary and book of Reference, is a New Pronouncing

GAZETTEER of the WORLD,

Containing over 25,000 Titles. By a readily intelligible system of signs and abbreviations a wast amount of information is compressed in the 100 pages of this department.

Webster is Standard Authority with the U.S. Supreme Court and in the Govet Printing Office. It is recommended by the State Superintendents of Schools in 36 States, and by leading College Presidents of the U.S. and Canada Published by G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Springfield, Mass., U. S. A.

The Meisterschaft System

Of Dr. RICHARD S. ROSENTHAL.

A wonderfully simple and practical method, enabling any one to learn, with scarcely an effort, to speak fluently and correctly either of the above languages.

Pupils learn to speak from the very first lesson in long and connected sentences. Exact pronunciation given. All exercises corrected and all difficulties explained free of charge. Ten weeks' study sufficient for entire mastery of every-day and business conversations.

From The Nation, New York:

"This is, without doubt, the best system yet devised for learning to speak a foreign language in a short time."

Send $5.00 for books in each language, with privilege of answers to all questions and correction of exercises. Sample copies, Part I., 25 cents each language.

Studies in Modern Socialism and Labor Problems.

By T. EDWIN BROWN, D.D. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

These "Studies" consisted originally of a course of Sunday-evening lectures delivered last winter in Providence, but they have been carefully revised, copious notes have been added, and the lecture form has been discarded. The volume will contain a brief history of Socialism and Communism, and a careful exposition of what the advocates of these theories claim. As a presentation of both the labor and the capitalist sides of the controversy the book will be of great service.

Pepita Ximenez.

From the Spanish of JUAN VALERA. With an Introduction by the author, written specially for this edition. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; half bound, 75 cents.

Señor Don Juan Valera, recently Spanish minister to our Government, is recognized as the most prominent literary man of the time in Spain. He is the author of some eight or ten novels, the most recent and successful of which is "Pepita Ximenez," which has appeared in eight editions in Spain, and been translated into German, French, Italian, and Bohemian.

NOTES IN SEASON.

GEO. A. LEAVITT & Co. announce that the annual fall trade sale will begin about the middle of September. It is announced to be "a very important sale," as "a number of publishers have at this early day decided to consign large quantities and a full list of their publications.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have in press for immediate publication "The Great Masters of Russian Literature in the xixth Century," by Ernest Dupuy, translated by Nathan Haskell Dole, with an appendix giving extracts, critical and biographical notes, and portraits of the authors mentioned.

A. L. BANCROFT & Co. inform us that, notwithstanding the terrible shock and loss of the fire on the 30th of last April, they are now hard at work in re-manufacturing the stock of volumes of H. H. Bancroft's works consumed on that day; also, that they will issue before the end of this month the fifth volume of the "History of California," which covers the period of gold discovery in 1849, and will be of very great general, as well as local, interest.

ROBERTS BROS. make the very important announcement that they have now in hand the complete MSS. of "Jo's Boys, and how they turned out," by Louisa M. Alcott. The story, which is written in her usual happy vein, is a sequel to her famous work, "Little Men"—which has reached a sale of almost 100,000 copies—and will no doubt be as eagerly sought for by her numerous admirers throughout the country. The publishers hope to issue the book promptly on October 1.

CASSELL & Co. have just issued a novel of Saratoga summer life, entitled "Wanted—A Sensation; a Saratoga Incident." The author, Edward S. Van Zile, is a graduate of Trinity College, in the class of '84. He was for two years on the editorial staff of the Troy Times and is at present connected editorially with the New York World. This is a short but unique story, containing novel features and a somewhat sensational denouement. It is written with no intention of advocating any special theory, and is simply an attempt to weave an interesting story against a background which has been somewhat neglected in American action. The story is rapid in its movement, and should be of interest to a large class of readers.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish next week an authorized version of Don Juan Valera's popular novel, "Pepita Ximenez," with an introduction by the author, specially written for this edition. They will publish shortly "Studies in Modern Socialism and Labor Problems," by T. Edwin Brown, D.D., of Providence. These "Studies" consisted originally of a course of Sunday evening lectures delivered last winter in Sunday evening lectures delivered last winter in Providence, but they have been carefully revised, copious notes have been added, and the lecture form has been discarded. The volume will contain a brief history of Socialism and Communism, a careful exposition of what the advocates of these theories claim, an acknowedgment of what is just therein, and a searching criticism of their defects. As a presentation of both the labor and the capitalist sides of the controversy, the book will, no doubt, be of great service. The monograph on André and Hale, under the title of "The Two Spies," from the pen of Benson J. Lossing, is nearly ready for publication. It will contain an outline sketch of the most prominent events in the lives of the two notable spies of the American Revolution-Nathan Hale and John André. It will be illustrated by nearly thirty engravings from pen-and-ink drawings of portraits, buildings, sketches by André, etc. Among these illustrations are pictures of commemorative monuments: one in memory of Hale at Coventry, Connecticut; of André in Westminster Abbey; one to mark the spot at Tarrytown where André was captured; and the memorial stone at Tappan set up by Mr. Field to mark the spot where Andre was executed. These are accompanied by full accounts of the circumstances connected with their erection. The volume will also contain the full text and original notes of the famous "Monody on Major Andre," written by his friend, Anna Seward, with a portrait and biographical sketch of Miss Seward, and letters to her by Major André. "A Politician's Daughter," the new novel by Myra Sawyer Hamlin, may be expected at once. The author, who is well known in Maine, Washington, and New York social circles, is a daughter of ex-Senator F. H. Sawyer and granddaughter by marriage of the Hon. Hannibal Hamlin.

Adams, Oscar Fay, ed. July. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., 1886. 27+148 p. S. (Through the year with the poets.) cl., $1.

The eighth volume of this series; contains four poems written especially for it by Mrs. Helen Gray Cone, Mrs. Alice W. Rollins, James W. Matthews, and one unknown writer. The rest of the book is made up of words about midsummer, chosen with judgment from all the best-known poets of England and America. The index to without register of the second of the sec authors, giving dates of birth and death, adds to the value of these little collections.

As common mortals: a novel. N. Y., Cassell

& Co., 1886. 404 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The scene is laid in Goverick, under which name Philadelphia is easily recognized. Milly Barron, the heroine, is a descendant of generations of Harrises, who have always a descendant of generations of Harrises, who have always conformed to conventionalities and led quiet, correct lives as pillars of the Presbyterian Church. Milly at the age of ten displays marked originality; at sixteen she meets Miss Reese, a "woman's rights" advocate, devoted to spiritualism, abolition of slavery, higher education, and a conglomeration of the many theories of various sects and beliefs. Her influence on Milly is marked. After going through many trials and fighting hard for her new ideas, Milly finally loves a good man and becomes "as common mortals."

Clement, Clara Erskine. A handbook of Christian symbols and stories of the saints, as illustrated in art; ed. by Katherine E. Conway. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1886. 14+349 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

This work has been undertaken to satisfy a want often In swork has been undertaken to satisfy a want one felt personally by the author and often expressed to her by others. Travelling abroad in Christian lands, symbolic forms are constantly met that are known in a general way to represent the mysteries and facts of the Christian faith, but fail to recall them accurately to the uninitiated beholder. Churches are dedicated to saints hitherto unbead of. The first part of the book is devoted to a treatise on ot. The first part of the book is devoted to a treatise or symbolism in art; the second gives legends and stories il-lustrated in art. There are copies of tem celebrated paintings and sketches of the lives of twenty-two saints. A full index occupies twenty-five pages of the book, and makes it a practical work of reference. It is handsomely gotten up in green cloth and red edges.

from the French. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1886. 191 p. D. pap., 25 c. Mériadec Léridan, after a life of adventure as a privateersman, rettres to the coast of Britanny to enjoy his immense fortune, hoping to end his days quietly and peaceably. An accident kills him, just as he is thinking of disposing by will of his money, and his death brings to light a number of poor and rapacious nephews and nicces, who will inherit in case of no will being found. A faithful friend of Léridan's picks up in his room a half-destroyed paper yellow with age, written by himself, in which he names a woman as his sole heir. This mysterious person, and the fact that almost a million of the old man's money cannot be found, point to secrets in his life, of which his most intimate friend was ignorant. The story shows how the mystery was unravelled, the money found, and the right heir brought to light.

"Gogol is one of the greatest of all Russian writers, and eminent as a delineator of popular life. So accurate are his ethnographic sketches that they led to his selection for a professorship of mediæval history in the university of Petersburg. . . 'Taras Bulba' describes the life of Little Russia in the sixteenth century, Taras himself being an old-fashioned colonel who hated Poland, abhorred the Turk, and defended the religion of his fathers. The story begins with the return of his sons from the seminary, and a free fight, in which Taias is beaten by his eldest. . . . 'Taras Bulba' will delight plain readers, who like adventures, quite as much as it will astonish and please the best informed judges of Russian history, and the Russian character. It is powerful and true, and for American readers it has the extraordinary charm of novelty."—

Molinos, Miguel de. The spiritual guide which disentangles the soul, and brings it by the inward way to the getting of perfect contemplation and the rich treasure of internal peace; tr. from the Italian. Verbatim reprint of the edition of 1699. Phil., G. W. McCalla, 813 Arch St., 1885. 4+159 p. T. 75 C.

Molinos was of a noble Spanish family of Minozzi, in the diecese of Saragossa, in Aragon, where he was born Dec. 21, 1627. After a career of some distinction in his own country he went to Rome, where he speedily acquired a wonderful popularity as a spiritual director. In 1675 he published in Rome, in Italian, this little book, "Il Guida Spirituale," which was afterward (1676) published in Spanish at Madrid, then at Saragossa in 1677, and then in Seville in 1683. This work went through twenty editions in different languages in the space of six years, 1675-1681. Molinos taught in this little book of devotion the doctrines of passivire designed to show how inward peace may be found taught in this little book of devotion the doctrines of pas-sivity, designed to show how inward peace may be found by contemplation, prayer, obedience, and inward morti-fication rather than by external demonstration. Though at first courted and honored, he was arrested in 1685 by the Inquisition, and spent the end of his life, it is supposed, in imprisonment. This issue is reprinted from an English translation which appeared in 1699, without any publisher's imprint or even the place of its publication.

A scholarly work, in which the author endeavors "m show that the ancient sacred mysteries, the origin of Free Masonry consequently, date from a period far more remote than the most sanguine students of 1ts history ever imagined." He tries to "trace their origin, step by step, to this continent which we inhabit—to America—from where Maya colonists transported their ancient religious rites and ceremonies, not only to the banks of the Nik, but to those of the Euphrates and the shores of the Islan Ocean, not less tham 11,500 years ago." The writer's style is clear, convincing, and most captivating. The suthor has spent considerable time in South and Central America, and bases his remarks on observations and discoveries made by himself on the sites of the cities of the Mayas and Quiches. Nevertheless, he modestly claims in the state of the sites of the cities of the states. Mayas and Quiches. Paris, Ireland, Poland, and finally Mexico turnish the scenes for this vivid story of political intrigue and glowing patriotism. The plot is involved, but arriatically hadded. Helen Staroska, a beautiful Pole, and her daughter Désirée are the heroines. Désirée's husband is for a long time supposed guilty of killing Helen's husband, and she separates from him on that account. The agony of mind and body suffered by him finally induce Désirée to return to him and forgive him. This novel is worth a careful reading. The cause of humanity appeals to Helen at the age of sixteen, and her whole life is sacrificed to her work for the needy and oppressed.

"The first division [the essay] of the present work, originally prepared by the writer for theological students, as a part of his labors in Lane Theological Seminary, having been solicited for publication, has been carefully recast, and in its present form is intended as a humble 'contribution toward a solution of the causes of modern doubt.' As it is now presented, it is designed to furnish some aid, not to the theological students merely, but to Christian ministers of all Protestant denominations, and to those intelligent laymen who sympathize and co-operate with them, by the pen, in lecturing, and in various other forms, in their efforts to defend the ark of God, 'the faith once delivered to the saints,' from the assaults of acepticism. With this intent, it was thought best to complete the translation of the ethics. True, the chief argument of Spiaoza on the problem of the existence of God is found in the first part, but the ramifications of the argument reach to every part of the work."—Preface.

The incidents transpire within eight years. The scene shifts from Ostend to Boulogne and then to London. The "daughter of the goods" marries an intimate friend of her father's, concealing from him some facts in her life, that are afterward disclosed to him under a combination of circumstances, that testify of the author's originality of invention. The heroine is beautiful and good. The sketching of the husband's sister and cousins shows a keen sense of humor. The child "Mara" is very successfully drawn.

The book, according to the sub-title, tells "How he (David Balfour) was kidnapped and cast away; his sufferings in a desert isle; his journey in the Wild Highlands; his acquaintance with Alan Breck Stewart and other notorious Highland Jacobites, with all that he suffered at the hands of his uncle, Ebenezer Balfour of Shaws, falsely so called." As may be judged, the book is one wholly of adventure, leaving off while the hero is still not much more than a boy. The style is very quaint and amusing. Scene laid in Scotland.

ZOLA AS A RISING BOOKSELLER.

THE fourth volume of Albert Wolff's " Mémoirs d'un Parisien," entitled "La gloire à Paris, a very witty and entertaining work, gives, among others, a brief biographical sketch of Émile Zola. which may not be uninteresting to booksellers:

Zola's father, an Italian by descent, was born at Trieste. He was an engineer of considerable repute, and was honored by having his name given to the canal at Aix. Death overtook him in the midst of a number of most difficult undertakings. A succession of lawsuits that were forced upon his widow consumed almost entirely her insignificant legacy. Zola accompanied his mother to Paris to attend to the last lawsuit. All their hopes rested on the issue of this case; but they were doomed to the most bitter disappointment. They lost the case. Young Zola was obliged to give up his studies, and found himself absolutely a pauper in a strange city. A friend of his father obtained for him an inferior situation in the Entrepôt in the Rue de la Douane, which yielded him a monthly salary of 80 francs. Later he obtained a situation at Hachette & Co.'s bookstore, with a yearly salary of 6500 francs. His duties here were of the humblest kind; he was employed in the department of school-books and writing materials.

In his leisure moments he attempted to "mount Pegasus," and was so indiscreet as to confide his ambition to his chef. M. Hachette waxed wroth at the presumption of his clerk, and gave him the choice between giving up his aspirations or leaving his employ. Zola, for bread and butter reasons, was forced to choose the former. Shortly after he was promoted to the position of chef de la publicité—that is, he made all the arrangements for his firm with the advertising agents. His duties in this position were little to his taste, but they gave an opportunity to make connections with the press. It was his ambition to obtain a place on the staff of the Figuro. He wrote and published (not through Hachette & Co., however) his "Contes à Ninon," which became popular at once, and attracted attention to their author. Encouraged by his success, Zola applied to M. de Villemessant, was granted an interview, and made so favorable an impression on the editor of the Figare, that he intrusted him with the "bibliographical review" of his journal. The first and most difficult part of his literary career had been now successfully passed. From this time forward Zola headed for fame and her emoluments.

PROGRESS OF CASSELL & COMPANY.

AT the gathering of the 800 employés of Cassell & Co., convened by Mr. and Mrs. Petter, and Mr. and Mrs. Galpin, at Exeter Hall, on June 18, Mr. T. D. Galpin, in referring to the progress made by the firm, remarked, "that during the past three years the company on the whole had abundant reason to be thankful for the success which they had attained. From an experience extending over a period of forty years he might say that he never remembered such a period of continued depression. But in spite of that depression they had been able to pay ten per cent., and carry £10,000 to the reserve fund. At present 5266 shares were held by the employes of the company, representing, at £9 per share, some £47,000, and at their market value of £12. 10s. £65,000. One of the things which pleased him as much as anything in connection with the establishment was that he believed there was no place in the world in which sanitary conditions were more persect than in their own. Since their last meeting they had planted their flag in the Australian colonies, and had every reason to expect success. Mr. Woods had recently returned from a visit to their New York branch, where, under the management of Mr. O. M. Dunham, their books and publications were being increasingly appreciated. Mr. Tur-ner and Mr. Bale had also just visited their Paris branch. In conclusion, he thanked them all for the support which they had accorded him in the past, and hoped they would continue to do so in the future.

BOOKS IN MAILS FOR THE UNITED STATES OF COLOMBIA.—The International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union has advised the U. S. Post-Office Department that "Books and non-periodical publications which, to judge from their number, are not intended for the personal use of the persons to whom they are addressed, but are intended for sale, are liable to customs duties upon entering the United States of Colombia, and consequently are not transmissible by mail from the other countries of the Postal Union,"

OBITUARY NOTES.

EDWARD F. C. Judson, known to readers of sensational novels as "Ned Buntline," died at his home, Stamford, Delaware Co., N. Y., on the 17th inst. He was sixty-four years old and had written four hundred stories, besides having experienced all the imaginable hardships of a life of roving and adventure. He ran away from school as a boy, to go to sea, and at the age of thirteen years he had a commission as midshipman in the navy, given him by President Van Buren for acts of bravery. During the war he was a scout among the Indians, whom he cordially hated. His first story, "The Captain's Pig," was written for the Knickerbocker Magazine when he was fifteen years old. His most successful tale was "Buffalo Bill." He achieved an early fame, and with it came riches. He made regularly from $20,000 to $60,000 a year with his pen, but he was not a financier, and his money was spent as readily as it was made. He kept a steam yacht at one time, and was fond of entertaining his friends at his farm.

His romances were printed in the New York Ledger and New York Weekly, the last one being furnished about a year ago. Several of his unpublished tales are now in the safe of the

New York Weekly.

PETER DOYLE, an old second-hand bookseller, who for over twenty-five years kept a Shop on Tenth Street, below Market Street, in Philadelphia, died suddenly of heart disease in his room on May 5th last, without having had the services of a physician or nurse. It now turns out that he was in reality Sir Pierre D'Oyley, Baronet of England and the representative of a very old Anglo-Norman family and hereditary Chevalier of the military order of Cincinnatus. According to the New York World, "he is the thirty-fourth descendant in a According to the New York direct line from Nigell D'Oyley, who went to England with William the Conqueror, was created Grand Constable, with forty-seven estates and the Barony of Oxford for a residence, the tenure of the title being dependent on the presentation of six napkins yearly to the sovereign. Hence the name "doily" as applied to small napkins. Dr. Thomas Evans, the famous American dentist of Paris and friend of the Emperor Napoleon and companion of the Empress Eugenie in her flight after the Franco-Prussian war, married a sister of Doyle. Before his death Doyle got his friend, Mr. Dick, to burn up all his private papers and letters, including a large emblazoned parchment bearing heraldic devices, which Mr. Dick thinks was the genealogical record of the D'Oyleys.

BOOK NOTICES.—Of one thing must author and publisher be persuaded, and it is that the days of long and exhaustive book reviews have gone by. The brief, crisp "notices" of the daily press—just mere indications of the merits or demerits of a book—are all that is needed. The reason for this is plain enough: the reading public are better able to judge for themselves than they were fifty years ago. All they ask now of the critic is: Give us in a few words the character of the new book, so that we may make up our minds whether we want to read it or not. Don't bother yourself to fill half a column with vos idles à vous, as the French put it, unless, of course, you get paid for it.—American Bookmaker.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE Literary World for July 10 has an interesting article on "The Bibliography of Norway."

The Menorah is the title of a new monthly magazine which is to be the official organ of the "B'nai Berith." The editor is Hon. B. F. Peixotto, who was for many years United States Consul to Roumania and France. It is published at 39 Broadway, New York.

Recreation is the title of a new weekly illustrated journal devoted to out-door life and sports, which succeeds the Cyclist and Athlete, Tennis and Archery News. The editorial and publication office is at 755 Broad St., Newark, N. Y.; the New York Office, under the management of C. L. Meyers, is at 125 Chambers Street.

The five hundredth anniversary of the founding of Heidelberg University will be celebrated at Heidelberg in August of this year. An historical sketch of the old town, the castle and the university, by Mrs. Lucy M. Mitchell, will appear in the "Midsummer Holiday" Century, the August number. Seventeen illustrations from drawings and photographs will accompany the article.

The Bibliografia Italiana, we are pleased to notice, is waking up, and making an attempt to progress. It is now published in two editions, the one being the regular issue, with the subtitle Bolletino delle publicazioni italiani ricevute per diritto di stampa, etc. The other edition is printed on better paper, and is entitled Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale di Firense. This latter contains most interesting descriptions of the catalogues of the various Italian libraries, as well as reports on their management and personel, and alphabetical index to new publications.

THE Critic of July 17 contains a list of "a hundred and twenty-five great authors," which is intended to comprise the names of "those writers whom an English or American reader, aiming at a broad literary culture, can least well afford to leave unread." In the preparation of the list assistance and advice have been received from thirty or more well-known men and women, although they are not to be held responsible for the list either as individuals or collectively. This list embraces the literature of all times and languages. The Critic will this week publish a list of 100 American authors who are most worthy of reading.

The Popular Science Monthly for August will open with a richly illustrated article of great economic value, entitled "Woods and their Destructive Fungi." The author, Mr. P. H. Dudley, a civil engineer of rising reputation, has for several years been studying the structure of those woods most commonly employed in the arts, with reference to the agencies concerned in their deterioration. The results of his investigations put quite a different aspect from the generally accepted one on the process of decay, and promise to be of vast industrial importance in their practical application. Hon. David A. Wells closes his series of papers on "An Economic Study of Mexico," with an article in this issue considering the attitude which the United States should take toward that country.

REGARDING the new Scribner's monthly illustrated magazine, the only thing that can be stated positively is that there will be such a magazine; further than that Messrs. Scribner's Sons do not commit themselves. The proposed magazine is to be an entirely new enterprise; it is to be original in plan and design, and to be in no way an outgrowth or revival of the old Scribner's Monthly. to which the Century is now the successor. Mr. E. L. Burlingame, who has been for many years the literary adviser of the Scribners, is to be the editor, and Mr. W. A. Paton, formerly publisher of the World, is to be the general manager of the new magazine. The date for the appearance of the first number has not yet been decided upon. It will not be definitely fixed until all the necessary arrangements for conducting such an enterprise have been completed. It is not unlikely, however, that the first number will appear late this year or early in 1387.

THE FOWLER & WELLS Co. announce that they will hereafter publish The American Kindergarten and Primary Teacher which was issued for the last eight years by the editor, Miss Emily M. Coe under the title of The American Kinder-The magazine will be enlarged to 32 pages, and changes will be made, which, it is hoped, will greatly enlarge its scope and field of usefulness. As the name of the magazine implies, it is especially devoted to Kindergarten methods of teaching, but it will be more general than this, and will consider the interests not only of kindergartners, but of primary teachers and parents who have the care and training of young children. Well-known educators and writers on educational topics will contribute to its pages, and all phases of important questions relating to child culture will be discussed. Kindergarten teaching in schools of this class, the best methods of instruction, the use of material, etc., will be considered carefully. Primary teaching will be discussed, especially the changes demanded by improved methods of instruction, and the introduction of Kindergarten work into the public schools as at present organized. There will be talks with mothers on the questions in which they are vitally interested. Articles of general interest will be published, furnishing the reader with a fund of information in such a practical form that it can be conveyed to the little ones in their charge in such a manner as to be comprehended and understood. It will be published monthly, from September to June inclusive, at $1 per annum.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

E. L. Kellogg & Co., 25 Clinton Place, New York City, have just issued a neat catalogue of educational books, entitled "Helps for Teachers." It contains a list of 250 books that are recognized as having practical value. Each book is classified, described, and indexed by author, subject, and title, with prices. Many of the more important bave contents given. Under the department of Principles of Education 19 books are described; Methods of Teaching has 51; School Management, 7; Primary Education, 10; Kindergarten Education, 14, etc. It has also a short introduction on the selection of books. (64 p. S. pap., 4c.)

THE NORMAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, Nashville, Ind., has issued a catalogue of its own publications, and of supplies for teachers and schools for which it has an agency. (16 p. S.)

F. C. MILLER, 2 Arcade Court, Chicago, has issued a catalogue (No. 10) of books on the Civil War, and relating to America. (4 p. O.)

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

DR. R. GOTTHEIL, of the Temple Emanu-El, New York, has in the press the Syriac grammar of Elias Mar Sobā.

MR. HENRY BLACKBURN has in preparation a personal memoir of the early art career of the late Randolph Caldecott. The book, which will have numerous unpublished illustrations, will be published by Sampson Low & Co. in October next.

MR. JOHN D. Ross has been engaged for some years on a work which is now in the press, entitled "Celebrated Songs of Scotland." It will embrace seven hundred of the most popular songs from King James V. to Henry Scott Riddell, with memoirs of the writers, notes, glossary, and a complete index.

PROF. BERNHARD TEN BRINK, says the Academy, "wrote the Chaucer part of his 'History of English Literature' a long time ago, but will not begin printing his second volume till the whole of it is completed. Many chapters have yet to be written, while others need a thorough revision, and the preparation of his lectures on the 'Outlines of English Philology,' will take almost all the professor's available time this summer."

THOMAS N. PAGE, the author of two able stories—"Marse Chan" and "Meh Lady," the latter of which appeared in the Century only a few months ago—is a lawyer residing at Richmond. He is thirty-three years old, says the N.Y. Times, and a descendant of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. He has on hand two or three short stories which have not yet been published. After they are published he will collect the four or five tales for issue in volume form. He has of late been engaged upon a larger work than any of these."

Mr. Ernest Rhys, the English editor of the Camelot Classics, and Mr. Thomas J. Wise, the editor of the Shelley Society's reprints, have combined to publish, says the Evening Post, "a volume containing the whole of Shelley's prose works, except 'Zastrozzi' and 'St. Irvyne;' that is, all his prose tracts, pamphlets, and broadsides, all his prose essays, and such of his letters as are out of copyright. Mr. Wise will be responsible for the accuracy of the text. The book will fill about 400 or 425 pages. The first edition, to be ready on July 31, will consist of 10,000 copies."

MR. J. E. ROCKWELL, Washington, D. C., is about to publish privately an édition de luxe of his "Teaching, Practice, and Literature of Shorthand," which contains, we venture to say, the most complete bibliography on the subject. The most complete bibliography on the subject. work (which was published by the Bureau of Education in 1882, and which is now practically out of print) will be printed on extra heavy toned paper, and will contain about 400 pp., and be fully illustrated by portraits of prominent authors, reproductions of curious title-pages, and portions of rare volumes, specimens of systems, etc. There will be a historical sketch and a complete list of all works on shorthand issued from 1588 to 1887, together with notes on the history of the art and the present locations and values of the books.

MR. HENRY Howe, who forty years ago travelled thousands of miles on horseback, in stage-coaches and on foot in search of material for his invaluable work, "Historical Collections of Ohio," has again gone to Ohio, we learn from the Cleveland Leader, "for the purpose of travelling over the State, this time in the cars, and finishing more thoroughly the work he commenced forty years ago. During that time many local histories of counties have been published and many historical societies have been formed. From these sources Mr. Howe expects to gather additional facts, together with what he may obtain from a variety of other sources, to add to his former history, and with the aid of photographic views, which he did not have before, give a more complete and better illustrated history of our grand old State than was ever before given."

BUSINESS NOTES.

AURORA, ILL.—Arthur Terry, book and stationery dealer, has sold out.

BROKEN BOW, NEB.—I. T. Merchant & Co., booksellers, have sold out.

Dallas, Tex.—Myers & Hewitt, booksellers, were burned out July 7.

DENVER, Col.—Perry & Baldy, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

ELDORADO, KAN.—G. A. Hawley & Son, booksellers and stationers, have sold out.

HAVERHILL, MASS.—A fire on the 9th inst. damaged the stock of C. C. Morse & Son to the extent of about $10,000, and entirely destroyed that of Sheldon & Sargent, booksellers and stationers.

Lansing, Mich.—A. M. Emery, bookseller and stationer, and the Lansing Paper Company have consolidated their business, which will be conducted under the style of the Lansing Book and Paper Company.

LIMA, O.—Trevor & Robinson, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

MARION, O.—C. G. Wiant has succeeded A. L. Linsley in books, stationery, and wall paper.

PARIS, TEX.—Troy & Ragland have succeeded W. S. Moore & Co. in the wholesale and retail book and stationery business.

OVID, MICH.—Reeves & Allen, booksellers and stationers, have sold out.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—We regret to learn of the embarrassment of E. Darrow, the well-known bookseller. His liabilities aggregate about $11,-000; his stock at a recent inventory was valued at $16,000, but of course would bring less at a forced sale. The Democrat, in noticing the failure, says: "The entire community will regret the necessity that has compelled Mr. Darrow to suspend after a struggle of forty years. The depression in business, and particularly in the book trade, has been unparalleled. Mr. Darrow has ever sustained the highest character for honor and integrity, and his well-known probity, together with the well-known business character of the assignee, will insure the greatest return to the creditors possible under all the circumstances. It is confidently believed that he will be able to resume business at an early ST. Louis, Mo.—Friedrich Roeslein, German bookseller, has sold out.

SALEM, ORE.—H. D. Boone, bookseller and stationer, has been succeeded by T. McF. Patton.

YATES CENTRE, KAS.—Harrison Bros., book-sellers, have sold out.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

D. LOTHROP & Co. will publish at once a choice illustrated edition of Paul H. Hayne's complete works.

THE THOMPSON PUBLISHING Co., Philadelphia, will publish in September "The Life and Works of Josh Billings," by E. J. Bishop. The work will have an introduction by the Hon. Charles E. Hamlin.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. have now ready "Plain Words on Our Lord's Work," by Rev. D. N. Beach, of Cambridge, Mass.; and "The Optimism of Ralph Waldo Emerson," by Wm. F. Dana, a discourse and examination of the essavist's writings.

THE AMERICAN SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION of Philadelphia has just offered a prize of $1000 for the best book on the Christian obligations of labor. The limits are from 60,000 to 100,000 words, and the manuscript must be sent in by November 1, 1887.

ROBERT CARTER & BROS. announce three new books by the famous Baptist preacher, Charles H. Spurgeon—"All of Grace: an earnest word with those wo are seeking salvation by the Lord Jesus Christ;" "Storm Signals;" and the third volume of "Sermon-Notes—Matthew to Acts."

J. FLETCHER BRENNAN & Co., Cincinnati, O., have now ready the first volume of the "Life of Cassius Marcellus Clay: Memoirs, Writings, and Speeches," showing his conduct in the overthrow of American slavery, the salvation of the Union, and the reconstruction of the autonomy of the States. The work, a royal octavo, with seven original plates, is sold by subscription.

P. BLAKISTON, SON & Co., Philadelphia, have nearly ready a translation of a "Text Book on Diseases of Women," by Professor F. Wenckel, of the University of Munich, with one hundred and thirty-two fine wood engravings; also, the second edition of Landois's "Physiology," a book of which its translator, Professor Stirling, of Aberdeen, says, "It forms a bridge between physiology and practical medicine."

THE SHERMAN PUBLISHING Co. will publish on the 15th of August "The Naval History of the Civil War," including all the operations of the army in conjunction with the navy, by Admiral David D. Porter, U.S.N. The work, which will be sold by subscription, is a quarto of over 500 pages, with about 400 engravings from sketches by Rear-Admiral Henry Walke, Carl J. Becker, and others. Wilson & Ellis, 150 Nassau St., New York, are the publishers' agents.

ROBERTS BROS. have just published "Golden Mediocrity," a novel by Mrs. Eugenie Hamerton, wife of Philip Gilbert Hamerton; "Miss Melinda's Opportunity," a new story for girls, by Helen Campbell; a new enlarged edition of "For Summer Afternoons," by Susan Coolidge; "Dante and bis Circle, with the Italian Poets preceding him, (1100, 1200, 1300,)" a collection of lyrics edited and translated in the original meters, by Dante G. Rossetti; and "Santa Barbara, and Around There," a guide-book for travellers, by Edwards Roberts, with illustrations by H. C. Ford.

J. H. EARLE has recently published "Bible Teachings of Nature, with some notices of true science as vindicated from false assumptions, or, the newest science as related to the most ancient Book," by Rev. J. Byington Smith, D.D., a very able and scholarly work; also, "Thought Etchings," by J. M. Scott, of New Jersey, a volume of original epigrammatic thoughts. Mr. Earle will publish, August 10, an important work by Rev. A. P. Peabody, of Harvard University, entitled "Character Building," a book for young men.

E. L. KELLOGG & Co., 25 Clinton Place, New York, will publish next month a volume of odd questions and answers, entitled "Handy Helps," by the author of "Quizzism and its Key;" and "School Devices," a volume by E. R. Shaw and Webb Donnell, whose object it is to afford "practical assistance to teachers who wish to keep their work from degenerating into mere routine by giving them in convenient form, for constant use at the desk, a multitude of new ways to present old truths." In September they will issue a new question book by Edward R. Shaw, of Yonkers.

HENRY HOLT & Co. are about to avail themselves of a new invention in flexible cloth book covers, to start a series of novels convenient for travel and out of doors, and at the same time better able than paper-covered books to resist such wear. They appropriately call it the Leisure Season series. The price will be fifty cents a volume. The first number will appear at once. It is a new impression of Miss McClelland's successful novel "Oblivion," hitherto obtainable only in the Leisure Hour series. The second number will be a new novel by Mr. Thomas Wharton, author of "A Latter-Day Saint."

JOHN P. MORTON & Co., Louisville, Ky., have in press a revised edition of "Florida Fruits. and How to Raise Them," by Helen Harcourt. This book has been largely rewritten, and will contain about three hundred and twenty-five pages, bound handsoniely in cloth. Many chapters have been added, and the book in every respect brought up to the times. Full instructions are given respecting the cultivation and care of fruit trees, and fruits adapted to the soil and climate of Florida and adjacent states. The book will be valuable not only to the experienced fruit-grower, but of almost inestimable value to persons making new homes in Florida and the far South.

JAMES J. CHAPMAN, Washington. D. C., will publish on August 15 "A Hand-book of Politics for 1886," by Hon. Edward McPherson, being the tenth volume of his political works. It will cover the proceedings of the second session of the last Congress (xlviiith) and the first session of the present Congress (xlixth); and will give the final facts as to every pending public measure. In that record will be found the votes relating to forfeitures of land grants, interstate commerce, the Presidential succession, the electoral count, the suppression of bigamy, the Chinese question, the common school bill, and the action on silver coinage, the tariff, civil service, alcoholic liquor traffic, contract labor, etc., with copies of these various bills. Also the messages of Presidents Arthur and Cleveland; statistical tables of elections, debt, appropriations, revenues, and expenditures, etc.

ROBERT CLARKE & Co. will publish immediately an inductive and practical work on "Code Practice and Precedents," by Hon. Alfred Yaple, of the Cincinnati bar. It is to be especially adapted to actions and special proceedings under the Civil Code of Ohio, and will be largely applicable to the practice in all the code States. The author has long had the preparation of this work in view, and it is the result of many years' careful study. Judge Yaple is one of the most learned lawyers in Ohio, and has had a long experience at the Bar, both under the common law system and under the reformed American system of procedure. He served several terms on the bench of the Superior Court of Cincinnati, where his judicial ability was so fully recognized that he was generally the candidate of both political parties. It is very seldom that one so peculiarly and thoroughly qualified to write a work of this character undertakes the task, and the legal profession will look forward to its publication with much interest.

TICKNOR & Co. have recently published the second and third volumes of "The World as Will and Idea," by Arthur Schopenhauer, translated from the German by R. B. Haldane and J. Kemp; "Quaint and Curious Advertisements," being the fourth volume of the Olden Times series, showing how they advertised in the olden time; "Misfits and Remnants," by L. D. Ventura and S. Shevitch, a collection of delightful short stories and sketches, of which "Peppino"—the leading story—has met with great success in France; "Household Sanitation," by Wm. E. Hoyt, chief engineer B. R. and P. R. R., an address delivered at the annual meeting of the Academy of Sciences, in January, 1886; "Christian Symbols and Stories of the Saints," by Clara Erskine Clement and Catherine E. Conway, an illustrated work of especial interest to Catholic schools and colleges and to students of art; also Byron's "Childe Harold," the latest addition to the Students' Series of Standard Poetry, edited, with notes and introduction, by W. J. Rolfe.

Mr. F. Darwin's work on his father, Charles Darwin, will include a fragment of autobiography.

T. FISHER UNWIN, London, announces a novel by Mme. Louise M. Richter, entitled "Melita." The plot is chiefly laid in Turkey, and deals with both English and Ottoman life in Constantinople.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & Sons will publish immediately a little book by Lady John Manners, entitled "Encouraging Experiences of Reading and Recreation Rooms," being a sequel to "Advantages of Free Libraries and Recreation Rooms." It is dedicated, by special permission, to the Queen.

"JOHN MURRAY announces what he calls 'A Readable Dictionary of the English Language,' by Mr. David Milne. It seems to be devoted,' says the Athenaum, "chiefly to what Professor Freeman calls 'Romance words,' and is intended mainly for the use of those who know little Latin and less Greek."

ELLIOT STOCK will shortly publish another volume in his Book-levers' Library, which is to be Mr. Gomme's "Literature of Local Institutions." It will contain, besides a complete bibliography of the literature of the subject, an epitomized account of the various forms of local government which have prevailed in this country.

PUBLISH THIS WEEK:

Studies in Modern Socialism and Labor Problems.

By T. Edwin Brown, D.D. One volume, 12mo, cloth. Price, $1.25.

These "Studies" consisted originally of a course of Sunday evening lectures delivered last winter in Providence, but they have been carefully revised, copious notes have been added, and the lecture form has been discarded. The volume contains a brief history of Socialism and Communism, a careful exposition of what the advocates of these theories claim, an acknowledgment of what is just therein, and a searching criticism of their defects. As a presentation of both the labor and the capitalist sides of the controversy, the book will be of great service, while its graphic and animated style will make it acceptable to readers of all classes.

Pepita Ximenez.

A Nevel. From the Spanish of Juan Valera, with an introduction by the author, written specially for this edition. 12mo, paper cover. Price, 50 cents; half bound, 75 cents.

Sefior Don Juan Valera, recently Spanish minister to our Government, is recognized as the most prominent literary man of the time in Spain. He is the author of some eight or ten novels, the most recent and successful of which is "Pepita Ximenez." which has appeared in eight editions in Spain, and been translated into German, French, Italian, and Bohemian. Nothing more charming has appeared in recent literature.

A Politician's Daughter.

A Novel. By Myra Sawyer Hamlin. 12mo, half bound. Price, 75 cents.

"A Politician's Daughter" is a bright, vivacious novel, based on a more than usual knowledge of American social and political life.

Double Cunning.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE ESTATE OF D. VAN NOSTRAND will issue at once a new number in the Van Nostrand Science Series, entitled "A Treatise on Helicoidal Oblique Arches," by John L. Culley.

D. C. HEATH & Co. will publish next month an "Elementary Course in Practical Zoology," by B. P. Colton; "Hall's Bibliography of Pedagogical Literature," "Greek and Roman History," by Mary D. Sheldon; and "Studies ing houses.

of Latin in the Preparatory Course," which will appear in their Monographs on Education.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. will shortly issue a work from the pen of a well-known professor not many miles from Harvard, entitled "The Winnipeg Country; or, Roughing it with an Eclipse Party—by A. Rochester Fellow." It will be profusely illustrated with heliotypes, wood engravings, and a map, descriptive of the locality. The same publishers, by special arrangement with the Pall Mall Gazette, have just published a third edition in pamphlet form of the controversy excited by Ruskin, entitled "The Best Hundred Books."

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. will publish immediately "Thoughts," by Joseph Roux, a parish priest in France. These "Thoughts" have created considerable enthusiasm in France among thinkers, all of whom with one accord have done homage to the little book, whose richness of first-hand thoughts has equally charmed and amazed them, and have not hesitated to name their author in one breath with those great Frenchmen who have achieved immortality.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

REV. T. P. HUGHES, author of "Ruhainah" and the "Dictionary of Islam," is preparing an account of Oriental mysticism, in a love story, entitled "Meerza the Mystic."

MRS. NATHANIEL CONCKLIN ["Jennie M. Drinkwater"] according to the Literary World has in press "The Fairfax Girls," and proposes "That Quisset House" for the fall.

M. BOUCHOUT of the Bibliothèque Nationale is preparing a volume on printing and bindings which will prove of interest and value to printers and binders as well as to collectors.

DR. THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH, says the Boston Traveller, has completed two novels which he intends to revise for publication shortly, and is gradually writing a "Life of Oliver Cromwell" and "Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States, with a Consideration of the Relative Rights and Powers of the Federal and State Governments." It is getting to be understood that Dr. English wrote "Jacob Schuyler's Millions,"

A LIFE of a well-nigh forgotten American man of letters, but one whose place in the history of our literature is peculiar and interesting, Charles Brockden Brown, whose life extended from 1771 to 1810, and who lived in New York and Philadelphia, is in preparation by Mr. Charles I. Stephenson, of the Independent. Mr. Stevenson announces that any persons who may possess literary, or other manuscripts by Brown, and especially those who may possess letters written by him, will do him a great favor by communicating the facts to him at the office of the Independent.

PERSONAL NOTES.

JULIUS REIMER has embraced the legal profession at San Francisco, Cal., where he has been admitted to practise as an attorney and counsellor at law in all the courts of the State of California. Mr. Reimer was in his youth educated for the book-trade, and for many years was connected with several prominent publishing houses.

Mr. Clay was one of the most prominent statesmen of his day. He was born in Madison Co., Ky., Oct. 19, 1810. He graduated at Yale in 1832. One of his first acts in public life was to oppose the annexation of Texas to the Union. From the first, he was an aggressive opponent of Union. From the first, he was an aggressive opponent of slavery, and in this volume he describes many exciting incidents in connection with his work in this direction. He became editor of the True American, an anti-slavery paper tasued in Lexington, Ky.. in 1845. He served as a captain in the Mexican war (1846-47), supported Lincoln in 1860, and became a brigadier-general of the Union army in 1861. He was Minister to Russia from 1862-69. His autobiography is written with considerable frankness, and will prove an interesting addition to the literature of one will prove an interesting addition to the literature of one of the most exeiting epochs in the history of this country. This volume brings the narrative down to 1884. The second volume, which will be issued in 1887, will probably contain chiefly letters and speeches.

A fascinating account of the life and career of a representation without means, without C1., $2.50.

A fascinating account of the life and career of a representative and typical American, who without means, without influential friends, but with a common school educatios, made himself a conspicuous figure in the great formative period of the United States. Mr. Colfax was born in Nov York City in 1823. In 1839 he went to Northern Indiana, where he remained, and devoted himself to journalism. He was a member of Congress for over fifteen years (1854 to 1869), during which time he was three times elected Spears of the House. In 1868 he was elected Vice-President of the United States on the Republican ticket with Gesen Grant. He died suddenly at Mankato, Minn., Jan. 17, 1885. The author, his brother-in-law, has had access wall the late Vice-President's public and private papen, which seem to have included a remarkably full collection of newspaper scraps referring to events in Mr. Colfax career. These have been carefully worked into the text. throwing a strong contemporary light on the narrative. A free use has also been made of the correspondence of Mr. Colfax with eminent men. The Crédit Mobilier chare are elaborated and explained in two chapters, a full defeat being given of Mr. Colfax's position, and the whole is a arrowed down to one of veracity between him and Oaks Ames.

Smith, Mary P. W. Miss Ellis's mission. Bost., American Unitarian Assoc., 1886.

Bost., American Unitarian Assoc., 1886. 6+109 p. S. cl., 50 c.; pap., 25 c. Sallie Ellis, who is known throughout the Unitarian denomination as "the little mother of the Post-office mission," was born in Cincinnati. March 13, 1835. She lost her mother early in life, and when yet a girl business reverses swept away her father's entire fortune. Desirous to do something to assist him, she became a dancing teacher. Associating much with children, and ever on the alert for their welfare, she took very naturally to mission work. In 1873, then already a confirmed invalid—deaf, and afflicted with chronic dyspepsia, catarrh, and other troubles—she entered actively into missionary work in Cincinnati. For four and a half years, during a continual struggle with disease, this hero displayed the beauty of a most unselfish nature, and helped others in many ways to bear their loneliness and troubles with better grace. All her work was of an eminently practical nature, and she assisted quite as often those whose needs were of a material character as those who needed spiritual direction and comfort. Miss Ellis died Dec. 27, 1885.

[1886.] 3-173 p. D. (Cassell's rainbow ser.) pap., 25 c.

The scene is laid in Saratoga; the story hinges upon the rivalry of two leading New York journals and their specials, Badger and Slushington, whose duty it was to supply their respective papers with news of this fameus summer resort. A demand made upon Slushington and a desire to get the better of Badger led him to drug a detective, interview a noted gambler, expose a celebrated clergyman, and separate a betrothed couple before his ardor was rewarded and he scored one ahead of his enemy as well as supplied the "Sensatton wanted" by the Morning Era. The author was for two years on the editorial staff of the Troy Times, and is at present connected editorially with the New York World.

Vane, Denzil. Like Lucifer: a novel. N. Y., Harper & Bros., 1886. 59 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin square lib., no. 535.) pap., 20 c. The author has succeeded in making interesting the oft-told tale of hidden wills, usurped propersy, high-society scandal, etc. The scene is laid in a hunting county of England, and some of the descriptions of scenery and sunsets are artistically finished. The villain of the tale is responsible for the title, which is based on a quotation from Shake-

"And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,

THE COPYRIGHT OUTLOOK.

THE report of the Senate Committee on Patents, presenting the Chace copyright bill as modified to the favorable consideration of the Senate, slumbers on the Senate calendar and will not be taken up this session. An effort was contemplated to obtain the passage of the bill in the Senate, so as to give time for action in the lower House before adjournment, but it was deemed unadvisable to take this course As the present Congress lasts till March 4, 1887, the present calendar holds over to the "short session" opening next December, and it is the intention of Senator Chace to bring up his bill early in the session with an important speech on the subject of international copyright in general. The bill has not yet been introduced in the lower House, but that step is likely to be taken early in the short session. The only bill which has been before the House this year was the Hawley bill, introduced by Representative Tucker simultaneously with its introduction in the Senate, and referred to the Judiciary Committee, of which he is chairman and to which copyright bills have usually been referred by the House. It is a curious fact that there has so far never been a direct vote in either house on the subject of international copyright-so that, if there is no prestige of victory, there is also no set-back of defeat.

Abroad the International Copyright Union is an accomplished fact. The Gladstone government procured the passage of an act of Parliament enabling Great Britain to become a party to the Union, which was set on foot at the Berne Conference and which will do as to copyright what the International Postal Union has accomplished in postal administration. The few copies of the Senate Committee's Report, with the evidence, which have reached England, have attracted much attention there as evidence of the earnestness in this matter of many people here, and it is evident that there would be no difficulty in getting such reciprocal legislation as might be required by any bill enacted here.

THE PHYSIQUE OF BOOKS. From the Boston Sunday Herald.

THE main thing is the contents of a book, but much of the enjoyment that grows out of its use belongs to its physique, to its typography, to its paper, to the treatment of its margins, to the style of binding, to the harmony that subsists between its outside and inside, to the understanding on the part of the book-maker of the relation of the real to the ideal in literature. When books were first printed, the most exquisite skill of the age was employed in their manufacture and decoration. It is a delight to the lovers of first editions to turn back to the old folios, to the black letter page, to the ancient binding, to the variegated margins and other decorations, and there are many signs that bookmaking in both England and America is again commanding the thought of artists, and that their physique is being more carefully accommodated to their contents. The Elzevir and the Aldine editions are greatly sought for because they were among the first attempts in latter times to make books attractive by the use of type and paper in artistic ways, but in our own day there has been a clean advance upon the issues of the Chiswick and the Aldine press. The works sent out by several of the great printing houses in England surpass easily the best book-making of fifty years ago, and the satisfaction of it is that the public is educated to demand these better made books, and that the publishers often lavish upon cheap editions the careful and fine work which was once reserved for only the choicest publications. The Macmillans are not the only English house that today distinguishes itself for work of a superior character, though they stand, perhaps, first in efforts to place finely made books in the hands of the public at a reasonable price. The issues of the Clarendon press, the printing house of the Spottiswoodes, the books published by David Douglas and by the late James Maclehose are illustrations of a style of work for which there cannot be too much praise. The moral character of the books thus sent out in fitting dress is felt by those who read them. It seems as if the publisher vied with the author in doing good work, and the reader takes up these volumes with the exquisite feeling that the choice exterior is the fitting casket for the best thought. Such works cannot be made if the public will not buy them. It is gratifying to know that the public appreciates this higher quality in the physique of books, and it is notable that the Macmillans, whose founder, Mr. Daniel Macmillan, was an enthusiast for good printing, have established themselves very largely upon the single issue that the best books could be published in good style, and at cheap rates. The most notable instance of this is, perhaps, the third edition of "Marius the Epicurean," which, in the "Eversley "style, is one of the finest inexpensive books that has been made on either side of the water. Nothing can surpass its beauty, its convenience, the impression of culture and finish which it gives, and yet it does not cost any more than an ordinary American book. The Macmillans have been true to their traditions in doing, perhaps, more than any other English house in bringing the manufacture of books within the strict limits of high art, and the extensive sale of their publications in this country has been, in part, due to the high quality of their work. But they have done still more. They have done something to reproduce the fine quality of book-making which gave the Riverside press its high reputation a quarter of a century ago. The Riverside books of that date command a premium wherever sold, and the best American work is now done after styles which the Macmillans have introduced, and which the Riverside editions made popular years Two books, just now current, may be mentioned as illustrating what is finest and best in the book-making of the day. One is "M. Amiel's Journal;" the other is Mr. John C. Ropes's "First Napoleon." The one is of English manufacture; the other is American. Each is faultless in its way, and it is encouraging to know that the publication of books in this chaste, and yet severely simple, style yields a fair profit. The truth seems to be that the public is now educated to a point where the physiography of books can be studied with the certainty that improvements will be appreciated, and there is much in various lines of American publications which goes to show that publishers find it worth their while to bring out books in a better style than that of former years.

BOOK AMATEURS.

From Tinsley's Magazine.

AMATEURS of books (says Mr. Sala in a characteristic passage) have been divided into bibliognostes, bibliomanes, bibliophiles, and biblio-taphes. "The bibliognoste is learned in titlepages, and editions, presses and places of issue. He knows by heart the criteria of every editio princeps, he has Brunet and Dibdin at his fingers' ends, and can tell you at once that the 'Aristotle' of Manutius, in good condition, is worth £50, but that a Bebel is not worth as many sixpences. The bibliomane is a mere collector, who, blessed with a long purse, buys whatever comes in his way. A bit of a bibliomane was Peter the Great who, when his shelves were built, sent for the booksellers of St. Petersburg and said, 'Fill those with books.' 'With what books, your Majesty?' was the not unnatural question. 'With what books! Why, with big books below, and with little books above!' The bibliophile-the true lover of books-is he who buys to read and to enjoy. The bibliotaphe is he who hides his books away under lock and key, or who immures them in close-fitting glass-cases, and knows little of them beyond their titles and the price which he has paid for each. Nor is it difficult to determine how to class the collector of the famous Perkins library. Possessed of a large private fortune, and senior partner for many years in one of our greatest London breweries, Mr. Perkins would have been a bibliomase had he not been at once bibliophile and bibliopnoste, and we might add, bibliopegist. 'Horae he has,' runs the spiteful epigram, 'by many different hands, but not one Heace that he understands.' Mr. Perkins, it ace that he understands.' need hardly be said was open to no such sneer as this. He was not less widely known as an accomplished scholar than as a book collector. His tastes led him to forma library; his wealth enabled him to form a 1brary which has sold for thousands-a library which monarchs might have envied him; and his bibliognostic skill enabled him to gather together rare and precious works and beautiful copies with an accuracy of choice and of pulgment to which the mere bibliomane can never hope to aspire.

OBITUARY. MR. CHARLES HUTCHINS.

On Friday morning, July 23, Mr. Charles Hutchins, the well-known General Busines Agent of the American Board of Foreign Missions, met with an accident which resulted in death. Mr. Hutchins resided in Arlington and was on his way to Boston to go to his business. He stepped off the wrong side of the car and was immediately struck by an engine and tender that were backing past, causing horrible injuries. He was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital, where he died in a few hours from internal wounds. Mr. Hutchins's business ability was of a rare order, and for twenty years he has successfully filled the position of publishing and purchasing agent of the American Board.

He took charge of the Missionary Herald when its outlook was very poor, and so built up its circulation and influence as to make it a valuable source of income to the Board. He took much interest in the postal laws affecting newspapers and magazines, and became an authority on postal matters, being often consulted at Washington. Mr. Hutchins was born in Thetford Vt., in 1824, and received his education in the schools and colleges of his native State. He taught school for many years, and for ten years was a member of the Boston School Board and Chairman of the Committee on Text-Books Mr. Hutchins was a member of the Congregational Church. He leaves a son and daughter.

BUSINESS NOTES.

CINCINNATI.—Samuel C. Cox & Co. have succeeded Woodruff, Cox & Co., publishers, booksellers, and stationers at 12 West Fourth Street.

HOULTON, ME.—Holland & Co., booksellers, have sold out.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, CAL.— Edward Dane, bookseller, had his stock damaged by fire.

NEW YORK CITY.—C. M. Green, who is well known to the trade as a printer and publisher, has again become involved, and in order to avoid a collision with his creditors left the city, it is supposed, on the 22d inst. Myrick Plummer, the paper dealer, obtained an attachment against the property for $12,500. It is asserted by the creditors that Mr. Green had little or no capital to carry on his extensive business, and that his failure was not altogether unexpected. The business is now in the hands of the sheriff, and at the present writing it is uncertain what will be done with it.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE New York correspondent of the Literary World wonders how many readers of "Sidney Luska's" novel, "Mrs. Peixada," can promounce its name correctly. He has learned from the publishers that it is a Hebrew name, and is pronounced Pashyadah, with the accent on the second syllable.

THE BOWEN-MERRILL Co., Indianapolis, Ind., have issued a unique coin-mailing book. It consists of a card 3x4 inches, perforated with five holes capable of holding eighty-five or less cents. The centre piece will hold 50, 25, or 2 cents; three other holes are made for 10 or 3 cent pieces and one will hold a 5 or a 1 cent piece. The money is secured by a gummed flap.

ESTES & LAURIAT contemplate publishing a third edition of Dr. Elliott Coues's "Key to North American Birds." It will contain the new nomenclature of the American Ornithologists' Union's Committee, with all necessary corrections and additions to date. A separate style of issue, called the Sportsman's Edition, for use in the field, will have thin paper and narrow mar.ins, and be-bound in flexible Russia-leather covers.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. will issue during the fall a new edition of the "History of the War in the Peninsula and in the South of France from 1807 to 1814," by Major-General Sir W. F. P. Napier, K.C.B.. with fifty-five maps, plans, and steel plates, in six volumes, uniform in style with their Chandos Edition of Knight's "Half Hours with Best Authors." The next volume of the Chandos Classics will be the "Sháh Námeh" of Firdausi, the Persian Poet, carefully revised by Rev. J. A. Atkinson, M.A., Hon. Canon of Manchester, the son of the original translator. This clearly-printed and cheap translation of the "Iliad of the East" will no doubt be acceptable to students of Oriental literature.

D. C. HEATH & Co. announce, for October, a book on Manual Training, by Professor C. M. Woodward, of Washington University, St. Louis, who was the founder of the first Manual Training School, strictly so-called, and who shares with Professor J. D. Runkle of Boston, the honor of first advocating practical methods of tool instruction as an element in American education. His book will be exceedingly practical, his main object being to show just how a manual training school should be organized and conducted. He will give courses of study, programmes of daily exercises, and working drawings and descriptions of class exercises in wood and metal. The course of drawing of the St. Louis school, which has proved so eminently successful, will be quite fully given. They announce for September "An Introduction to the Study of Robert Browning's Poetry," by Hiram Corson, Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature in the Cornell University. The work will include, with additions, the papers on "The Idea of Personality, as Embodied in Browning's Poetry," and on "Art as an Intermediate Agency of Personality," which Prof. Corson read before the Browning Society, in London, and which received high commendation from the poet. Several pages will be devoted to Browning's favorite art-form, the dramatic monologue, and to the characteristics of his diction, especially those which sometimes occasion obscurity, if the reader is not familiar with them. In addition to the selections from his works, with explanatory notes, the editor will present exegeses of a number of poems, without the texts; also a bibliography of Browning criticism.

In connection with the regular annual series of Johns Hopkins University Studies in Historical and Political Science, a series of extra volumes is proposed by the editor. It is intended to print them in a style uniform with the regular Studies, but to publish each volume by itself, in numbered sequence and with a neat cloth bind-ing. The volumes will vary in size from two hundred to five hundred pages, with correspond-The first volume, which may be ing prices. looked for early in the fall, will be entitled, "The Republic of New Haven," a new study by Charles H. Levermore, from original records, of a most remarkable chapter of municipal development. Beginning with an English germ in the parish of St. Stephen, Coleman Street, London, Dr. Levermore has traced the evolution of the Rev. John Davenport's church into a veritable commonwealth, in which the life-forces of Old England circulate anew. The Republic of New Haven is unique, and one of the most interesting of all American commonwealths. was a city-state, self-contained, self-sufficing, like the municipal commonwealths of antiquity. It is impossible to measure the greatness of Greek cities or of the Italian republics by their extent of territory. It is equally impossible to estimate the colonial and municipal life of America by any standards of material greatness. And yet few persons realize how tar-reaching in American history is the influence of a single town like New Haven. Not to speak of the intellectual forces which have gone forth from that local republic, from its vigorous church-life and from Yale College, born of the Church, New Haven, like her Mother England, is the parent of a widespread colonial system, not unworthy of comparison with that of Greek cities.

B. QUARITCH will shortly publish the third and final series of Carew Hazlitt's bibliographical collections and notes, which will be printed uniform with the two previous issues of 1876 and 1882.

"The volume of Shelley's 'Essays and Letters,' announced to appear at the end of July, in the Camelot Classics, has been postponed for a month," says the Academy, "in order to include certain valuable copyright matter which the editor has received permission from Sir Percy Shelley to make use of. Instead of it will be given a volume of Sir Thomas Browne's works, including the 'Religio Medici,' essay on 'Urn Burial,' etc., edited, with an introduction, by Mr. J. Addington Symonds."

THE "History of England from Cæsar's Invasion to the Accession of the House of Tudor," on which Sir James H. Ramsay has been engaged for many years, is now approaching completion, says the London Athenæum. The author has had recourse throughout to the original sources, and he has sought to combine in one continuous narrative with our domestic annals a conspectus of military events and foreign affairs in their bearing on internal history. The work will probaby extend to six or eight octavo volumes, and it will be published by the Clarendon Press.

A Large 8vo, over 2500 pages. (Ready in September.)

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction last year, we have decided to apply it to all copies of the "Annual" this year. The price of the book before publication will be ONE DOLLAR AND A HALF NET, including the index. Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut. The price of the book will be raised to Two Dollars net after day of publication.

Delayed or unpaid subscriptions are not entitled to the subscription price ($1.50).

Unless special shipping directions are received, copies ready for delivery will be dispatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for 70 cents per copy extra.

are left of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE of 1876, the foundation volumes of current American bibliography. The type is destroyed, and no more can be printed. The price (two volumes, 4to, half morocco) is now

ADVANCED TO $50.

The right to raise this price is reserved.

Any library, bookseller, or collector who has not a copy should order before it is too late.

The edition is also limited of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1876–1884, now priced at $12.50 paper parts, $15 half morocco. It is worth twice its cost each year in any library or bookstore.

Order through your local bookseller.—" There is no worthier or surer pledge of the intelligence and the purity of any community than their general purchase of books; nor is there any one who does more to further the attainment and possession of these qualities than a good bookseller."—PROF. DUKE.

The above motto heads the monthly "Survey of Current Literature" in every copy of the regular subscription edition of

The Literary News.

It clearly indicates the spirit of this wide-awake little journal. If the main object of the LITERARY NEWS is to make known and recommend for purchase all the good books as soon as they make their appearance, its next object is to send the purchasers of good books to the legitimate book-stores. The LITERARY NEWS is an auxiliary to the Publishers' Weekly. Both are friends and aids to the bookseller. The former is to guide him in his purchases, the latter to aid him in his sales. The LITERARY NEWS is pre-eminently a bookselling paper, and therefore booksellers, in availing themselves of its services, not only further the interests of good literature, but at the same time their own.

There are three ways of using the LITERARY NEWS for bookselling purposes, and he who perseveringly tries one or all of them will be sure to profit by one of the cheapest advertising investments any bookseller can possibly make.

- I. Use its imprint editions, for the purpose of seeking customers at their homes, and to post them on the new books while they still have the attraction of novelty Many sales are lost by waiting for chance calls of customers, when books are on your counter, that he might buy on the spur of the right moment. It is, moreover, an attention that, even as such only, will finally be repaid by any one that cares for books. Send for circular stating terms.
- 2. If you cannot afford to use an imprint edition of at least 50 copies, do the next best to it, by securing subscribers to the handsome subscription edition. No effort will better repay you. A subscription placed is more profitable than the sale of any one book, as it will render you the services of a home agent.

The price of subscription is $1 per annum, with a discount to booksellers only.

3. At least keep one copy on file, and so place it on your front counter or in any conspicuous place, convenient for reference, where it will tempt callers to consult it. You can have no better store "Bulletin;" none that gives a fuller "Survey of Literature" in a more compact manner. Under the new system, just adopted, not only the bare titles of books of a given class are grouped together, but also their descriptive or commendatory notices or references, so that a bookbuyer, almost at a glance, can get more information on his line of books than could be given by the most eloquent salesman.

In order to encourage the use of the LITERARY NEWS at the book-stores, subscribers to the Publishers' Weekly (only) will be supplied with any number of copies at half price, provided we are assured that copies so supplied are used only for purposes indicated under paragraph No. 3. Every salesman should have his own copy of the LITERARY NEWS, read it from cover to cover, and always keep it within his reach.

Sample copies mailed free to any address.

Issued this year without the publishers' advertisements.

THE

For 1886 [Seventeenth Year].

The Educational Catalogue has been found so valuable to the Trade, not only as a finding list, but for circulation among educational customers, for the purpose of soliciting orders and saving at the same time much troublesome correspondence, that its permanent continuance is recognized as a necessity.

The catalogue this year follows the alphabetical system pronounced by the experience of the trade the most satisfactory for practical use. It includes a price-list arranged alphabetically by author's or editor's name, and a detailed subject-index, referring from each specific subject to authors of books on that subject, so that the advantages of both a finding list for the trade and a class catalogue for the use of schools are combined. No other list in the market gives this practical combination.

The list has been entirely reset, to include the new books in their proper alphabetical order, and also to embody all the corrections of prices, omissions, or other errors in last year's catalogue.

Publishers' prices are in all cases given—retail, if retail (in first column); "net," if "net" (in second column); where a "mailing" percentage is specified by the publisher, the "mailing price" is given in the retail column marked with an asterisk. A carefully drawn explanation in the heading, to private buyers, adapts the catalogue to the use of the retail trade.

It should be understood that, of the regular retail-price publishers, only the retail price is given, and the net prices only of those publishers who make it a practice to mail net-price lists to schools—in fact, make their net prices their regular school-supply prices. This point is emphasized in order to meet the objections raised to the quotation of net prices.

It should be well considered that any attempt at withholding, from the educational public, what the publisher, through his agents, advertisements, lists, and circulars, takes special pains to make known, must be an unwise policy. It is not objectionable, but quite proper and legitimate, to charge the retail or mailing price for single copies of any book; but the Educational Catalogue is not generally given away to single-book customers. It is intended only for those who purchase for schools in quantities. Now any one putting himself on record by quoting prices, or prices other than those quoted by the publisher (which prices, it is now understood, are generally still subject to a trade discount), necessarily must drive his school trade into the hands of those who solicit their orders from a catalogue, the prices of which tally with that of the publishers.

The following paragraph from a previous year's Educational Catalogue further elucidates the reasons for our strict adherence to publishers' prices: "Plainly, if it wished to sustain its official character, it was bound to respect the desire of those who have a right to stand by their prices, and who, should their established prices be disregarded, could by their public protest soon discredit the Educational Catalogue as well as those who handled it for circulation. At a time when the public mind, from causes so often discussed and lamented in these columns, is fast losing faith in honest prices, so far as books are concerned, it is of the utmost importance that there be one official list which can be consulted with confidence by the public, as well as by the trade.

In making up special orders for the Educational Catalogue, booksellers should bear in mind that it possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS.

With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5; per 1000, $40.

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5, or $1 if plate is sent.

 Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.

The regular Educational Number of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY" will be supplied at 25 cents per copy, or five for $1, postpaid.

Office of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY,

Booksellers, especially those who sympathine with the work, are urged to keep these books in such The limited discount prevents underselling, and makes the books safe to handle, and there should be large sale in educational institutions and among young men.

NOTES IN SEASON.

WILLARD SMALL has just ready "The English Language: a Brief Historical Sketch for the Use of Literature Classes in High Schools and Academies," by George H. Martin, A.M., agent of the Massachusetts Board of Education, an excellent little manual containing what is necessary for study in the school-room, and showing the many sources from which words have been borrowed.

THE HOMANS PUBLISHING Co. have just published "The Banker's Almanac and Register for 1886," edited by Albert S. Bolles. This is the thirty-sixth year of the publication of this valuable and indispensable work for bankers and merchants, made even more indispensable and complete by the addition of a list of places which have no banks, and the nearest banking town to them to which collections may be sent.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just issued three seasonable little books, which are as attractive outside as inside. "Love and Luck," by Robert Barnwell Roosevelt, the well-known littérateur and sportsman, is "the story of a summer's loitering on the Great South Bay;" "The Children of Old Park's Tavern," by Frances A. Humphrey, and "Jo's Opportunity," by Lucy C. Lillie, are two charming tales for young people. They are both bright, cheery books, rich in descriptions of summer festivities and New England scenery.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Southern Bivouac for August contains several interesting articles on the late war from actors on the other side. General Basil Duke contributes "After the Fall of Richmond," which contains much original matter relating to the treasure train, and to the last council of war. It is one of the most valuable of all the war articles recently published. Mr. J. H. Moore writes of the "Battle of Fredericksburg," and E. Polk Johnson describes a recent visit to Jefferson Davis, his article being accompanied by a portrait of Mr. Davis, which is said to be the best ever made of him.

The North American Review for August contains an article on "Bismarck, Man and Minister," by ex-Minister John A. Kasson; a theological essay in reply to the question, "Why Am I a Catholic?" by Rev. S. M. Brandi, President of the Jesuit college at Woodstock; a posthumous article on "Life Insurance," by Elizur Wright—the last essay he wrote; "Radicalism in France," by Henri Rochefort; "Labor in Pennsylvania," by Henry George; "My Negotiations with General Sherman," by General Joseph E. Johnston, the Confederate general, in which he tells the story of the end of the Confederacy, and shorter articles by Dr. Dexter, General William Farrar Smith, Gideon J. Tucker, William Holmes, Francis L. Ferguson, and ex-Minister Scruggs.

THE August number of the Brooklyn Magasine is especially adapted for summer reading, being full of light, brief, and seasonable articles. "Hamlet's City," by the Hon. W. J. Armstrong, takes the reader in the most interesting fashion through the scenes of Shakespeare's drama in the quaint town of Elsinore, Denmark, and "In a Hindu Crematory" he is carried to Calcutta, India. The most notable feature of this number is Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher's letter from Liverpool, in which she graphically describes the pleasure she received while listening to Gladstone's great Home Rule speech. This is the first of a series of personal letters from England by the Plymouth pastor's wife describing her travels. The English sermons thus far delivered by Mr. Beecher across the water, and the breezy out-of-town sermons of Dr. Talmage, add to the rich literary feast.

N. Y., Harper, [1880.] 50 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 536.) pap., 20 c. Varying scenes and a succession of sensations revolve around the diabolical act of a child. Olga Damien, at the age of ten years, first hears of the exploit of her ancestress. Charlotte Corday; she broods upon the strange story, and finally becomes a youthful Corday, selecting Victor Bursides for her Murat; the Damascene dagger did not do us deadly work, and her intended victim lives and sees that Olga has tried to make "good come of evil," so exacts that she will keep the secret of her crime inviolate. She does this at the expense of misunderstanding, but events does this at the expense of misunderstanding, but events right themselves, and Olga's victim becomes her Victor.

Smart Hawley. Bad to hear; a novel Chif.

Smart, Hawley. Bad to beat: a novel. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1886. 190 p. D. pap., 25 c.

pap., 25 C.

A novel with a strong sporting tendency. It is not entirely taken up with racing matters, however, as so many of this author's works are; but making use of the Sepoy rebellion as a foundation upon which to build, it relates in vigorous, stirring language the adventures of the hero therein; and how, being "bad to beat," he came through it successfully, and was eventually united to a young lady he was principally the means of rescuing. It is a story that appeals to the masculine rather than the feminine mind.

Wentworth, G. A. Elements of analytic geometry. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1886. 5+ 26 p. D. cl., $1.10. Intended for beginners; as they generally find great difficulty in comprehending the connection between a locus amiculty in comprehending the connection between a locus and its equation, the opening chapter is devoted mainly to an attempt, by means of easy illustrations and examples, to make this connection stear. Each chapter abounds in exercises. The more difficult prepositions have been put at the ends of the chapters, under the heading of "Supplementary propositions." This arrangement makes it possible for every teacher to mark out his own course.

Westall, W: The phantom city: a volcanic romance. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1886.] 8+288 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The Lancashire scene, clattering mills, and busy weaver folk, usually so coaspicuous in Mr. Westall's stories, have no place in his last novel, which is based upon the legend of "The phantom city," believed by the Mayan Indians to be a great aboriginal city of Central America that is lost to civilization, and peopled by a race which held sway over that country before Columbus discovered the Western continent. Hearing this tradition, Dr. Carlyon becomes the motor of a Quixotic idea, and makes superhuman efforts to restore the lost city. Fantastic style, coupled at times with a humorous vein, is the most pleasing leature of the book. of the book.

*West Virginia. Supreme Court of Appeals-Reports of cases, by Alfred Caldwell. V. 27-1885-86. Charleston, W. Va., J. B. Taney, St. Printer, 1886. 28+818+49 p. O. shp., $4.

Wood, Rev. J. G. First natural history reader. Bost., Boston School Supply Co., 1886. 100 p. S. (Boston school ser.) cl. net, 20 c.

This book begins a series which has been carefully graduated in both matter and language; the first reader is especially adapted to the wants of small children, and attempts to teach them something about the animals which come under their direct observation, and to pave the way to the scientific classification introduced in the higher books. The entire series can be used in teaching class subject, or is in every way fitted to serve the purpose of the ordinary reading book.

nut St., Phila.

It is understood that the library of a bibliopegist, or rather bibliognost, which Geo. A. Leavitt & Co. have asnounced somewhat extensively, is really that of General Rush C. Hawkins, of "Hawkins' Zouaves" fame. We believe that this remarkable collection of books, which is paticularly strong in vellum, mediaval manuscripts and blact letters, as well as the Elizabethan drama and the ratest Americana, is computed to be worth some $45,000 to $50.000. General Hawkins, himself a bibliographer of route, and the author of "Titles of the First Books from the Earliest Presses in Europe," has left the cataloguing of his library absolutely to Mr. Charles Sotheran. —Bookmari.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

AUGUST 7, 1886.

PUBLISHERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

The trade are invited to send "Communications" to the editor on any topic of interest to the trade, and as to which an interchange of opinion is desirable. Also, matter for "Notes and Oueries" thankfully received.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

AN EXPERIMENT IN CO-OPERATION.

THERE are few who understand-and perhaps it is least of all understood by the labor interest itself-how very much indirect as well as direct loss of business has resulted from the "labor troubles" of the current year. It is, in fact, almost incalculable. Men who were proposing to build new houses, or extend their factories, or develop their business in new directions, or go into business, have been frightened off, and so carpenters and masons and iron-workers and all other mechanics have lost work, and traders have lost profits, and there is less money to be spent accordingly in buying food from farmers or books from booksellers, and they and those whom they employ suffer in turn. Now, in all these matters, an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure, and any experiments toward settling difficulties in advance, by arbitration or by co-operation, is worth general attention, especially when they are within the limits of one's own trade.

We take especial pleasure, therefore, in calling attention to the successful effort made by a publishing and printing firm at the West, Messrs. George W. Crane & Co., of Topeka, Kan., to introduce a system of co-operation, or, rather, of profit-sharing, into their relations with their employés. In the summer of 1885 Mr. Crane addressed a circular to each of the sixty hands, stating in substance that business was not rendering a satisfactory amount of profit. Whether it resulted from high wages or not Mr. Crane could not tell, but he asked each one to try and make his work count for as much as possible, in the hope of proving that the usual way of "cutting down wages" was not always necessary. This produced a great change for the better. The hands always appeared cheerful and active. The printers, both Union and nos-Union, opposed the proposition of forcing the office into the Union, claiming that no demands should be made where there were no complaints. There was less waste of paper and leather. Gas was turned off more promptly when not needed Work did not quit so suddenly at sound of the whistle. The hands all cheerfully worked overtime without pay at extra rates, and when the trial sheet was completed April 1, 1886, there was a very great improvement shown in the result of the business. It is true that it was not entirely caused by the hands, because generally trade was better. But simply on the principle that all who assist in making the business successful should reap some benefits from the success, the following circular was issued:

CIRCULAR TO EMPLOYÉS .- No. 2.

TOPEKA, KAN., April 5, 1886.

About a year ago I addressed a circular to you, stating that the results of the business for some months then past were not satisfactory. Instead of resorting to the usual method of reducing expenses by cutting down wages, I asked each of you to try to prove that that was not necessary, and to try to make up the deficiency by increased exertions.

The result of the semi-annual inventory and comparative statement just completed is highly satisfactory, and shows a large increase in business and profits. This is not entirely caused by your exertions, but I concede that it is in part To the foremen and others whose wages are the same each week regardless of the number of hours they devote to the business, there will be an increase in wages. To all others the wages will remain the same as at present, but nint hours will constitute a day's work; this will make the equivalent of a raise of ten per cent in wages. It is not profitable to the business to have employés work overtime, and it will not be demanded oftener than is absolutely necessary but when overtime is called for, it will be paid for at the same rate per hour as for regular time, except extreme cases of late hours for special work, which will be paid for at special rates and made satisfactory.

For the present, and until otherwise notified by the superintendent, we will operate ten hours per day, the extra hour each day will count as extra time from Saturday, April 3; and hereafter the regular time for quitting on Saturdays will be 4 Р.м.

This new rule will make the scale of wages considerably higher in this office than in others with which we compete, and the only way to make the continuance of such a policy possible will be for each one to use his or her best efforts to turn out good work without waste of time or material.

GEORGE W. CRANE.

As a result, Mr. Crane writes us, there is more cheerfulness and enthusiasm than ever among the hands, and although the scale of wages is higher than competitors are paying, the business still continues to grow. Money is easy, trade good, the house is very rarely annoyed by spoiled and erroneous work (usually a very large item in the printing business), and Mr. Crane feels satisfied that the comparative statement on October I will show a larger increase of profit than ever, in which case the scale will go up ten per cent, or the same scale retained and the hours reduced to the eight-hour system.

Mr. DeVinne's interesting paper in the July Century chronicled the rise and fall of the cooperative printing company which some years ago started in this city. The reasons of that fall he himself clearly outlines—the co-operators were not willing to let their best brains run the business, and, by insisting on the suicidal policy of forcing it to pay all that could be got out of it at the moment, instead of exercising the selfrestraint necessary to develop the future, finally ruined it. Mr. Crane's method of profit-sharing avoids this difficulty because it keeps the directing power in the hands best fitted to exercise it; but it is also a step toward a more thorough cooperation, such as Godin's in France or the Cassells' in England, and it is worth thinking over by all business men who are employers of labor.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

Cassell & Co. warn the public against a swindler who pretends to act as their agent. He agrees to furnish one of their periodicals, and offers four pictures as a premium, for $1, and also offers cheap frames, but does not carry out these contracts. He gives a printed receipt signed 'Cassell & Co.' He is from forty to forty-five years old, tall and thin but of large frame, and has sandy hair and a heavy sandy mustache.

"HANNIBAL OF NEW YORK" is the title of a new novel of New York and Newport life by Thomas Wharton (author of that much differedabout book, "A Latter Day Saint"), which will shortly be published by Henry Holt & Co. in their Leisure Hour Series. Those that have seen the manuscript say that the plot, which turns on the intrigues of two Wall Street money kings, is elaborate and interesting, and the style terse, direct, and abounding in wit.

A. M. BRIDGMAN & Co., of Boston and New York, announce for immediate publication "The Labor Movement; the Problem of To-day," edited by George E. McNeill, who represented the Knights of Labor before the committees of Congress last winter. The character of the work is historical. The growth and development of labor organizations in Europe and America are detailed, and a full account is given of all the trades unions of the United States.

"THE MEMORIAL HISTORY OF HARTFORD COUNTY" in Connecticut, projected by the late firm of J. R. Osgood & Co., on a plan similar to that of the "Memorial History of Boston," and left on hand, with other publications, when the house dissolved, is in a fair way, it is now announced, of being delivered at once to subscribers. Mr. Edward L. Osgood, 60 Congress Street, Boston, a member of the old firm, who finally took charge of getting it out, hopes, as it is practically ready, to send it out early in August.

LAWRENCE SLUTER BENSON, 25 Bond Street, New York City, announces that he will shortly publish two works of which he is also the author—viz., "Geometry, Mensuration, and Trigonometry," a book for schools and colleges, designed to save time and labor to pupils, and to facilitate their practical mastery of mathematics, ly clearly defined fundamentals, easy and reliable processes, and "Religious Belief in all Ages," a historical and analytical treatment, in compact form, of the doctrines of religion, from the remotest traditions to the present time, independently of sectarian bias.

HENRY ALTEMUS has just published new royal and imperial quarto editions of the Oxford Bible, the plates of which were made in London, and were cast from clear, open Pica type, expressly for his house, without regard to cost. It contains upward of twenty thousand notes, critical and explanatory, selected from the great standard authors of Europe and America, by the Rev. Walter McGilvray, D.D., Aberdeen. London Antique styles of bindings of a high standard and designed in Europe will be strictly adhered to, so as to conform to the latest London bindings, thereby virtually enabling him to offer to the trade Oxford Bibles at less than cost of importation.

GINN & Co. have just issued "Our Government," by J. Macy, Professor in Iowa College, a book which gives a clear view of all our governmental institutions and their relations to each other; "Allen and Greenough's New Cicero," revised and edited by Professors W. F. Allen, J. H. Allen, and J. B. Greenough; the edition includes the thirteen orations arranged chronologically, and covering the entire public life of Cicero; and the notes have been thoroughly rewritten, and the book contains portrait, illustrations, and map; "An Alphabetical Table of German Prefixes and Suffixes," by William Cook, editor of "Otto's Grammar," a valuable table intended mainly for reference. They have also ready, in their Classics for Children, "Ivanhoe," by Walter Scott, edited, with notes and introduction, by Charlotte M. Yonge; "Gulliver's Travels," by Dean Swift; and "Plutarch's Lives."

BUSINESS NOTES.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The loss sustained by the American Baptist Publication Society, through the defalcation of their cashier, E. P. Pierson, is estimated at $30,421. Of this amount Pierson has paid back to the Society $17,000. It appears to be the old story. Pierson, anxious to increase his income, began to "speculate" in stocks. When he lost, he drew on the funds of the Society, expecting, of course, to make good his loan at the next lucky turn. Unfortunately, he met with an accident, and the person put in charge of his books soon discovered the discrepancies in the accounts. And now the disgrace. It is not expected that this affair will in any way affect the financial condition of the Baptist Pub. Soc.

The Rear-Guard of the Revolution

By EDMUND KIRKE,

Author of "Among the Pines," etc.

WITH PORTRAIT OF JOHN SEVIER, AND MAP

12mo, cloth. Price, $1.50.

Many readers will recall a volume published during the war entitled "Among the Pines," appearing under the pen-name of Edmund Kirke. This book attained a remarkable success, and all who have read it will recall its spirited and graphic delineations of life in the South. "The Rear-Guard of the Revolution," from the same hand, is a narrative of the adventures of the pioneers that first crossed the Alleghanies and settled in what is now Tennesse. under the leadership of two remarkable men, James Robertson and John Sevier. Sevier is notably the hero of the narrative. His career was certainly remarkable, as much so as that of Daniel Boone. The title of the book is derived from the fact that a body of hardy volunteers, under the leadership of Sevier, crossed the mountains to uphold the patriotic cause, and by their timely arrival secured the defeat of the British army at King's Mountain.

- "Mr. Edmund Kirke sojourned for several years in Western North Carolina and in East Tennessee, and, beis fascinated with our previous history, he became diligent in the collection of facts, which are here embodied in a net interesting volume. The matter does not consist of mere sketches or recitals, but relates a history, and in a style elegation expression and suited to the dignity of the subject."—From a paper adopted by the Tennessee Historical Society.
- "Mr. Kirke has not only performed a real and lasting service to American historical literature in the production of this work, but has honored the memory and paid a tribute of richly deserved praise to a band of men as brave and loyal and heroic as ever poured out their lives and treasure for their country's good,"—New York Observer.
- "No work of the kind that equals it in interest and importance has been published for many years. It is a distinct contribution to the history of the American Revolution, and even to the most industrious students of that period many dist facts will come as a revelation."—Philadelphia Times.
- "This book is gravely and elegantly written. The events with which it is concerned are already more than a hardered years distant from us, and have acquired that historical perspective and atmosphere which are indispensable to a enlightening and comprehensive treatment. Mr. Kirke has thoroughly equipped himself for his task, and his management of it is compact and perspicacious."—New York World.

CONFIDENCE

in the superiority of the "Oxford" editions leads the publishers to make 'the following announcement and simple request.

INDIA PAPER. "OXFORD

The India Paper used for the "Oxford" Thin Editions of Bibles and Prayer Books is a specialty of the "Oxford" University Press, and is used exclusively for "Oxford" Books Its characteristics are extreme opacity, great toughness and softness, and an agreeable tone. The strength and flexibility of the fibre is so great that the paper may be used for years without becoming injured by wear; 'and the material is so opaque that it can be made to a degree of thinness only limited by the possibilities of printing. In the case of some editions a ream of this paper-four hundred and eighty sheets, each sheet measuring 171/2 x 221/2 inches—weighs only seven pounds, and yet this paper is beautifully soft to the touch, strong enough to bear a great strain. and of such opacity that the impression on one side does not show through when the other side is being read. The "Oxford" India Paper has been manufactured in order to meet the popular demand for thin books, and is admitted to be without a rival.

Messrs. Thomas Nelson & Sons ask the trade to carefully examine any so-called "India" Paper Editions from presses other than the Oxford before placing orders.

"OXFORD" BIBLE WAREHOUSE.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Messrs. Geo. R. Lockwood & Son desire to inform the trade that they have in active preparation a very attractive and novel line of Christmas souvenirs. They are as follows:

LOCKWOOD'S PARCHMENT DAINTIES."

This Series, so well known, has reached in a single year a sale of many thousands, and is perhaps the most popular line of booklets ever put on the market. They will be issued in a decidedly novel style, more attractive than ever.

line of bookiess was part of they are:

1. GLAD TIDINGS. (New this season.)

2. 'TIVAS THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS.'

3. THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM.

4. POEMS FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR. By Frances Ridley Havergal.

5. CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES. By Charles Dickens and Washington Irving.

Retail price, 40 cents each.

HOLLY LEAVES. MISTLETOE SPRAYS.

These two novelties consist of appropriate verses, bound in dainty covers, each being cut in the shape of the leaves named (so universally associated with Christmas), and richly lithographed in bright colors and hard polished silver. They are remarkably original as to shape, and will readily be recognized as a refined and popular Christmas souvenir.

Retail price, 50 cents each.

FROM "BEN HUR."

This souvenir is issued with the kind permission of Messrs. Harper & Bros., publishers of "Ben"Hur," and Gen. Lew Wallace, its author. It consists of four colored etchings, illustrating the meeting of the three wise mea as Seekers after the Light, and the appearance of the star, announcing the birth-place of the Redeemer. The etchings are accompanied by text explanations selected from "Ben Hur." Embossed silver stamping on a heavy tinted cardboard, bound with a wide satin ribbon to match, forms the very unique cover.

The unprecedented and continued sale of "Ben Hur" needs no comment, and we therefore feel confident that the many thousand readers of that interesting book will be gratified also to possess this little token, so appropriate for a Christmas gift.

Retail price (in a box), $1.50.

Samples of the above three lines will be ready on the 18th of this month. The trade are respectfully urged to reserve a place for them in their stock. Correspondence solicited.

NOTES IN SEASON.

WILLIAM S. GOTTSBERGER publishes this week "Aphrodite," a romance of ancient Hellas, by Ernst Eckstein, translated from the German by Mary J. Safford.

D. APPLETON & Co. have almost ready a new volume in their popular twenty-five cent series—"Dear Life," by J. E. Panton—which is said to be a strong story, well worked out.

HARPER & BROTHERS issue this week "A Playwright's Daughter," by Mrs. Annie Edwards in the Handy Series, and "The One Thing Needful," by Miss M. E. Braddon, in the "Franklin Square Library."

JAMES J. CHAPMAN, Washington, D. C., begs to notify the trade that, owing to the late adjournment of the last session of Congress, "McPherson's Hand Book of Politics for '86," announced to be ready on the 15th, will not be issued until the 23d of August.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready "The Story of Spain," by Edward Everett Hale and Miss Susan Hale, in their Story of the Nations Series; "The Temple of Alanthur, and Other Poems," by Isaac R. Baxley; "Reymond, a Drama of the American Revolution," by Henry M. Cronkhite; and in the Travellers' Series Hood's "Whims and Oddities" and Macquoid's "Pictures and Legends from Normandy and Brittany."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Stamp Collector is the name of a new periodical started in Chicago.

The Bookmart for August contains a comprehensive and useful "Bibliography of Playing Cards," compiled by Mr. Albert R. Frey, of the Astor Library. It embraces not only fulk titles of works in English, but in foreign languages, with place and date of publication and size.

The Decorator and Furnisher announces that Mr. George R. Halm, the well-known artist and designer, has been secured for that publication as art director. This brilliant addition to its already strong staff promises to make the journal one of the best of its kind published in this city.

Shakespeariana proposes to open a new department in the October number—"The School of Shakespeare," approved by Dr. Furness and Mr. Rolfe—which seeks to bring the co-operative principle to bear upon Shakespeare study, to encourage the efforts of students and co-ordinate the results of the labors of scholars for the common good.

The publishers of the Polyclinic inaugurate the opening of the sixth volume by doubling the number of pages of reading matter in the July number, and adding a handsome cover. A change in the contents and arrangement will also be made. These new features will more than double the usefulness and practical value of the journal, while the subscription price will remain as before.

THE department in Lippincott called "Our Experience Meetings" is to be abandoned, at least in its departmental sense. Hereafter articles of the class that have been printed under that general heading will be allowed to stand by themselves independently. Several promising ones have already been engaged from Brander Matthews, H. H. Boyesen, R. H. Stoddard, Walt Whitman, George P. Lathrop, and Robert J. Burdette.

Babyhood, in its August issue, introduces a department of "Nursery Observations," ing of short extracts from its large and varied correspondence describing special traits of children. It says: "Such a compilation of the observations of parents, representing as it will a great variety of circumstances and surroundings, should, we believe, be useful for the purpose of comparisons, since comparison is the most helpful way of solving many questions, great and small, which arise in the minds of parents who are interested in knowing whether certain individualities are usual or peculiar. While making no pretensions to scientific achievement, such a record cannot fail in time to have a scientific value."

socialism and labor problems. N. Y., Appleton, 1886. 3-273 p. D. cl., $1.25.
A course of lectures delivered last winter by the paster of the First Baptist Parsonage, Providence, R. I. They aim to illustrate his conviction that true economic principle and right economic action are intimately related to Christian morality. His first discourse inquires, Is there a social problem? and What has Christianity to do with it? Following is a brief history of modern socialism; the socialists indictment against modern society, and a statement of what the socialist demands. He asks, "Is revolutionary socialism an impending peril?" Answering that it is, if the complaints of the discontented are not listened to and their wrongs righted. The errors and truths of socialism are pointed out, trades unions and the knights of labor, industrial co-operation, and the responsibilities of wealth discussed. The concluding chapters relate to the church and the workman; personal morality an industrial force; and a survey of the field. A bibliography covering nearly 40 pages of the topics referred to in the work is a valuable feature.

Campbell, Mrs. Helen. Miss Melinda's op-portunity: a story. Bost., Roberts Bros.,

Miss Melinda after her sister Matilda's death goes on Calle massion reading history, "Scott's Miss Melinda after her sister Matilda's death goes on living in the family mansion, reading history, "Scott's Commentaries," and very instructive literature just so many hours a day, as she had been accustomed to do for nearly fifty years with Miss Matilda. She is a descendant of the old Dutch New Yorkers, and knows no people outside her set. One Sunday a young clergyman wakes her up by preaching a sermon on "Spirits in prison," and the good work that could be done among working-girls in New York City. She begins to think and then to help, finding by chance her "opportunity." Mrs. Campbell is well known as a great worker among the working classes, and in this story she proposes several schemes that would seem practical.

of a transparent mystery. N. Y., Appleton, 1886. 392 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The scene is laid in Yorkshire. Arthur Lincoln Range, fresh from the States, is a truly English conception of an inhabitant of Uncle Sam's dominion; not a bad fellow, on the whole, frank, manly, and wealthy, lacking only the werldly polish deemed essential in a gentleman, he near-rowly escapes death at the dawn of his love affair, and becomes the prey of sharpers, who endeavor to extert money from him by putting him in all sorts of improbable situations, from which he extricates himself by matching his cunning against that of the rogues. There are several love complications to add color to an intensely interesting novel.

a novel. Bost., Robert Bros., 1886. 273 p. S. cl., £1; pap., 50 c.
Mrs. Hamerton is the "Eugenie" to whom her husband. Philip Gilbert Hamerton, dedicated his book, "The intellectual life." She tells a simple tale of French middle class life, with the same realism that is characteristic of Mr. Hamerton's novels of France—personal observation and experience being the valuable basis from which each have worked. Jean Molé having finished his collegiate course in England, comes home for a visit, bringing with him some English friends, who hire a small house for the summer near his parents' home in Champignol. Intimacies ensure among all the young people, out of which two love affairs spring. The writer's chief motive seems to be to compare English and French methods of thought and living, social habits and customs, etc. and living, social habits and customs, etc.

Hamlin, Mrs. Myra Sawyer. A politician's daughter. N. Y., Appleton, 1886. 2-23I p. D. hf. cl., 75 c.

A heroine of an unusual type and a bright, cultivated style lift this novel out of the ordinary run of novels. Some party papers are accusing the author of typifying Blaine in the leading character, an unsuccessful candidate for the Presidency, whose public career is ruined by his compromising himself while in Congress with a railroad enterprise in which he owns stock. The scene is laid in a New England town first, and afterward in New York. The story is among cultured people, and is unusually rich in clever talk showing, knowledge of all the political issues of the day. Miss Harcourt has fed on politica from her birth, and lived among her father's friends, hence is an unusually strong type of womanhood, charming nevertheless, and full of tact and grace. Mrs. Hamlin is a niece by marriage of the Hon Hannibai Hamlin-she was formerly of Bangor, but is now a resident of New York. York.

Mrs. Humphrey has skilfully interwoven the threads of history and fiction, and the result is a charming story, which recounts some incidents in the childhood of Dorothea Winslow and Ned Parks at the "old Park's tavern," built in Byfield about 1680. Although the scene is laid in Byfield, we have a passing glimpse of Hingham, Plymouth, Marshfield, and other historic towns along the south shore of Massachusetts Bay, as well as some pleasing reminiscences of Daniel Webster, Emily Marshall, and some New Eagland celebrities who lived in the early part of the eighteenth century. eighteenth century.

The two widows, both named Chilcotes, and connected by marriage, cast their lot together after the death of Mr. Edward Chilcotes. They are young, beautiful, and wealthy, and of some social importance in London. Their sorrows and joys, their pleasures and amusements, and in a little while their love affairs make a very pretty readable story.

The beautiful and picturesque summer resort of Southern California, sometimes called the Nice of America, is with its interesting surroundings described in this pretty little book in a succession of chapters entitled "With the Barbarefos," "Along the Pacific Shore," "La Mision de Santa Barbara," "Spanishtown and La Patera," "By-ways of the Santa Ynez," "The Ojai Valley," "Idle days in the Santa Clara," "The home of Ramona," and "Facts worth knowing." Having exhausted almost all places of summer and winter resort, the fortunate people of whom this rollicking story treats resolve to build a yacht and spend the next summer sailing about from place to place. The plan is formed at Saratoga, which they find very hot; the boat is built at Garden City and launched on the Sound. The characters are well described, particularly the young man who spent all his time changing his suits and "gurgling" his replies. The author's reputation as a sportsman is so who spent am time changing in some and garging in its replies. The author's reputation as a sportsman is so well known that it is needless to say when the boat is finally started things move briskly. A fondness for frequent meals and plentiful supplies of champagne characterizes several members of the party.

Hannibal St. Joseph and Paul Cradge are two millionaires, who have not scrupled at many crooked dealing to amass their fortunes. The wife of Hannibal St. Joseph is the leading character. Having deceived him concruing her past, when he married her, he never lets her forget that he no longer trusts her; she is his slave and tool, and he is a most cruel taskmaster. He desires to conquer society, and her clever head is set to work; with unscrupulous impudence, she routs her enemies and rival, and soon takes a leading place in the fashionable world of New York and Newport. There is no special plot or motive, the book being rather a succession of scenes taken from social and business life, in which the worst traits of humanity are illustrated. PUBLISHERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

THE SUBSCRIPTION BOOK DECISIONS.

THE subscription book case in the United States District Court in Philadelphia may be briefly stated as follows, on the basis of the statements of the parties themselves and of their counsel:

General Grant contracted with C. L. Webster & Co. for the publication of his "Personal Memoirs" by subscription. C. L. Webster & Co. in turn contracted with general agents for the sale of the book, requiring them to bind themselves and their agents not to sell it except by subscription—that is, to private buyers as distinguished from dealers. It is understood that the general agents, to obtain a contract for specified territory, were obliged to order a very large number of copies in advance of subscriptions, which accounts for the alleged large offers of the book to the book trade. In delivering the book, the publishers used a combination of stars and other marks to identify the books delivered respectively to the several general agents. Some months ago John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, advertised and sold copies of the book at a price below the subscription price. It proved that something less than five hundred copies of the book had been purchased from a person who had them from an agent of J. M. Stoddard & Co., general agents for Philadelphia, though it was said that the star-mark had been obliterated or disguised by stamping a plain line across the stars. Samuel L. Clemens (" Mark Twain") accordingly brought suit in behalf of C. L. Webster & Co., in which firm he is a partner, for a preliminary injunction against John Wanamaker to restrain him from the sale of the

The application was denied by Judge Butler, of the United States District Court, in a decision rendered August 9. In his opinion the judge says: "If this case was substantially identical with the Henry Bill Publishing Company v. Smith, recently decided by the Circuit Court for Ohio, we would esteem it our duty to follow the ruling in that case, and grant the writ. It is not however. In some material respects the cases are clearly distinguishable. The one before us seems to resemble Clemens v. Estes, 22 Fed. Rep., 899, in which the writ was refused. As the question must be further considered on final hearing, when the facts may be more fully developed, it would be unwise to discuss it at this time. After full consideration, the complainants' rights, as disclosed by the affidavits and accompanying papers, are not deemed sufficiently clear to warrant the preliminary writ asked for."

This decision, though it is advertised by Mr. Wanamaker in the Philadelphia papers as a viadication of his course, settles nothing. It is the custom of Judges to refuse preliminary injusctions, unless the case is prima facic clear, and Judge Butler's course postpones decision until the full argument is heard. It raises a presumption, however, that the plaintiffs' case is not entirely clear, which would have some weight should the plaintiffs not proceed to final hearing.

Mr. Wanamaker states in his advertisement that the book "was offered to us unsolicited long before the publication of the second volume." This statement emphasizes one of the peculiar legal difficulties of this case, and of all similar cases. While a publisher would seem to have an indisputable right to recover damages for breach of contract against the other party to the contract, it is fairly questionable whether he can prosecute parties outside of the contract for the sale of books or other goods in disregard of the contract conditions. Messrs. Webster notified the trade generally of the conditions of sale, and in view of this notification, they claim that books bought when the conditions of their original sale are notorious, are practically stolen books. 🍱 further support of this claim, they assert that the books are under the contract virtually their books until they are delivered to individual subscribers under the terms of the contract. If, under their "iron-bound contract" they have no practical remedy in the courts, it is difficult to see how subscription books can in any possible way be kept out of the trade.

The references of Judge Butler to previous cases are rather curious. The case of the Henry Bill Publishing Company v. Smith, as to Mr. Blaine's book, heard in the United States Circuit Court in Ohio, in which decision was handed down by Judge Hammond while at Memphis, July 3, would seem to a layman to give much less ground for a strict ruling than the Grant book. Judge Hammond's decision (see Publishers' Weekly, July 10, p. 37) was to the effect that it was "piracy" on a copyright to sell, without the author's consent, copies surreptitiously obtained. This was extraordinarily broad ground, and would seem to cover almost any case that could be raised; and Judge Butler's reference to the case was perhaps only the judicial method of saying that he couldn't agree with it. On the other hand, the case of Clemens v. Estes, which came up before Judge Cole, of Boston, in January, 1885, was an attempt to restrain Estes & Lauriat from advertising Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn," in advance of publication, for the under-cut price of $2.75. The injunction asked for was not granted. What the bearing of this case is on the Philadelphia case, it is difficult to see.

It is easy to be indignant, on behalf of the trade, at the attempt to keep subscription books out of its hands and thus to hold them at an abnormally high price, or, on behalf of subscription publishers, at the willingness of the trade to sell copies somewhere or other tainted with breach of contract. There are few cases which present a more thorough dilemma either in ethics or at law. It is to be hoped that the legal question may be solved, by the pursuit of the case up to the highest court of appeal, on the part of two opponents so able to do their own fighting and with so specific a case to fight upon.

THE English copyright case of Maxwell v. Reid, recently settled by the dismissal of the plaintiff's appeal, introduces no new principle into copyright law. The widow of Captain Mayne Reid, in the original case of Reid v. Maxwell, sued to restrain the publisher named from printing in England the American edition of "The Finger of Fate" under that or any other title. The original decision, which was upheld by the Lords Justices, was to the effect that while the defendant might possibly reprint lawfully the parts first issued in America, he certainly could not so use certain other parts which had first been published in England. The chief interest in the decision was in the side-issue mentioned (but not decided), the yet unsettled point whether first publication in another country takes away an Englishman's copyright in England. Lord Justice Cotton, while avoiding any definite decision, expressed his opinion that such first publication abroad did not vitiate English copyright.

OBITUARY.

JOHN F. TROW.

JOHN F. TROW, Vice-President of the Trow City Directory Company, died Sunday, August 8, at the home of his son-in-law, Aaron Carter, Jr., in Tremont Avenue, Orange, N. J. Mr. Trow was born in Andover, Mass., in 1809. He was educated in the Andover public schools, and while yet a boy learned the trade of printer in an Andover printing-office. He came to New York in 1933 and worked at printing. Seven years later he became interested in the publication of a directory, and in 1852 he became publisher of Trow's New York City Directory, the one hundredth yearly volume of which was issued last June. Mr. Trow bought the Directory from Charles R. Rode, who had succeeded John Doggett, Jr., whose predecessors had been Thomas Longworth, David Longworth, and David Franks, the founder of the Directory, in 1786. Mr. Trow published the Directory until 1871, when he was succeeded by the Trow City Directory Company, of which he was Vice-President. In addition to his Directory business, in which, besides the general Directory, he published three business directories and a street directory, he was engaged extensively in the printing business as President of Trow's Printing and Bookbinding Company, at No. 201 East Twelfth Street.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

OUIDA has written a new romance, to which she has given the title of "The Story of a House Party."

MISS CLEVELAND is at work upon a new novel of Washington life, "Rex and ex-Rex," which will probably be ready for publication in the autumn.

PRINCE IBRAHIM HILWRY, son of the ex-Khedive Ismail of Egypt, must be added to the list of regal and princely authors. He has been writing a history of "The Literature of Egypt and the Soudan," which will be published in London in two large quarto volumes.

MRS. A. G. PADDOCK has in hand a realistic serial descriptive of the experiences of early prospectors in the new Northwest, entitled "The Lost Gold Wedge," and a novel intended as a thunderbolt for the Mormons, called "The Outlaws of the Great Basin."

MR. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, Jr., has consented to write the life of the late Richard H. Dana, Jr., and desires to obtain any letters written by Mr. Dana that are not strictly private and might be of use for the biography. If sent to Mr. R. H. Dana, No. 30 Court Street, Boston, they will be copied and returned.

LORD TENNYSON is said to have in hand a number of new poems. The most memorable of these is a piece which may be described as a postscript to "Locksley Hall." The hero of the poem reappears as a broken-down man of eighty, whose modified views about life and liberty may be taken to reflect the Laureate's own.

GOLDWIN SMITH is writing an article for one of the English reviews on George Fox, the founder of the Society of Friends. Mr. Goldwin Smith's object is not so much to delineate the character or to sketch the career of the remarkable Quaker as to present a picture of the Puritan society in which he was so notable a figure.

ALFRED AUSTIN is engaged on a long poem, most of which is already written, called "Prince Lucifer." In form it is dramatic; and the story, which is a romantic one, and the action of which takes place in the neighborhood of the Matterhorn, is intended to reflect, in a fanciful garb, the religious conflict and ethical uncertainties of the age.

A "LIFE OF SAINT ANDREW," the patron saint of Scotland, has been written by Mr. Peter Ross, secretary of the North American United Caledonian Association, and will be published next month from the office of the Scottish-American, New York. Besides fully tracing the saint's career, the author shows his influence upon Scotland, and devotes considerable space to sketching the history of several of the more important St. Andrew's societies in this country and Canada. The volume should prove of special interest to Scotsmen and their descendants in this country.

PERSONAL NOTES.

S. GEORGE WILKINSON, of Oxford University Press Warehouse, London, arrived in this city last Saturday via the Etruria. He will remain here for several weeks, making his headquarters at Thomas Nelson & Sons, 42 Bleecker Street.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

GEORGE R. LOCKWOOD & SON call attention in our advertising columns to an attractive and novel line of Christmas souvenirs that they have in preparation, and samples of which they will be ready to show on the 16th of this month.

MAJOR BEN PERLEY POORE, the veteran journalist, has completed his "Social Reminiscences of Sixty Years in the National Metropolis," and his publishers, Hubbard Bros., Philadelphia, enpect to issue the first volume about August 25. The work is published by subscription.

MR. JOHN H. HICKCOX, Washington, D. C., has published a separate edition in pamphlet shape of his "Bibliography of the Writings of Franklin Benjamin Hough, M.D.," compiled by him to form part of a memorial prepared under the direction of the Regents of the University of New York.

LEANDER RICHARDSON'S clever and amusing volume, "The Dark City," descriptive of the surface life and sights of London, has been reprinted in that city under the title "As Yankees See Us," and is said to be giving the Britons considerable entertainment. Doyle & Whitle, Boston, are the American publishers.

MR. LELAND (Hans Breitmann) has written a work entitled "Wonderful Anecdotes of Animals," by Professor Annan-Eyas Saltiame (Ananias Salt Yarn), which is to be copiously illustrated by Lord Ralph Kerr, who is said to have a wonderful gift or faculty of drawing come animals. The work was suggested by the Countess Brownlow, to whom it will be dedicated.

The publishers of the "Encyclopædia Britannica" estimate that four additional volumes will be required to complete the work. P and R have both proved long letters, and S threatens to be long also. It is believed that T and U can be brought into one volume, while the last volume can embrace V to Z and the general index. These volumes are likely to spread over two years at least, making thirteen years since the work was begun.

THE Interstate Publishing Company, of Chicago and Boston, have issued a new edition of "The Supplemental Dictionary," by Rt. Rer. Samuel Fallows, D.D. It is claimed that this dictionary contains nearly thirty-five thousand words, phrases, and new definitions of old words, not found in the latest editions of Webster's or Worcester's Unabridged. It is uniform in size and style with Webster's Unabridged, and contains five hundred and thirty pages. The work will hereafter be sold to the trade, and the price reduced.

ROBERT CLARKE & Co. have just published a pamphlet by General A. Hickenlooper, President of the Cincinnati Gas-Light and Coke Co. of special interest to gas-light companies. It is entitled "Edison's Incandescent Electric Lights for Street Illumination," and is the report of an argument delivered by the author before the Cincinnati Committee on Light, in which he sets forth, with a remarkable array of facts and figures, and in an exhaustive and almost convincing manner, the advantages that gas possesses over electricity for illuminating large cities.

MR. ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON'S recent books, we learn from his publishers, Messrs. Scribner, lawe had remarkable success in this country. If his story "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," 22,000 have already been sold, and the book is now elling at the rate of 1000 every week. It has een reviewed by one hundred and seventy-two lewspapers, and has furnished the text for nearly score of editorial articles. It is estimated that he notices and editorials, printed in the Amerian papers alone, contains over three times as nany words as the volume itself. Mr. Stevenon's new story, "Kidnapped," was published n July 15, and the first edition of 10,000 copies as already been exhausted.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have published "Road and Roadside," by Burton Willis Potter, an inaluable work on the practice of road-building—rom legal and other standpoints—laying out of grounds, and other kindred matters. They will also soon publish "The English Parliament in ts Transformations through a Thousand Years," by Dr. Rudolf Gneist, author of "The History of the English Constitution;" "A Nomenclature of Colors for Naturalists and Compendium of Useful Knowledge for Ornithologists," by Robert Ridgeway, with ten hand-colored plates of different shades of color and seven plates of outline illustrations. The next volume in the Badminton Library of Sports will be "Shooting." It will appear shortly.

An article of considerable general interest in the Popular Science Monthly for August is one by James Sully on "Genius and Precocity." He cites several remarkable examples of genius developed late. Cowper, Wordsworth, Dryden, and Dante all missed renown till after forty, and of these Cowper appears not to have begun to write till after that age. Dante, like Milton, passed his early manhood in the service of the State, and Dryden and Wordsworth began to write when young, and so "are signal examples of a long, unrewarded fidelity to the muse." Among novelists Defoe first struck into the path of fiction at the age of forty-four, and only wrote "Robinson Crusoe" eleven years later. Richardson published his first work of fiction at fity-one. Sterne tried his luck as a novelist by publishing "Tristram Shandy" at forty-six, while Cervantes produced his masterpiece at fity-seven.

MISS BRADDON'S new novel, "One Thing Needful," will be issued early in August.

Sampson Low & Co. have just issued "A Book of the Running Brook and of Still Waters," by Lady Colin Campbell.

A New original poem of twelve stanzas, by Mr. Swinburne, entitled "A Word for the Navy" (1885), will shortly appear in a collection of sea songs, etc., to be published by Redway.

UNDER the title of "A Young Philistine, and Other Stories," Burns & Oates are about to issue a collection of tales from the pen of Miss Alice Corkran. The volume is dedicated to Mr. Browning.

MR. PAGET TOYNBEE hopes shortly to place the first portion of his "Dictionary to the Divina Commedia" in the printer's hands. The complete work will probably form one thick volume, and will be published by George Bell & Sons.

MACMILLAN & Co. will shortly publish, in their educational series, "A First Poetry Book for Schools," arranged by Miss M. A. Woods, head mistress of the Clifton High School for Girls; and "Our National Institutions," a short sketch for schools, by Anna Buckland.

BLACKWOOD & SONS have in the press "Norah Moriarty; or, Loyal and Disloyal Irish," a novel dealing largely with the moral effect of the Land League agitation upon the population of Ireland, and said to be founded on a knowledge of the inner workings of the Land League and its agents.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & Co. will publish immediately Biroat's "Eucharistic Life of Christ," translated by E. G. Varnish, with an introductory preface by the Rev. Arthur Tooth; also a new novel entitled "Old Iniquity," by Miss Phoebe Allen; and "Political Issues of the Nineteenth Century," by J. L. J.

Miss IZA DUFFUS HARDY is bringing out a book entitled "Oranges and Alligators; or, Life in South Florida," wherein she relates her experiences in South Florida during a recent visit. It will be published by Ward & Downey. This house also announces two new novels. "In One Town," by the author of "Anchor Watch Yarns," and "the Master of the Ceremonies," by G. Manville Fenn.

THE world-renowned composer and pianist, Franz Liszt, who died July 31, at Bayreuth, was a writer as well as a musician, and in the department of literature as well as of art. He published "The Life of Chopin" in 1852-54, and essays on the "Tannhauser" and "Lohengrin" of Wagner; and in 1859 a dissertation on "Bohemians and their Music in Hungary." His memoirs are in press and will shortly be published in London.

MR. GLADSTONE, replying to inquiries as to the best books on the historical side of the Irish question, is reported, so says the Critic, to have recommended Goldwin Smith's article on Pitt in his "English Statesmen," Lecky's "Leaders of Public Opinion in Ireland" and "History of England in the Eighteenth Cntury," many portions of Froude's "English in Ireland in the Eighteenth Century," "Lord Cloncurry's Personal Recollections of his Lifetime, with Extracts from his Correspondence," and, above all, Burke; especially his writings on America as applied to Ireland. As regards the recent history of the land question, Mr. Gladstone recommended Barry O'Brien's articles in the Nineteenth Century.

The first portion of George Augustus Sala's autobiography, which he is now preparing, and which is expected to be published during the autumn by Richard Bentley & Son, will describe his boyhood, 1828-35, and will then give an account of the ten years 1835 to 1845, and will contain reminiscences of Bellini, Grisi, Paganini, Lablache, Braham, Tom Moore, Theodore Hook, Dickens, Thackeray, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Melbourne, Mrs. Norton, the "mad" Marquis of Waterford, the Countess Waldegrave, the Duke of Brunswick, Harriet Duchess of St. Albans, Count D'Orsay, Napoleon III., Mark Lemon, Buckstone, Webster, Madame, Vestris, Charles Mathews, Dejazet, and others. Mr. Sala's account of his recent Australian experiences will appear before the autobiography.

NOTES IN SEASON.

D. Appleton & Co. have just ready a new edition, fully revised to date, of "Appletons' Dictionary of New York."

HARPER & BROS.' new books for this week are "Our Radicals," by Fred Burnaby, in Harper's Handy Series, and "Two Pinches of Snuff," by William Westall, in the Franklin Square Library.

CASSELL & Co. have just published a new novel by Mrs. J. H. Walworth, the author of "The Bar-Sinister," and "Without Blemish." It is called "The New Man at Rossmere," and is a story of Arkansas in the days succeeding the war.

HENRY HOLT & Co. will have ready immediately a new novel by the popular author of "Oblivion." Miss M. G. McClelland calls her work "Princess," and it is intended to issue it both in the Leisure Hour and the Leisure Season series.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

MR. SIDNEY GALPIN, son of Thomas D. Galpin, of the firm of Cassell & Co., will succeed Mr. W. E. Henley as editor of the Magasine of Lippincott's Magazine for September will contain a paper by Mrs. Bloomfield Moore on "Mr. Keely's Etheric Force," and some "Random Recollections" by Brander Matthews.

"Ex-President Porter on Evolution" is the title of the opening article in the forthcoming September number of the Popular Science Monthly. It is by Mr. W. D. Le Sueur, already well known as an able writer on the relations of theology and evolution, and is an outspoken review, as entertaining as it is effective, of Dr. Porter's recent address before the Nineteenth Century Club.

THE Quarterly Review for July (Leonard Scott Pub. Co.) has most interesting papers on "The Growth of the English Novel" and "The Sacred Books of the East." In other fields it gives equally valuable information on "Bribery, Ancient and Modern;" "China and the West;" "The Flight to Varennes;" "Modern Christian Missions;" "New Markets for British Industry;" "The Greek Islanders;" "Party and Principle," and "Mr. Gladstone and Ireland."

THE September Century will contain a paper on Liszt, which, while it has been for some months in preparation, happens to appear at a time when it will be read with unusual interest. It is an account of a summer with Liszt at Weimar, written by one of his pupils Mr. A. M. Bagby, and is full of interesting anecdotes and reminiscences. The accompanying illustrations include a frontispiece portrait of Liszt and a full-page picture of "the Master" seated at the piano, both engraved by Johnston.

THE Edinburgh Review for July (Leonard Scott Pub. Co.) discusses "Modern Trade and the Means of Exchange;" "The Prose Works of Percy Bysshe Shelley;" "A Cruise in the Western Pacific;" "Bishop Lightfout's Apostolic Fathers;" "Lady Marion Alford on Art Needlework;" "The Arabian Nights;" "The Correspondence of Marshall Devout;" "Prof. Prestwick on Geology;" "A Teaching University of London;" "The Voice of Memnon," and "The Crisis."

THE Westminster Review for July (Leonard Scott Pub. Co.) contains articles on "The Endowments of the Church of England;" "The Genius and Character of Charles Lamb;" The Colonial and Indian Exhibition;" "Ernest, King of Hanover;" "A New View of the Registration of Title to Land;" "What and How to Read;" "The Basis of Individualism;" "The Growth of Colonial England: British South Africa;" "Mr. Gladstone's Irish Policy;" "The Socialist Movement," and its usual admirable classified criticisms of the books of the day.

Bowen, Eliza A. Astronomy by observation:

Bowen, Eliza A. Astronomy by observation: an elementary text-book for high schools and academies. N. Y., Appleton, 1886. 90 p. maps and il. Q. bds., $1.17.

This book has grown out of actual school work, in which it was the teacher's object to make pupils studying elementary astronomy observe and think. The following are its chief peculiarities: t. An efficient, easy, well-tried plan for teaching the constellations is described. 2. Careful directions are given when, how, and where to find the heavenly bodies; their motions are described in the order in which they can be seen by an observer, and in familiar language. 3. The student is excited to thought. Facts are stated first, theory afterward, as a deduction from the facts. The selection of subjects for the student's thinking is a little different from that of other school astronomies. The general principle governing this selection is to make the student understand what he can see. The work is handsomely printed and full of illustrations and finely colored maps. and finely colored maps.

Braddon, Miss M. E., [Now Mrs. J: Maxwell.] The one thing needful: a novel. N. Y.,

Harper, 1886. 54 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 538.) pap., 20 c.

The one thing needful, above all others, in a woman's life, is "love," so the author says. She writes a book to illustrate her theory, placing the scene in an old English castle, and taking her characters from the very highest social ranks. "Stella," a young girl rescued by Lord Lashmar from a burning building, and supposed to be of ignoble birth, turns out to be the heir to an old Spanish name and to a fortune. Lashmar adopts her, and the many changes and vicissitudes in her life occupy the larger part of the volume.

Branch, Oliver E., comp. The national primary speaker; consisting of declamations and recitations for pupils from five to ten years of age. N. Y., Baker & Taylor, 1886.

9+124 p. S. bds., 50 c. The first volume of an entirely new series of speakers. Hackneyed extracts have been thrown aside, and the standard orators represented by fresh selections from their works; while space has been given to those pieces which have most recently gained the favor of public readers and elocutionists as best adapted to declamations.

Coppens, Rev. C: A practical introduction to English rhetoric: precepts and exercises. N. Y., The Catholic Pub. Soc. Co., 1886.

N. Y., The Catholic Pub. Soc. Co., 1886. 2+367 p. D. cl., $1.25.
A general text-book on composition, for the use of colleges and academies. It embraces the usual departments, a very full treatise on "versification" being the work of the Rev. Eugene H. Brady, of St. Xavier College, Cinn. It claims to be exceptionally practical, embracing many suggestive exercises and a copious collection of choice quotations in prose and verse, to serve as models for the imitation of pupils. "Lastly," as the author says, "the work pretends to do what many text-books on rhetoric neglect, and what is really the most important task of all—namely, to educate the heart as well as the head of the student."

Oronkhite, H: M. Reymond: a drama of the American Revolution. N. Y., G: P. Put-

American Kevolution. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1886. 101 p. D. cl., $1.25.
Thirty characters take part in this drama, which is mostly written in blank verse. The scene is laid partly in New York City and partly in an American campduring the closing year of the war. The hero is Willie Reymond, whose father was prosecuted as a rebel by one Adolphus Bezard, and afterward commanded a company attached to the American army, and fell in battle. Willie, having grown up, also goes to fight the British, and has numerous adventures of both love and war, all ending happily.

Elokstein, Ernst. Aphrodite: a romance of ancient Hellas; from the German by Mary J. Safford. N. Y., W: S. Gottsberger, 1886. 3+289 p. S. cl., 90 c.; pap., 50 c. The story takes place in Miletus, a seaport of Asia-Minor, in the year 551 s. c. Acontius of Mylasa, a pupil of the famous Athenian sculptor Pharax, is the bero. Coming te Miletus to seek his fortune, he is favored with the love of two beautiful women. To one, a poor flower girl, he is indifferent; but to the other, far above him in station, he gives his heart completely, and invokes the aid of the goddess Aphrodite to help on his suit. The temple of Aphrodite, with the sacrificial rites, the priests, etc., is well described. Acontius in winning Cydippe incurs the wrath of her father, who, while openly bowing to the will of Aphrodite, secretly intrigues to ruin the young sculptor, being assisted in his schemes by the jealous flower girl. Several exciting and tragical scenes ensue before the story is brought to a conclusion.

Edwards, Mrs. Annie. Archie Lovell. Norman L. Munro, [1886.] 2+223 p. S. (Munro's lib., no. 605.) pap., 20 c.

Edwards, Mrs. Annie. A playwright's daughter: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1886. 133 p. S. (Harper's handy ser., no. 89.) pap.

Tania Meredith is an altogether new character study. Her father, an English dramatist, only had one year of happiness with her mother, a beautiful Russiam girl, whom he had married in Moscow. He marries again is a little while after her death, and Tania is left with her mother's family to be brought up. When Dion Meredith dies his widow, Tania's stepmother, brings the girl to London, intending, after two years of conventional mourning, to launch her into society. Tania's story begins here, and as it is one of passionate love, with a most tragical and unexpected ending, we will not anticipate its strong interest by further details.

Hale, E: Everett, and Susan. The story of Spain. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1886. 19+407 p. il. D. (The story of the nation

19+407 p. il. D. (The story of the nation ser.) cl., $1.50.
Only the salient points in Spanish history are recorded. The authors warn the reader from the beginning that details of court intrigues and court scandals are not entered into. "But," they say, "we have thought that the reader of today ought to know what are the successive steps by which the Iberia, which was almost a fabled country to the Romans of the time of the Consuls, has become the Spain of to-day, with the proud record of Spain in literature, in adventure, in discovery, in statesmanship, and in war." Part of the plan of the book is to refer, from chapter to chapter, to such illustrations from the writings of various authors of different countries as might interest young readers, and tempt them to follow not only the history of Spain in its chronological order, but the series of writings which in romance, in poetry, and in other literature we owe to her suggestions. we owe to her suggestions.

The publishers issue this work in response to "a wide-spread and growing demand for a treatise on arithmetic adapted to the objective methods of instruction now so common in all educational in-titutions which have been reached, directly or indirectly, by the influence of normal schools, teachers' institutes, etc." In its preparation the author has kept steadily in view these two thoughts:

(1) That words are useless in the ratio that they fail to call up in the mind im 1925 of the things signified. Hence the aim to vitalize the relation of words and things by the aid of the best practical illustrations at every point; and (3) that, to the learner, the operations of arithmetic are apt to be but manipulations of figures after prescribed models, unless he realizes the fact that they are repre sentative of processes that may be applied to material objects. Intended to be put into the hands of the learner as soon as he has completed a course in primary arith-

In preparing this volume, it has been the editor's aim to assist the student, as far as possible, with all the resources of modern scholarship. The text is based on that of Jordan. The orthography is that of Brambach. For the benefit of beginners, copious references to Harkness's "Latin grammar" have been inserted in the notes. The notes are based primarily on those of Kritz, Jacoba-Wirtz, and Schmalz; but the Roman histories of Mommsen and Ihne, and the works of Mommsen and Marquardt, of Lange and of Madvig, on Roman antiquities, have been freely laid under contribution, to throw jurther light on the facts narrated by Sallust. light on the facts narrated by Sallust.

Major Denny, of Rossmere, is a "Yankee," who comes South after the war, and settles in Arkansas. The time is that called the "carpet-bag" period, when prejudice and bitterness against the North were still rife and loudly expressed. The county isnores him for many months the and outerness against the North were still rile and folding expressed. The county ignores him for many months, the few freedmen on his place being his only friends. Finally accident brings him into contact with the people of a neighboring plantation, with whom his life henceforward is bound up. The influence Denny exercises over his neighbors, both in social and political matters, and the dense ignorance and hopeless poverty he finds around him, and which the author brings out very graphically, are paramount to the story of his love for the little Southern widow, whose husband had been lost in the war.

A work for hotel chefs, showing them how to set a fine table at the smallest cost. The first part relates to the different lines of eating-house business, and is a guide to various branches as carried on in the cities. "Eight weeks at a summer resort" is the diary of an experience chef, cooking and stewarding at a summer boarding house. He begins with a small family and few advantages for catering, and goes on to a crowded house, good business and plenty, putting down the cost of every neal, with the sums total shown at the end and the profit that was made. There is a different bill of fare every day with a different soun or consomme, and 200 entrees and was made. There is a different bill of fare every day, with a different soup or consomme, and soo entrees and disbes with modern French names; about 30 ways of cooking potatoes, mostly faney forms to serve with fish; a different dish of fish each day; about 7, ice creams and ices, as many cakes. The third part, "Artistic cookery," teaches ornamental work, was figure and flower work for socles and pictes montees, and fancy sugar work, with illustrations to make it easy for any young cook to learn. lustrations to make it easy for any young cook to learn.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

AUGUST 21, 1886.

PUBLIMERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to issure insertion in the same week's issue.

JUDGE HAMMOND'S DECISION AGAIN.

THE decision of Judge Hammond, in the case of Mr. Blaine's subscription book, proves more far-reaching the more it is examined, and it puts the business of dealing in books on so different a legal basis from its supposed status hitherto, that we feel it necessary to give the full text in the Publishers' Weekly, and to advise publishers to give it very careful consideration. The telegraphic reports gave a very inadequate impression of its bearings.

Briefly stated, the judge finds in the provision of our copyright act giving the author the sole right of "vending" a book, a hitherto unsuspected application. It secures to the writer not simply the ordinary rights of property, but, he asserts, a right peculiar to copyright property, the right to control the method of sale, even to the enjoining from the use by an innocent buyer of an authorized copy sold in an unauthorized manner. He notes the exception that the sale of an individual copy by the author in the ordinary way implies an "alienation," which surrenders this peculiar right and puts the book on an equality with other property. But if a copy is purchased without the direct or implied authorization of the owner of the copyright, caveat emptor. "The absence of Mr. Blaine's authority to sell his literary property constitutes the defect of title, no matter how that authority arises." The fact of the copyright imprint, he adds, "was intended to put every man who wishes to deal in the book-indeed, every man who wishes to own or read a copy-upon notice that Mr. Blaine owns the copyright, ... and imposes the duty of reasonable inquiry . . . to know whether he has been paid or satisfied."

Judge Hammond says: "I do not generally hesitate to go in judgment with the logic of my position," but in this case he stopped short of enjoining the defendant from reading or of compelling him to forfeit the unsold copy. Yet logically, his decision means that every buyer must take reasonable means to satisfy himself that the book he proposes to buy has been sold in an authorized manner. This might have a peculiar effect on the subscription business, whose house-to-house agents are usually unknown people, and be of benefit to the regular trade, who are generally known and responsible people. It also lays some ground for control by a regular publisher of the prices of books sold by the regular trade on his account.

It may prove that this elaborate opinion really means very little, for the reason that the strict legal view would be tempered by the commonsense of a court of equity and by the rule deminimis non curat lex. A higher court may very likely say this in plain English, as is hinted in Judge Butler's suggestion that this all-embracing decision does not apply in the Grant case. But in itself the decision is the most striking that has been made in the legal literature of copyright within this generation.

THE other decision of Judge Butler this week will strike most authors with a shiver of surprise and discomfort. The author of an essay on the descent of man would scarcely expect to be "bound up" with some humorous excerpts from Josh Billings; but under this decision he could not estop his publishers from the combination. The decision emphasizes the importance of clear contracts with publishers, which we have often pointed out before.

JUDGE HAMMOND'S COPYRIGHT DE-CISION.

WE give herewith the full text of Judge Hammond's important decision in the case of Mr. Blaine's subscription book, as printed in the Federal Reporter of August 3.

HENRY BILL PUBLISHING CO. v. SMYTHE. (Circuit Court, Southern District of Ohio. July 3, 1886.)

In Equity. The plaintiff is the owner of the copyright of a book, written by James G. Blaine, called "Twenty Years of Congress," and sold it by subscription only to individual buyers of single copies. The book had never been otherwise placed upon the market by the plaintiff, or with its consent. It employed agents to solicit subscriptions and deliver the copies ordered, assigning to each a certain territory. An agent so employed in New York, to whom plaintiff had sent a number of copies for delivery to certain subscribers procured by him, sold the copies to a book-dealer in Troy contrary to plaintiff's instructions and in violation of an express agreement and his bond that he would not self or deliver in any other mode than that directed by the plaintiff, applying the money to his own use. It does not appear whether the Troy dealer was aware of this breach of trust or a party to it by collusion with the agent, but it does appear that it was generally known to the trade, and especially to defendant, that the plaintiff professed to sell the book only by subscription, and had announced by public advertisement and otherwise that in no other way could it be procured from the publishers. The defendant had expressed the belief that the trade could procure the work notwithstanding this announcement, and that he would soon have it for sale. He ordered the book from the Troy merchant, procured six copies of those purchased from the plaintiff's agent in the manner above stated, and sold five of them at a profit of $5.86. The defendant testified that he was not aware of the facts connected with the Troy dealer's purchase, and there is no proof that he was. He ordered the books without any inquiry upon the subject, and in the usual way of making such orders. The plaintiff's agent at Columbus, O., where defendant does business, notified him that he was the only authorized agent for that section; that the book was sold only by subscription, and warned him not to sell the copies he was offering; but that agent did not himself know how the books had been procured. This bill was filed to enjoin the defendant from selling those copies; for an account, if sold; and from selling the book at all, in the future, without plaintiff's authority. The answer and proof developed the foregoing facts.

D. Stalter and Pugh & Pugh, for plaintiff. J. M. Tibbitts, for detendant.

HAMMOND, J. It is proper that I should frankly say, by way of apology for a too long delay in the decision of this case, that when it was argued I felt, because of my unfamiliarity with the law of copyright, quite unwilling to assume the responsibility of its decision without an investigation, which has been until now, in the multitude of my other engagements, impos-To me it was a startling proposition that, in the immense trade that goes on in copyrighted books, the dealer must deraign his title to each copy from the copyright holder with all the particularity of real estate, if not more inexorably, and that no right to use or sell a copy could be acquired without his consent; and I did not see how the argument of the plaintiff could stop short of that claim; and yet I am unable now to see how that monopoly of sale granted by the statute can be secured without a principle almost as broadly stated as that, qualified, of course, by such limitations as may properly and justly should be imposed to estop him, by his own conduct in any given case, from relying on the principle just stated.

How can his right of sale be exclusive without that principle in its widest scope? If I own a horse, or 10,000 horses, I have, to be sure, growing out of the very right of property itself, an exclusive right to sell them within the United States, and, indeed, elsewhere. But, surely, this is not the measure of that exclusive right to sell his works which is granted to an author by the copyright statute. He would have that right, as an incident to his property in the printed copies of the book, without the statutory grant, the other grants of the statute remaining as they are, to create or secure the other elements of his peculiar property in them. Indeed, it is my opinion that from the essential nature of copyright itself would spring this principle of exclusive sale, as I have formulated it, without the especially expressed grant of the statute in that respect.

I cannot find that the English act in terms confers a monopoly of sale, as ours does; and yet I think it exists by implication from the statutes as fully as it does under our act. I may be mistaken as to the phraseology of the English acts, but 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, wherever I find it, seems to omit the words used in our act in reference to the sole liberty of "vending" the book copyrighted, as it does many other words there used to define the franchise granted by Congress. But while the act of Victoria defines "copyright" to mean "the sole and exclusive liberty of printing, or otherwise multiplying, copies of any subject to which the said word is herein applied," our act of Congress uses the language, much amplified, however, of Millar v. Taylor, 4 Burr. 2303, and defines the word to mean the sole right of "printing, publishing, Quoted by GRIER, J., in Stowe v. Thomas, 2 Amer. Law Reg. (O. S.) 213, 230; S. C. 2 Wall Jr. 547; Graves v. Ashford, L. R. 2 C. P. 410, 417; Drone, Copyr. 100, 338, 662, 700; Rev. St. 8 4952.

Copyright and literary property would be of little value, for want of adequate protection, without this principle, and it must therefore attach to, and be one of, the peculiarities of this creation of the statute. Ordinary remedies protect one's exclusive right to sell his horses, or, what is the same thing, are a sufficient protection to that character of property; but in printed books there is, aside from the material property in them, a peculiarly intangible and incorporeal right pertaining to the authorship-a property created by this statute—which requires a further protection that can be adequate only when it is understood that no one can read this book, buy it, or sell it, or otherwise use it, or any copy of it, either that which is piratically or that which has been lawfully printed, without the consent of the author or copyright holder; and the basis of it is that a moneyed or other valuable consideration must be paid to the author, and he has a right to receive value for any use of the product Protection in the monopoly of of his labor. sale for the lawfully-printed copies is just as essential to the value of the right of property created by the statute as protection against piratical printing, publication, and sale of the book. Or, if this be not so, Congress has chosen, at least, to grant that right of monopoly, and it may grant what it pleases. It does the same thing for mechanical inventions, and why not for literary products? I think it has. Under our tariff laws an American manufacturer has often a monopoly of the American market, and he stands very much as the copyright holder does, only the latter has a much stronger, and a more extended and enlarged, monopoly. He relies upon the pains and penalties of the revenue statute for his enjoyment of the monopoly; but if Congress had the same power as in copyright legislation, it might go further and protect the manufacturer more directly and efficiently.

To return to the illustration of the property in horses. If, under the tariff laws, all importations should be forbidden, the American owner of horses would, indeed, have a monopoly of the market. But suppose the Government could or should go further, and prohibit all persons, except one citizen, from raising or reproducing horses, and should suppress all reproduction than his own, there would then be growing out of the legislation a monopoly of sale analogous to that conferred in direct terms by this statute on the copyright holder of a book. If the statute should stop at prohibitory legislation, the beneficiary of the monopoly, would be compelled to depend wholly on the ordinary remedies to protect it. But this statute does not stop there, and gives the copyright holder especial, if not extraordinary, remedies, at law and in equity, to protect his property, not only against infringement by piracy, but, as I think, against unauthorized sales of genuinely printed copies.

This statute has not abrogated the ordinary aw of sales in its relation to copyrighted books, and, like all property, this is subject to that law; but it has provided for it likewise a law of its own, by necessary implication from the statute. We are all familiar with the rule that one buying property of a thief gets no title, no matter how innocent he may be of all knowledge of the theft. Now, let us imagine a State wherein this rule of law has been abrogated by enacting that one who so buys, for a valuable consideration, without notice, shall have a good title, the State undertaking to satisfy our sense of justice by some kind of compensation to the unfortunate owner. If, now, in that State, some thief should sell copies of Mr. Blaine's book, stolen from him there, the purchaser would not get a good title to them, notwithstanding the State law; and this because, under the act of Congress, Mr. Blaine had granted to him by the statute the exclusive right of sale, which right the courts would protect by appropriate remedies. I do not stop to inquire whether he could bring replevin, trover, detinue, or the like, on the theory that the Constitution and laws of the United States being paramount, and Blaine's right of sale exclusive, the federal law would exclude the thief's power of sale under the State statute, and there would therefore be necessarily a modification or limitation imposed by the federal statute on that of the State; but, surely, he could appeal to the remedies given by this copyright statute itself to protect him in its enjoyment. Again, if this be a correct view of the nature of this grant of an exclusive right to sell, it does not matter whether the party offering to sell without Mr. Blaine's authority be a thief, or one in possession only by a breach of trust, or some other less blamable means of acquisition. The absence of Mr. Blaine's authority to sell his literary property constitutes the defect of title, no matter how that want of authority arises. Owing to the peculiar character of this kind of property, the absence of the author's authority to sell is a defect of title, and not a mere want of power. In other words, this monopoly of sale is, of itself, property, and any interference with it should be restrained.

Now, as to what should estop Mr. Blaine, in a court of equity, as between himself and a given party in possession of his books claiming the right to sell them, from relying on any absence of authority from him to sell, or as to what circumstances would enable such a party to invoke the aid of that court to restrain Mr. Blaine from setting up such an absence of his authority, we need not inquire further than the facts of this case demand a decision. It may be that a court of equity would often presume the necessary authority to sell, whether it existed in fact or not: but this would depend rather on Mr. Blaine's own conduct in the premises than anything else. If he has put his copies of the book on the market in such a way as to mislead persons who wish to deal in them as to his authority to sell any particular copies found in the market; if he has sold them by wholesale and retail to merchants; placed them with brokers, factors, auctioneers, jobbers, or other agents, for general sale to all who apply; and the defendant buys from any of these without notice of any defect of title or authority to sell them—it might be that Mr. Blaine would be without remedy to assert his monopoly in the given case, because estopped by such conduct. The defendant, in such cases, might have a right of sale by estoppel, but the principle we are considering would remain.

And it must not be forgotten, in measuring the equities between parties in all such cases, that while it might be impossible, under some circumstances, to trace the title of each book and its accompanying authority from its author to sell it, this statute has provided ample notice of the author's right; for every book carries the imprint of that notice upon it, and this by the command of the statute. This fact is sufficient, and was intended to put every man who wishes to deal in the book-indeed, every man who wishes to own or read a copy-upon notice that Mr. Blaine owns the copyright, or has transferred it to his publishers, and imposes the duty of reasonable inquiry into the facts of the case to know whether he has been paid or satisfied as to the proposed sale or use, in the matter of his compensation therefor. I do not think, therefore, that the bare fact of the want of actual notice of the defect in the title on the part of the defendant is an answer, in any case, to the plaintiff's claim of infringement; but the scrutiny should go further, and determine whether the statutory notice of the plaintiff's title imprinted in the book has been fairly treated, by especial inquiry, if that inquiry be reasonably demanded by the circumstances of the particular case. should not be prepared to say that in this peculiar class of cases the being put upon inquiry is equivalent to notice of plaintiff's rights as to particular copies of the book, but only that equity demands that there shall be, on both sides, reasonable conduct in respect to the dealings of the parties with each other, so that there shall be investigation into the facts relating to the author's authority to sell the book by every one who proposes to deal in it, whenever the circumstances fairly demand that course of business. In this case the circumstances did fairly demand such an examination, and it is useless to decide on the proof whether there was or was not, on the part of the defendant, want of actual notice of the facts involved. He knew that the plaintiff owned the copyright of Mr. Blaine's book; that it had never placed it on the market for general sale by the trade, but had studiously avoided doing that, and had sold it only by subscription to actual subscribers. It had a right to do this, and it was supposed to be a most effectual method of enjoying the monopoly in the profits of the sale which the statute gave. In this way, presumably, the plaintiff would reap the whole profits of the sales, excluding all other dealers and all middle-men, as it had a right to do, from any share of those profits; and if persistently adhered to, the only copies of the book that could come into the general trade, with the essential authority of the plaintiff to use or sell it, would be those copies sold by subscribers at secondhand, such sales being authorized as an incident of each subscriber's property in his particular

THE RIGHTS OF WRITERS.

From Associated Press Dispatches.

A BILL in equity was filed in the United States Circuit Court in Philadelphia, Aug. 12, by counsel representing Laura C. Holloway, of Brooklyn, N. Y., against the publishing firm of Bradley & Co., asking to have the defendants enjoined from publishing with the plaintiff's copyrighted book "The Ladies of the White House; or, In the Home of the Presidents," any narration of the life of Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland and the life and marriage of Miss Frances Folsom, now Mrs. Grover Cleveland, or any other account or statement not written by the complainant. The bill recites that Laura C. Holloway wrote the above-named book, and after having it copyrighted entered into a contract with Messrs. Bradley & Co. to have it published; that the defendant firm engaged in the publication of the work until March I, this year, when an agreement was made between the parties by which the copyright was returned to the author, the unexpired contract terminated, and the right to publish five hundred copies of the book reserved to Bradley & Co. It is further asserted that while the negotiations between the plaintiff and the defendants in relation to ending the contract were going on the latter repeatedly urged the complainant to write an addition to her book, comprising an account of the life of Miss Cleveland, and that the request having been refused, Bradley & Co. have made preparations for issuing their five hundred copies in the original form of publication, with an account of the lives of President Cleveland's wife and sister written by another author and contained under the same cover. The defence denied the charges, and said that as Mrs. Holloway had refused to write the additional matter for the publishers they secured the services of Frances Howard Williams, who wrote a separate book, containing an account of the lives of the ladies who presided at the White House during President Cleveland's term, and that this was not an addition to Mrs. Holloway's work, and in no way an encroachment on her right.

Judge Butler, at the hearing, Aug. 16, denied the injunction, holding that the complainant had not established such a clear and satisfactory case as, in his judgment, entitled her to the injunction asked for, and therefore he refused the motion, but as to what disposition the court might make of the cause when it came up for final hearing upon the testimony could not now be recited. He added that it might not be amiss to generally express to counsel the impression made upon his mind by what had thus far appeared in the case. He thought that the simple question was whether a publisher who has entered into a contract with an author to publish her work, or to publish 500 copies of it, as in this case, was restricted to publishing the matter entirely by itself or within separate covers, or whether they had the right to publish with it another work of a similar or different character by another author, contained within the same covers, provided the two works were clearly distinguished as being separate and by different authors. He was inclined to the opinion that the publishers could so issue the work if they desired to do so. Their contract was to publish the writings of the author, and if they fulfilled such contract by putting into print all that was written by her, what in the contract was to prevent them from binding it with an encyclopædia even, if they think it wise and prudent?

THE GRAPHIC ARTS EXHIBITION AT VIENNA.

THE Society for Graphic Arts at Vienna will hold its first annual exhibition at the Künstlerhaus, Vienna, from December 1, 1886, to January 31, 1887, under the patronage of the Lord Chamberlain to H. M. the Emperor, and of the Imperial Royal Government of Austria-Hungary. The object of the exhibition is to bring under public notice, in a complete and comprehensive manner, all the valuable and important works relating to the subject that have been published since the great Vienna Exhibition of Graphic Arts in 1883. There will be exhibited copper-plate engravings, etchings, lithographs, wood-cuts and relative arts, as well as illustrated éditions de luxe and scientific works on art, together with reproductions effected by the aid of chemico-technical means. Artists, art publishers, and art institutes are earnestly invited to take part in the exhibition, and to send as rich and complete a selection of their works as pos-For the necessary formulas, application sible. must be made at the offices of the Society for Graphic Arts in Vienna, Situate VI., Magdalenen Strasse, No. 26. The 30th of September has been fixed as the last day for delivering exhibition parcels.

OBITUARY.

MARY CECIL HAY.

"We regret to hear of the death of Miss Mary Cecil Hay," says the London Athenaum, "the well-known novelist, who died on July 24 after a long illness. Her first novel, 'Hidden Perils,' was issued in 1872 by Hurst & Blackett, who published all her subsequent works—'Old Myddelton's Money, 'Nora's Love Test,' 'Victor and Vanquished,' and several more. During the spring and summer she was able to correct the proofs of another novel, called 'A Wicked Girl,' which will be issued before long. She was an excellent and charitable woman who worked exceedingly hard."

DR. FRANK HASTINGS HAMILTON, who died last week in his seventy-third year, from severe and repeated pulmonary hemorrhages, was the author of a number of important medical works. His most celebrated work, a "Treatise on Fracture and Dislocation." was first issued in 1860. It was translated into German and French, and is accounted the best work on the subject in any language. He also wrote "Principles and Practice of Surgery," and edited "Contributions Relative to Surgery of the Civil War," and contributed largely to medical periodicals.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MRS. E. M. AMES ("Eleanor Kirk") is preparing a volume called "Beecher as a Humorist." Mrs. Ames was formerly a reporter of Mr. Beecher's sermons, and has long been intimately acquainted with him.

EDNA LYALL, author of "Donovan," "We Two," "In the Golden Days," etc., and known to her many friends as Miss Bayly, is at present on a tour in Norway. She is at work upon a new novel, which must wait the author's return before it can be finished.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

"MODERN METHODS OF ILLUSTRATING BOOKS" is the title of a new volume to be issued by Elliot Stock.

THE next volume in the Eminent Women series will be Mary Robinson's life of Marguerite of Angouleme, Queen of Navarre.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. announce for immediate publication, translations of three works by the Russian author Dostoyevsky—namely, "Crime and Punishment," "Injury and Insult," and "Recollections of a Dead House."

Temple Bar for July contains Professor Johnson's article on Wordsworth from "Three Americans and Three Englishmen," recently issued by Mr. Thomas Whittaker. The Bentleys have agreed to use three of Professor Johnson's lectures, paying for the same an honorarium equal to the price paid for original articles. They are honest without international copyright.

THE REPUBLICAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, of Iowa City, Ia., have just published "The World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition, New Orleans, 1884-85," by Herbert S. Fairall, United States Commissioner from Iowa, which gives an excellent history of the fair, with an exhaustive review of the various States and Territories and other features of the Exposition.

We learn through a special cablegram from a London correspondent to the Boston Evening Record "that a contract has been sealed between the Century Company and T. Fisher Unwin, by which the Century Magazine will in future be published in England by the latter. "Unwin," the correspondent goes on to say, "is a most enterprising and experienced young publisher here, and during several seasons a number of the best books by English and American authors have been issued from his house. The Century could not be placed in better hands."

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co.'s announcements for the coming season include a valuable "Manual of North American Birds," very useful for naturalists and sportsmen, to contain concise descriptions of every species of bird known in North America, and to be illustrated by 425 outline cuts, all the work of Robert Ridgway, Curator of the Department of Birds in the U.'S. National Museum; "Three Thousand Miles Through Brazil," a two-volume work by James W. Wells, containing the narrative of the scenes and incidents of a long sojourn in the interior, carrying out surveys of the valley of the Rio Parâopeba, and spent in travel and scientific exploration from Rio de Janeiro to Maranhâv; all freely illustrated by reproductions of the author's original sketches and maps, which are models of accuracy and careful selection; and "A Soldier's Reminiscences in Peace and War," by Brigadier-General R. W. Johnson.

Benzicer Brothers will issue shortly "Glories of Divine Grace," translated from the German of Dr. M. Jos. Scheeben; "A Thought from St. Francis of Assisi and of his Saints, for Every Day of the Year;" "Great Means of Salvation and of Perfection," the third volume of St. Alphonsus' Works; "Leben und Wirken des Hochw. P. Fr. Xav. Seelos, C.SS.R.; and "Leitfaden der Kirchen-Geschichte für Katholische Volksschulen," a free translation of Bishop Gilmour's admirable "Compendium of Church History" which supplements his "Bible History." They have also in press a sixth edition of "Elements of Ecclesiastical Law," by Rev. S. B. Smith, D.D. It is completely revised according to the recent Third Plenary Council of Baltimore, and contains a full explanation of the new decrees, especially in regard to the new mode of electing bishops, the new consultors, the irremovable rectors, the Concursus, the changed form of trial in accordance with the latest instruction, Cum Magnopere, together with numerous other important changes and corrections.

ROBERTS BROTHERS will have a beautiful holiday book in Mrs. Helen Jackson's "The Procession of the Flowers," illustrated in watercolors by Alice A. Stewart. Only one hundred copies will be issued, which will be numbered and signed and printed on Whatman's drawing papers. The size is quarto, and suitable to show to advantage the twelve hand-painted floral designs. The book will be appropriately bound in white half calf, gilt, and ornamented with a band of kinnikinck, imitated from the vine taken from the regretted writer's grave. They have in press also "Sonnets and Lyrics," a collection of Mrs. Jackson's poems, including everything of importance written by her since the publica-tion of the first volume of "Verses by H. H.;" and a volume of short stories, to be called "Between Whiles," the title having been chosen by the author herself, who, just before her death, wrote to her publishers: "Did anybody ever publish a volume of short stories called 'Between Whiles'? If not, hide it away, and don't tell anybody, and by next spring I will have had enough short stories printed to make a nice sum-mer volume. Isn't it a lovely title?"

WILL PUBLISH, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 4:

POVERTY GRASS.

CONTENTS: Hester's Dower; Saint or Sinner; Luke Gardiner's Love; The Child of the State; "A Stranger, yet at Home;" And Joe; Bridget's Story; Valentine's Chance.

Many of these stories have appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, where they have attracted marked attention by their power of narrative, and yet more by the philanthropic spirit which was manifest in a high degree. Not merely a general wish that the hard lot of the poor, especially poor mill operatives, might be made easier; but an intense purpose to show the features and causes of their misery, and summon society to look at them, think of them, sympathize with them, and organize a better future for them. The writer's familiar knowledge of mill life in New England gives peculiar value to her descriptions, and her literary skill makes her stories eminently readable.

Mrs. Madison was not only the "first lady" of the country during her husband's term as President, but was one of the most engaging women who have made Washington a social as well as political centre. She is one of the charming historic women of America. Her letters gathered in this book and the connecring passages are bright, and contain not a little fresh material cocerning the subjects and persons that attracted public attention in Mrs. Madison's time. There make more real our history for the early part of this century and throw a new and pleasing light upon it.

RIVERSIDE POCKET SERIES.

This series will include ten books which have already won no small degree of popular favor. They will be well printed and bound in cloth, at fifty cents each. The first number is—

DEEPHAVEN. By SARAH ORNE JEWETT, author of "A Country Doctor," etc. 16mo, 50 cents.

"Deephaven" is the charming book of sketches which first brought Miss Jewett conspicuously before the literary world, and though she has written several other books which have delighted multitudes of readers, "Deephaven" has never lost its hold on popular favor. In this new and inexpensive form it ought to find a greatly enlarged circle of readers.

CABINET EDITION OF POETS.

The several volumes heretofore published in Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s Diamond Edition, which has had a remarkable popularity, are now brought out in different form and more attractive binding. The volumes are as follows: Burns's Poems, Harte's Poems, Longfellow's Poems Longfellow's Christus, Lowell's Poems, Owen Meredith's Lucile, Procter's Poems, Saxe's Poems, Scott's Poems, Tennyson's Poems, Whittier's Poems. Each, cloth $1.00; half calf, $2.00; seal, or tree calf, $3.00.

FIRESIDÉ HAWTHORNE.

THE COMPLETE WORKS OF NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE. New Fireside Edition. In six volumes, 16mo, $10.00; half calf, $20.00. Sold only in sets.

A compact edition of Hawthorne's Works, and so inexpensive that it can hardly fail of a very large sale.

NOTES IN SEASON.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. have in preparation an important and interesting work upon "Social Manners and Customs in Russia," by Mrs. De Meissner, daughter of Admiral Radford, U.S.N. The title is "The Terrace of Mon Désir."

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish next week in the International Scientific series a volume on "Microbes, Ferments, and Moulds," by E. L. Trouessart; in the English Worthies series, a sketch of Admiral Blake, by David Hannay; and "Dear Life," by J. E. Panton, a story said to be strong and well worked out.

HARPER & BROS. publish this week the last novel, "A Wicked Girl," of the late Mary Cecil Hay, completed on her death-bed. They announce a thoroughly revised edition of the late Dr. Worthington Hooker's "Child's Book of Nature:" and a "History of Mediæval Art," by Joseph Thacher Clarke.

PORTER & COATES will publish shortly, in a volume distinct from the volumes of the "Civil War in America'' series by the Count of Paris,
This his writings on the Gettysburg campaign. volume, which is edited by Colonel J. P. Nicholson, is to contain about 200 pages. Included will be the most complete rosters yet published of the Union and Confederate armies, with the losses of every organization given in detail up to the morning of July 4, and the itinerary of the Army of the Potomac during the campaign. It will also contain important maps of the field, and editorial notes and comments by Colonel Nicholson. The book will be an octavo at $1.50.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, Mr. Gladstone's authorized American publishers, expect to issue in a few days, simultaneously with its appearance in London, his great pamphlet, entitled "The Irish Question." The bare announcement of this extraordinary publication has created the greatest sensation in London, where its political effect will be momentous, and its interest and importance will be hardly less marked in this country. The book is divided into two parts. Part I. is entitled "The History of an Idea, and traces the development of the Home Rule idea in Mr. Gladstone's own mind, defends his past course, and defines his present position. Part II. is entitled "Lessons of the Election." In it Mr. Gladstone analyzes the election returns, and concludes that Ireland has only to wait with patience and hope. The work will be issued in their yellow paper series, at ten cents.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish next week their first instalment of books for the autumn. "Poverty Grass," a book of striking short stories, by Mrs. Lillie Chace Wyman, which are largely devoted to setting forth the miseries of poor mill operatives in New England, whom the author has had unusual opportunities to observe; "Memoirs and Letters of Mrs. Madison," an interesting volume of letters by one who holds a peculiarly enviable place in American social history; and "Deephaven," by Miss Jewett, the initial volume in the Riverside Pocket series, which will contain ten little books, mostly by well-known authors-books which have gained no little popularity, and are now to be produced in a somewhat smaller form, bound in flexible cloth, cut flush. With these will appear their Diamond edition of the poets Burns, Harte, Longfellow, Lowell, Owen Meredith, Procter, Saxe, Tennyson, and Whittier, in a different form, which is now entitled the Cabinet edition. Both the form and the binding will make this edition much more desirable than the Diamond edition. A new edition of Hawthorne's Complete Works-namely, the Fireside, will be brought out in six volumes at a low price, sold only in sets.

A NEW PUBLISHING COMPANY.

As we go to press we learn, from the Boston Evening Record, of the incorporation of a new publishing concern under the title of the C. F. Jewett Publishing Company, to do a general printing and publishing business. The names of the incorporators are Dana Estes, E. C. Lauriat, Clarence F. Jewett, Asa H. Walker, and Walter W. Jackson. Mr. Jewett is to be president and Mr. Jackson treasurer of the new concern, the capital of which is reported to be $75,000. We learn further than this that the by Dr. Franz Reber, translated and augmented new company will handle the subscription books published by Estes & Lauriat.

Like its predecessors, the present volume contains, besides the selected matter, several original contributions. A little eight-line poem, "Now August comes," by Clinton Scollard, holds the place of honor on the introductory page. Harriet Prescott Spofford contributes an exquisite poem, "Mid-August midnight," and Miss Edith Themas is represented, in addition to three selections from her pen, by a monody on "August." Other contributed poems are by Samuel Minturn Peck, Mrs. Jane G. Austen, William Morton Fullerton, and Robert Burns Wilson.

ROD. CIATRE & Co., 1880. 2+196 p. por. S. cl., $1.75.

A sad and thrilling story of a lady's experience in the Indiana Hospital for the Insane. Mrs. Agnew was for seven years afflicted with periods of insanity, at which times her mania was a desire to kill herself. As her mind was perfectly clear a greater part of the time, she was enabled to observe and remember the treatment accorded her. This work, written since she was pronounced cured, goes into details of the brutal and heartless methods still existing in managing the insane. existing in managing the insane.

Baker, Ella M. Put in his thumb and pulled out a plum: stories for a Christmas pie. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., [1886.] 322 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A little girl poor in pocket but rich in a fine, generous nature is enabled one Christmas eve to do a service to a nature is enabled one Christmas eve to do a service to a rich family; she injures herself in attempting to rescue a painting from a burning room, and she is nursed and petted by them back to health. She is bright and clever, sugesting many Christmas games, out of which grow a series of Christmas stories. They are six or seven in number, and adapted to very young children.

Barlow, W. H. Normal phonography; adapted to all styles of reporting; being a further development of the principles of phonography, by means of which is secured the rapny, by means of which is secured the briefest, most legible and regular system of short-hand in the world. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1886. 115 p. D. cl., $1.

The key-note of this system, we learn from the introduction, "consists in taking the horizontal line out of the consonant alphabet and using it, with and without initial hooks, to represent the vowels and diphthongs." Again, it further simplifies the alphabet by having only one character for each letter. Another main feature is the great power of abbreviation and contraction given by the extended use of the terminal dot.

Baxley, I: R. The Temple of Alanthur, with other poems. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1886. 8+136 p. D. cl., $1.25.

1886. 8+136 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"The tale which names the volume is a pure invention, with Egypt and its mythology for picturesque setting. Alanthur is an architect and sculptor, building a temple to Thoth, and betrothed to Ranethis, of whom Naredin, son of Thoth and a mortal woman, is enamored. Ranethis resusts the passion of Naredin, who in his rage destroys part of the temple of Alanthur and is judged by Osiris, his doom being banishment to the vapors of unfermed worlds until the last judgment, unless he shall redeem himself by penitence. This story is wreught out with unmistakable poetic strength... The rest of the poems in this book are nearly all unusual in tone, and some of striking character. "Baldric and Lissoy" tells a tale of knighthood and enchantment in verse of singular masculine force and with a profusion of lurid imagery. "The gold-dream" is a remarkable allegory of the passion of avarice, and is matched by as powerful an allegory of death, "The journey of Lord Eglamore."—Springfield Republican.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

AUGUST 28, 1886.

PUBLISHERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or eard should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

HENRY BILL PUBLISHING CO. vs. SMYTHE. (Concluded from Publishers' Weekly, Aug. 21, pp. 219-221.)

IT is quite true that the general trade may not be able to identify those copies which are regularly on the market at second-hand from those which may otherwise surreptitiously come into market, but a little inquiry by mail or telegraph of the copyright holder, and of the dealers offering the book otherwise than by subscription, would generally develop the true facts, and disclose whether particular copies were offered with the essential authority of the copyright holder. In all fairness this inquiry should be made, and, in the absence of it, any infringement of the copyright holder's monopoly of sale cannot be justified by want of actual notice. Here the defendant would have found, by actual inquiry, that these copies he offers to sell were surreptitiously purchased of a fraudulent agent for delivery only to subscribers, and therefore were not authorized for sale in the general market. Technically, the dishonest agent may not have been a thief, and the books were not stolen; but substantially they were stolen from the plaintiff. There is no proof in the case that any conduct of the plaintiff about placing their books on the market was calculated to mislead the defendant, either generally or as to the particular territory wherein these copies were purchased, and he could not, I think, shut his eyes and ears, keep his tongue silent, and rely on any belief thus acquired that the person from whom he bought had authority to sell. It was a convenient assumption; but his knowledge of the trade, and of the methods adopted by the copyright holder as to this book, preclude him from relying on it without further inquiry than he shows he made. His experience that all subscription books may be procured for sale in the general market, or his belief of that fact, cannot avail him as a defence here, nor justify his attempt to verify that belief as to this book, by this transaction.

It is useless to inquire whether, under the ordinary law of sales of personal property, the circumstances were such that a purchaser without notice would obtain a good title. As ordinary property, unaffected by the copyright statute, we could have no concern with that feature of this controversy, for, the amount being less than $500, we would have no jurisdiction. endeavored to show that, outside of and beyond the general law, whatever it may require, the author or his assignee has a special property in his literary work, about which this statute has gathered characteristics, incidents, rights, and remedies which are peculiar to itself, and not affected by the general law. The leading case of Stephens v. Cady, 14 How. 528, S. C. sub nom. Stevens v. Gladding, 17 How. 447, well illustrates thils. There, the purchaser at an execution sale of the copper-plates from which a copyrighted map could be printed, did not acquire the right to print copies of the map and sell them. See, also, Ager v. Murray, 105 U. S. 126. No more, it seems to me, can the fraudulent agent for the delivery of copies already sold to particular persons transfer a right to sell them to other persons, which he had not himself possessed, when he deserts his trust, and embezzles the books by selling them to a merchant. If the merchant know of facts that put him on inquiry-as the fact that this was an existing copyright, under which copies were or had theretofore been sold only by subscription, fairly did—certainly he should be chargeable as if he were fully in-

I agree that where one of two persons must suffer by the fraud of an agent, the principal who created the agent should suffer rather than an innocent third party. But a dealer in books, who undertakes to circumvent the author in the execution of any plan that he may adopt-no matter what plan it be, so it be an honest onefor the enjoyment of his monopoly of sale, by showing his skill in the procurement of copies for sale outside of that plan, is hardly an innocent party, when his skill to do that thing requires that he shall purchase through an unfaithful agent, and omit or neglect all inquiry as to the circumstances which enable him to exhibit it at all, as this defendant did. He announced his belief that the books could be procured without individual subscription. He promised to have them for sale, and, in a sense, his pride of opinion was involved in his boast that he could do what he had promised to do. He ordered these books from a comparatively out-of-the-way dealer, who had procured them by fraud upon the plaintiff's well-known and scrupulously followed scheme of marketing them, and now he insists that he did not know of the fraud, when he had made no inquiry as to the peculiar fact that these books could be so procured for sale at all. He did not inquire, because he knew that it was dangerous to inquire, and with him ignorance was bliss, so long as he could make good his boast to exhibit the book for sale in spite of plaintiff's determination that he should not so sell it, and of the selection of a rival dealer in the same city as its agent to sell by subscription within that territory. This smartness of trade might succeed as to common articles of merchandise, afloat on the seas of commerce, notwithstanding any restrictions of contract on the agents in possession; but even this is doubtful, where the circumstances invite or demand further inquiry; but with a book, protected by copyright, it will not do. The precise ruling I make is this: If the owner of a subsisting copyright seeks to enjoy his exclusive right of selling the published work by making sales directly and only to individual subscribers, the statute protects his plan of sale from interference by other dealers offering surreptitiously obtained copies of the genuine work without his consent, unless there be something in the circumstances of the particular case to estop him from relying on the privileges of his monopoly.

I derive support for this ruling from a mass of cases and authorities on the nature and incidents appertaining to property in copyright too numerous for citation. None of the learned counsel cited a case directly in point, and, after much laborious and patient search, I have been unable, with my somewhat limited facilities, to find The citations of counsel from our decisions on patents seem plausible and forcible, as analogies, but, in view of what the courts have said about false analogy in that direction. I have discarded those decisions for fear of being misled by them. Baker v. Selden, 101 U. S. 99; Stowe v. Thomas, supra; 8 Amer. Law Reg. (O. S.) 229; Id. 225; BREWSTER, arguendo, Lawrence v. Dana, 4 Cliff. 178; Shepherd v. Conquest, 17 C. B. 427, 444—where the analogy is vigorously denied. But it is worthy of suggestion that perhaps the analogy is less at fault in this incident of a monopoly of sale than in other features of similarity. Protection for both is secured by the same clause of our Constitution, in language that indicates association of thought, to say the least of it. Const. art 1, § 8, cl. 8.

If it be said that this is "protection run mad," as was argued in the case of Stowe v. Thomas, supra, and as has been, in other language, earnestly urged in argument here, with greater force of application, it may be said, in reply, that albeit "the act of Anne owes its origin to Dutch influence and customs respecting monopolies, which came in with William III., and was passed in the same year with an act to protect wig-makers by prohibiting men from wearing their own hair" -GOEPP, arguendo, 2 Amer. Law Reg. (O. S.) 222-Congress has direct authority in the above cited section of the Constitution for protection to literary property to any extent it may choose, it being alone the judge of that extent; and therefore any odium of the disputed power to protect the wig-makers in a monopoly should not be visited on this statute. Certainly, Congress may prohibit any owner of the paper, twine, and leather called a "book" from selling, using, or enjoying, even by reading, if Congress choose, the printed words used to express the ideas therein, until the author has received his compensation in money for his labor in producing those ideas. The only question is the extent to which Congress has gone in the legislation under consideration. The purchaser of the paper, leather, and twine does not necessarily purchase the literary property, and he cannot use his ownership of the one to defraud the author of his property in the other. This case illustrates the necessity for maintaining that distinction. Mr. Webster said it was no more an odious monopoly for a man to own his invention-and, we may add, his copyright-than to so possess his homestead. 2 Wall. Jr. 549. note. The principle of protection, as I have sought to apply it, would be fully recognized and conceded in any case of piratically printed copies. Why does it not just as well apply to genuinely printed copies, unlawfully or surreptitiously obtained from the author? I should not hesitate, for my part, to call the latter proceeding a piracy" or "infringement" of the copyright; but as these words are generally applied to an unauthorized copying of the work, it may be pass the right of sale; but the bankrupt agreed well enough to adopt a suggestion made in argument in Lawrence v. Dana, supra, 4 Cliff. 27, and call this an "interference" with the copyright. However, it may well be called a "piratical" adventure, judged by its result, which is said in Scott v. Stanford, 3 Eq. Cas. 718, to be the true test of infringement, and that the absence of any dishonest intent is immaterial if the result of the appropriator's conduct be to injure the author's right of sale. The author is just as much injured by being deprived of the price of a genuine copy as by having a piratical copy substituted for it, so far as his moneyed interest is concerned; and BRETT, M. R., said, in Duck v. Bates, 13 Q. B. D. 843, that what was intended to be protected was the value of the author's invention, which is the key to the construction of the act, and that he does not want sentimental protection.

I have endeavored, without success, to trace the case of Murray v. Heath, I Barn. & Adol. 804, by citation in some more modern case. Mr. Drone cites it as raising the question "whether a seller is liable for the unauthorized sale of copies which have not been unlawfully printed or imported." Drone, Copyr. 479. He criticises it as unsound, if it undertakes to establish "that the defendants were not guilty of piracy because the copies had been printed from the original plates;" and cites Stevent Gladding, 17 How. 447, as enunciating the correct rule on that subject. That case, certainly, does construe our statute less strictly than the English statute was construed, and I have already pointed out a difference in the language of the two. But however this may be, and I do not think there is any substantial difference in the privilege of exclusive right of sale between the English acts and our own, except that ours give directly what the others necessarily imply. the court, in Murray v. Heath, supra, was evidently dealing with a different case from that we have in hand. It is a doctrine running through all the cases that whenever the owner of the copyright undertakes, by contract, to attack conditions to his sale of copies of the work, he must rely on the ordinary remedies for a breach of the contract, if it be violated; and this is sound doctrine. Inseparably with the transfer of the title in any copy of the work must go the right of alienation, so far as the peculiar protection of the copyright statutes is concerned; and the conditional or other sales mentioned by CLIFFORD, J., in Parton v. Prang, 3 Cliff. 537. 550, to which literary property, like all other personal property, is liable, are not cognizable as copyright cases, when disputes arise growing out of the power of alienation or sale under those contracts. For example, in the last case cited the artist had a literary property in his painting which he sold without condition. It was not under the protection of our statutes as they then stood; but if it had been, the ruling must have been the same, for, having parted with his whole title, the right of use was absolute. It is not like the sale of a part and the retention of a part of the property in the copyright, but the sale of the whole estate or interest in certain products of the copyright, with conditions attached. So, in this case of Murray v. Heath, supra, the bankrupt had been allowed to keep as his own property the genuinely printed copies retained by him. With this ownership. so far as the copyright statute was concerned, he would not sell them, and while it was a clear breach of this agreement for his assignees to offer them for sale, it is plain that the copies were no longer under the protection of the copyright statute. The author had parted with all he had under that statute—namely, his ownership of those particular copies, both in their material make-up and the literary property they represented. Or, as it is often expressed as to inventions, those particular copies had been, by his gift, taken "out of the domain" of the copyright laws, and placed exclusively within that of ordinary property. I do not mean to say that a copyright owner may not sell a part and retain a part of his copyright, by deleasible or conditional contracts for that purpose, but only that in that case the contract was not of that character.

Another illustration is found in Taylor v. Pillow, 7 Eq. Cas. 418, where one sold his copyright at auction, but retained copies already printed. As to those copies he had, like any other owner, an inseparable right of alienation by sale, and if he had agreed not to sell them, it would not have put that agreement under the protection of the copyright statute. Again, in Howitt v. Hall, 10 Wkly. Rep. 381, S. C. 6 Law T. (N. S.) 348, which I have not seen, and must take at second-hand, the author had parted with his copyright "and the exclusive right of sale" for four years, but the assignee was allowed to sell his stock left unsold at the expiration of the term of four years. I Jac. Fish. Dig. 793; 2 Jac. Fish. Dig. 2398. On the other hand, Hudson v. Patten, I Root, 133, well illustrates the reverse proposition of this principle. The plaintiff in that case owned the copyright for a given territory, and another owned it for a different territory. The latter employed the plaintiff to print for him a number of copies, to be sold in his own territory, but the defendant, having purchased them, sold them in plaintiff's territory; and it was held piracy or infringement of plaintiff's copyright, although they were genuine or lawfully printed copies. was not a stipulation of the contract for the printing, that the copies should be sold in a particular territory, which was enforced, but a violation of the plaintiff's copyright, that was This case is very nearly a direct redressed. precedent for the judgment here.

But there can be no happier illustration of the distinction I am endeavoring to take than that afforded by the difference between the case we have in hand and that of Clemens v. Estes, 22 Fed. Rep. 899. There, as here, the book was sold by subscription; but the agents had purchased the copies of the book, and had bound themselves not to sell, except by subscription. The defendants had no notice of that agreement of the agents, and the court refused to enjoin I do not know that I need to express the opinion here, but it seems to me that the court might have gone further, and, on the authority of the cases above cited, held that a sale by the agents in violation of their agreement, even with notice to the defendants, would have been no infringement of the copyright, on the distinction I have endeavored to point out. The agents being owners of the copies of the book, had a right to sell them, so far as the copyright goes; and their contract not to sell them was not within the domain of the copyright statute, whatever other remedy in equity or at law there may have been in any court of competent jurisdiction, State or federal, to enforce it. A breach of the contract. or even a conspiracy with the agents to procure a breach, would not be a case arising under the copyright laws of which the federal courts would have exclusive jurisdiction. Rev. St. § 711, subsec. 5. Every breach of contract about a patented article or a copyrighted book does not perforce of that fact belong to the federal jurisdiction to redress as one arising under those laws, and we must not lose sight of that important consideration in such cases as these. Judge BLODGETT intimates this distinction in Baldwin v. Baird, 25 Fed. Rep. 293, and it is a familiar one to both our patent and copyright law. Here the plaintiff did not sell its books to agents with a contract that they would sell only by subscription, but, on the contrary, sold them directly to subscribers, through agents, who had no other function to perform than to solicit subscriptions and deliver the books. The copies in controversy were sent to the agent for delivery, and were never his property, but that of the plain-tiff, who was the owner both of the books and of the copyright. It is a most important difference, and one that will reconcile this judgment with all the cases mentioned.

Courts of equity will, whether the property be patented inventions, copyrighted books, or what not, interfere by injunction, in proper cases, to prevent the destruction or injury of property liable to be affected by the peculiar conduct complained of in the given case. It was done in Springhead, etc., Co. v. Riley, 6 Eq. Cas. 551, where the cases are reviewed, to prevent strikers from obstructing the plaintiff in securing labor, thereby producing otherwise irreparable mischief. In patent and copyright cases there is a further or cumulative remedy in the courts especially empowered to protect them, as this court is in this case; but it must be, to receive the especial protection, strictly a case involving the patent or copyright itself, or some incident to it, and not simply an ordinary contract con-cerning the products of the one or the other. The owner of the copyright may not be able to transfer the entire property in one of his copies, and retain for himself an incidental power to authorize a sale of that copy, or, rather, the power of prohibition on the owner that he shall not sell it, holding that much, as a modicum of his former estate, to be protected by the copyright statute; and yet he may be entirely able, so long as he retains the ownership of a particular copy for himself, to find abundant protection under the copyright statute for his then incidental power of controlling its sale. This copyright incident of control over the sale, if I may call it so, as contradistinguished from the power of sale incident to ownership in all propertycopyrighted articles like any other-is a thing that belongs alone to the owner of the copyright itself, and as to him only so long as and to the extent that he owns the particular copies involved. Whenever he parts with that ownership, the ordinary incident of alienation attaches to the particular copy parted with, in favor of the transferee, and he cannot be deprived of it. This latter incident supersedes the other—swallows it up, so to speak-and the two cannot coexist in any owner of the copy except he be the owner at the same time of the copyright; and, in the nature of the thing, they cannot be separated so that one may remain in the owner of the copyright as a limitation upon or denial of the other in the owner of the copy. A genuine copy, owned by the owner of the copyright, carries with it the ordinary incidents of alienation belonging alike to all property, and if he parts with the copyright, he retains with the ownership of the particular copy this power of sale; or if he sells a copy to another, having, as owner of the copyright, authorized a transfer, the purchaser takes the copy with the ordinary incident of alienation belonging to all property; and that copy is no longer under the copyright law. This is the meaning of the cases cited, as I understood them; and, so understood, they do not in the least militate against this judgment.

It is a distinction, illustrated by the cases, between the incident of that monopoly of sale belonging alone to the owner of the copyright, and the incident of that exclusive and inseparable right of alienation belonging always to the owner of a copy of the work lawfully printed, which appears more plainly under our statute than the English statute, but alike under both, and there should be no confusion of the two, as there is apt to be, if the cases are not very critically observed. In this case the defendant is in no sense the owner of the copies in controversy, having obtained them surreptitiously from the owner of the copyright, or, what is the same thing, from one who so procured them. And here, again, I would especially invite attention to the distinction between the ownership of the mere materials in the books and that of the books as literary products; for he might possibly be the owner of the material elements, and yet not the owner of the literary constituents of the books.

In Keene v. Kimball, 16 Gray, 545-551, it seems to have been intimated that the injunction would have been granted if the copy of the play had been surreptitiously obtained. Bartlette v. Crittenden, 4 McLean, 300, S. C. 5 McLean, 32, it is said, in a case where students had published cards copied for instruction from the teacher's system of book-keeping, resting in manuscript: "At common law, independent of statute, I have no doubt the author of a manuscript might obtain redress against one who had surreptitiously got possession of it; Nicols v. Pitman, 26 Ch. Div. 374, a stenographer was enjoined from printing a report of a lecture spoken from manuscript to a limited It was put on the ground of a breach audience. of contract, as in the leading case of Abernethy v. Hutchinson, I Hall & T. 28, where it was said that, no matter how possession was obtained, hearers cannot, either of themselves or by transfer to another, publish for profit that which they had not obtained from the author the right to sell. These cases, and those like them, support this judgment in principle; for if this be true of the common-law right of property in manuscript before publication, it is equally so as to the statutory property in copyright, unless the statute restricts it in some way. It is an incident inherent in literary property, and necessary to its security, whether it be the gift of the common law or the statute.

Although it is not at all a copyright case, in this same view of it, the great case of Prince Albert v. Strange, I Macn. & G. 25, S. C. 2 De Gex & S. 652, is a potential support for this judgment. I had prepared a careful analysis of that case to show this, but shall not protract my already too long opinion to include it. The defendant was enjoined from exhibiting or selling for his profit, genuine copies of the etchings surreptitiously procured from the owner's printers; and although, in other respects, the case has been much criticised, as to that part of the injunction there was never any doubt or criti-The same principle applies here. The defendant had no notice in that case, but it was immaterial, as the lord chancellor said, as it is in other kinds of piratical depredations on literary property. He placed his judgment on the broad and satisfactory ground that "one is eatitled to be protected in the exclusive use of that which is exclusively his." And I say this is so, whether it be the exclusive right of use, or the exclusive right of sale, and whether either be a statutory grant, as here, or, like that case, a common-law grant; and the rule of decision is the same, whether we proceed under the ordinary remedies, at law or in equity, for damages or breach of trust, or whether we exercise the statutory power of protection given by section 4970 of the Revised Statutes. That case also calls attention to the necessity that one who proposes to become a dealer shall make inquiry when he fairly should do so. 2 De Gex & S. 687; Drone, Vice-chancellor 102, 109, 403, 470, 478, 538. BRUCE well remarked that the fraudulent agent could convey no better right than he himself had, and it is very applicable to the facts of this case. 2 De Gex & S. 702. Again, some of these cases, like this, were very small in the mere amount of money involved, but it was ad-judicated that "whether profits have been large or small, the question of right of publication is the same." Nicols v. Pitman, supra; Prince Albert v. Strange, supra.

I do not wish to close this opinion without saying that I do not exalt literary property above other kinds, nor hedge it about with a divinity of right and remedy not belonging to all other property; but simply place it in the category of all the rest, only finding that, because of its delicate and peculiar characteristics, Congress has been invested with peculiar powers of protection for it, which it surely needs to place it on a fair footing with other property. It is especially liable to piratical depredation, like that attempt-It is especially ed in this case, whereby the owner loses his fair profits; and I only hold that Congress has provided, as a convoy for it, a fleet of rights and remedies particularly adapted for defence against pirates, whether they sail under the black flag of the marauding printer, or the ordinary flags of commerce, falsely displayed for purposes of spoliation. But, after all, other property receives just as full protection, and, when it need be, by other special methods, where the power to devise

DECREE.

It only remains to say that the plaintiff is entitled to a decree, but there need be no expense for an account. The defendant received six copies, and has sold five, at a profit, he testifies, of $5.86. This, and the interest on it, he must pay to plaintiff within 60 days, or execution may issue for it. Possibly, he should be made to pay the full publisher's price, but I assume that there should be no controversy over so small a difference, for the money's sake; and, so far as the precedent is concerned, I prefer not to go beyond the profits now, and reserve the point As to the remaining volume, defendant should be perpetually enjoined from selling it, certainly I am inclined to think he should also be enjoined from lending it, or even from reading it, and possibly, from every conceivable use of it as a literary production. It is a small matter, perhaps, but, as the cases show, it is not the extent of the injury, but the character of it, that is involved; and until the plaintiff is paid, and voluntarily consents to part with its property in that copy, the defendant should not injure the plaintiff by lending the book to one who might otherwise buy it, or to a larger number who might otherwise buy, or even by reading it himself, unless he buys the privilege from the plaintiff, its owner. I do not generally hesitate to go in judgment with the logic of my position, but since I doubt whether the court can, under section 4964 of the Revised Statutes, declare a forfeiture of this copy, I hesitate to impose an injunction which amounts to that, although it may be that it is a clear equitable remedy, under section 4070 of the Revised Statutes. Hence I shall, in this case, only enjoin the sale, and reserve the other points, with leave to the plaintiff to apply for an extension of the injunction if the defendant shall refuse to amicably surrender the copy, which he has no sort of right to retain tor any use as a literary production, whatever his right may be in other respects. Suppose it were a copyrighted play, the defendant would be enjoined from its exhibition, whether to an audience of one or thousands; and there are cases, of which I took no note, that hold that even a gratuitous exhibition, in places somewhat domestic, might be enjoined as an injury which resulted in keeping people from a desire to see the authorized performance. So, here, this unauthorized genuine copy might be used, as a more certainly piratical one could be, to limit the lawful buyers. Second-hand copies, regularly sold, would do the same, it is true, but that use of them is incidental to property in them, and has been paid for. But perhaps the plaintiff should submit to this injury by one copy as a somewhat inevitable accident of the situation, incident to such property; and in this case, for the present, we will treat it as de minimis. Drone, Copyr. 527. But the plaintiff has no foundation for the claim for an injunction restraining defendant from dealing in this book in the future otherwise than as he may deal with the plaintiff, or of interfering with its local agent in his work. It will be time enough to apply whatever remedy it may have when he procures other surreptitious copies, and we cannot adjudicate in advance that he may not have a perfect right to sell any other copies than those The defendant involved in this controversy. will pay the costs. Decree accordingly.

ORIGIN OF BLOTTING-PAPER. - When did blotting-paper come into general use? Reference was made to it in 1661 by Fuller. He says, "There are almost as many several kinds of paper as conditions of persons betwixt the emperor and beggar. Imperial, royal, cardinal, and so downward to that coarse paper called emporetica, used only for chapmen to wrap their wares in. Paper participates in some of the characteristics of the countrymen who make it; the Venetian being neat, subtle and courtlike; the French, light, slight and slender; the Dutch, thick, corpulent and gross; not only to say sometimes also charta-bibula, sucking up the sponginess thereof." The use of the substance was known before the year 1600, for the occurrence of the name or its equivalents may be judged from the following books of that period:
"Löschpapier," German; "Cartasugante," Italian; "Papier-buvard," French; and "Charta bibula," Latin—all meaning sucking. -Pater and Printing Trades Journal.

THE AMERICAN CATALOGUE.

From The Critic, August 21, 1886.

PROBABLY no decade in the history of American literature has been more marked than that beginning with the Centennial year. The impulse given by the self-gratulatory retrospect of our national growth and development during the first century has shown itself not merely in increased literary productiveness, but in the multiplication of efforts to render easily available, and in the highest degree profitable, the mass of material bound up in books. origination and prosperous continuation of the American Library Association, which has already done so much to exalt and improve the profession of librarian, and whose stimulating influence has been felt across the waters—the extension of Poole's Index to its present noble proportions, supplemented by Fletcher's Co-operative Quarterly Index-the establishment of the Library Journal, the Literary News and the Critic-the appearance of Mr. Foster's exceedingly helpful Reference Lists-the excellent index work of Crocker, Griswold, Dursee, Conant, Cushing, Wiggin and others—the issue of the constantly improving Trade List Annual—these are but a few of the events of this noteworthy time. No other period has given birth to so many books about books. Never have there been so many helps for readers. Critical and biographical histories of our literature, suggestions as to courses and methods of reading, lists of best books, annotated and descriptive catalogues, have come forth in these recent years in the greatest profusion. And especially in the art of cataloguing have the most remarkable improvements been made. With rare exceptions, the old-time catalogues were cumbrous, inconvenient and full of errors-mere classified lists of books, in which the search for a title was generally a long and vexatious task. But now, arranged according to the one-alphabet, or dictionary system, they furnish the desired information in a twinkling.

"The American Catalogue" was one of the noblest fruits of the Centennial. Though projected by Mr. Leypoldt several years before, and tentatively announced in 1873, it was actually begun in 1876. Its predecessors, Trübner's "Guide to American Literature," Roorbach's "Bibliotheca Americana" (1820-60) and Kelly's American Catalogue" (1861-71), had done good service in their day, but were out of date, and only partially covered the field. Mr. Leypoldt's purpose was to furnish a complete and accurate "finding-list" for the trade. With this primarily in view, he found it necessary, though not without re'uctance, and much to the regret of all bibliographers, to limit his Catalogue to such books as were in print and for sale on July 1, 1876. The absence of any preliminary basis for the work, the surprising neglect and indifference of many publishers in supplying the necessary data, the incompleteness and incorrectness of much of the information furnished, combined with other hindrances to increase the magnitude of the task, and to delay its completion much beyond the date first fixed. One volume with authors and titles, numbering 70,000 entries, and representing 900 publishing houses, appeared in 1879, followed in 1881 by a second, covering the same ground but with arrangement of the matter by subjects. This grand work, which involved Mr. Leypoldt in large pecuniary expense beyond all hope of return, is a monument to the patience, perseverance, zeal, and bibliographical devotion of that gentleman. Unlike most monuments, its practical utility is daily demonstrated, by the indispensable service it renders to hundreds of workers with books. Only eleven copies remain of the original edition, and as no more are to be printed, the price has advanced from $25 to $40.

The original plan of this Catalogue included the issue, at intervals of about five years, of supplementary volumes, continuing the record. The volume now before us is the first of this series. It covers the period from July 1, 1876, to June 30, 1884. It is dedicated "To the Memory of Frederick Leypoldt, a Martyr to his Zeal in the Cause he made his Own, of Unlocking to the World of Readers the Treasure-House of Books." In the preface Mr. Bowker gives some account of the difficulties and consequent delays which attended the preparation of the original work, and which somewhat embarrassed the compilers of the present volume. He also calls attention to some of the important features of the Catalogue. Then follows a list of publishers, with notes of changes in firms or locations. This list fills 20 two-column pages, and contains some 1600 titles. The Catalogue proper is a double one—the first part giving authors and titles, and the second arranging the same books according to subjects. It would, of course, be better if the whole amount of material were thrown into one alphabet, but doubtless the desire to issue the first part as near as possible to the date when the entries stopped prevented this arrangement. The general plan is essentially that of the original Catalogue. In the first part the entry is under the author's name, followed by the full title of the book, number of volumes, size, edition, date, style of binding, price, and name of publisher. Novels, juveniles, plays, and other popular books with characteristic titles, are entered under the first word of the title also, as are anonymous works. ences are made to number and page of THE Publishers' Wrekly where the book was mentioned, and, possibly, reviewed. The utility of this feature is obvious. The object of the second part is to show what books have been published on any given topic. The convenience is increased by the fact that the arrangement is by specific subjects, rather than, as has usually been the case, by large general classes. For memoirs and lives we look, not under "Biography," but under the names of the individuals; for treatises on iron or gold, under those words, not under "Metals;" for histories, under the names of the particular countries or states. Cross-references between kindred topics, or from one heading to another more specific, are freely used, much to the advantage of the searcher, whose ideas of classification may not coincide with those of the cataloguer. In addition to American books, the Catalogue includes reprints of foreign works, and such importations as are kept in stock. An appendix also gives a record of Government publications from January 1, 1881, to July 1, 1884, thus providing a continuation of Mr. Ben Perley Poore's volume, which closes with March, 1881. There are, furthermore, lists of learned societies that publish transactions and other documents, lists of books issued in sets or series, and a supplementary list of works published in the cheap "libraries," but omitted from the earlier portion of the Catalogue.

The execution of this great work is admirable. Few but those who have been engaged in similar labors can have any just appreciation of the amount of toil, of skill, of energy, of careful precision, necessary to the successful completion of such an undertaking. Nor can any one. by merely turning the leaves of this sumptions quarto, pronounce upon its merits. Like a detionary or a cyclopædia, its worth is not apparent at a glance, or to be gathered even from consecutive reading. Only those can estimate its full value who, as book-dealers, librarians, or literary workers, have occasion to consult it for information. To such it must prove a veritable friend in need. That it will auswer all questions, that no errors can be found, no omissions noted, is not claimed. But that the compilers have spared no pains to bring it very near perfection, and that their success has been commensurate with their exertions, is abundantly evident. And yet, after all, the editor is far from content with the result, but suggests the possibility of an ideal American bibliography to include, in one enormous volume, the data of these and other catalogues, and recording all American books, in print and out of print, up to the year of grace 1900. And all that is needed to the realization of this ideal, he intimates, is a bibliographer with genius and pluck sufficient to undertake the work, and 500 persons who will give $100 each toward the expense.

NOTES IN PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, August 23, 1866.

THE Philadelphia trade has not yet gathered itself together fully from its summer vacation, but there is already evident a good deal of activity in preparing books for the busy season. visit of Mr. Craig Lippincott and Mr. Henry Kimball, of the Lippincott firm, to London, where Mr. Kimball "astonished the natives" both by the rapidity with which he did business and the amount of sight-seeing he could do in an off-day, has resulted in securing for the J. B. Lippincott Co. some very strong alliances and new lines of books. Their special arrangements with Smith, Elder & Co. and Chapman & Hall, of London, and A. & C. Black, of Edinburgh, now give them control of five editions of Thackeray, three of Dickens, two of Scott, and two of Carlyle, and they especially emphasize their Standard and Library editions of the former as the best offered in America. The Handy editions of Thackeray and of Dickens at fifty cents a volume, cloth, are among the latest new English enterprises of which they have control. A feat: ure of their Thackeray is the new volumes of "Miscellaneous Essays" and "Contributions from Puck," containing material which is to be found in no other American edition. Their full announcements will appear later on, but it may be mentioned that they will have one of the foremost books, if not the foremost book, of the Christmas season in the "Book of American Figure Painting," a superb large quarto with text by Mrs. Van Rensselaer and above thirty photo-gravures of specimens of the best American figure painting. They are preparing also a very long line of small illustrated quartos in new styles, and as a whole their list promises to be the strongest they have put forward for several years.

Messrs. Porter & Coates are making a most successful specialty of their cheap 12mos in the Alta edition, a set of books very well printed and bound with black and gold stamp and silk ribbon marker, to which they have added this year nearly fifty volumes, making a remarkable collection of over one hundred important and popular works. These books are really wonders of cheapness, being sold at wholesale at a price which enables them to be retailed at from thirtyfive cents up. They have in hand for translation the seventh French volume of the Count de Paris's history of our war, but the recent political events in France and the proscription of the princes have delayed the preparation of the eighth French volume which is needed to complete the fourth American volume. Meantime, in view of the present Gettysburgh controversy they are reprinting that portion of the third American volume relating to the battle of Gettysburgh in separate shape, with some additional matter.

Messrs. T. B. Peterson & Brothers have lost small gold mine in the death of Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, although doubtless her death will give a present impetus to the sale of her wellknown books. In company with their other leading author, Mrs. Southworth, she very nearly led the line at all the circulating libraries through the country, and the number of copies sold of her best-known books has been something extraordinary. The house announces a general reduction in the price of Southworth, Stephens, and other novels and their standard cook-books from $1.75 to $1.50. Messrs. Peterson are now relying a good deal on their translations of popular French authors to supply their trade with novelties, and will presently announce new novels from Henry Greville, Ernest Daudet, and others, as well as a number of new American books.

The Presbyterian Board of Publication will have for the fall a number of new books as well as editions for 1987 of their Annuals. hours with the Lessons," by Presbyterian clergymen, will not be reissued for next year, but their "Westminster Question Book," now in its thirteenth year, will be ready for 1887, and its popularity among teachers and older scholars is shown by the fact that the sales for 1886 reached over 50,000 copies. The periodicals issued by the Board are steadily increasing in circulation, and a single issue of each adds up more than a million copies, while the total for the last year exceeded 16,500,000. Their Westminster Lesson Leaf circulates 300,000 monthly, and the Westminster Quarterly, for advanced scholars, which was reduced in price last year, now has a circulation of 200,000 and more. The Board shows the steadily increasing success that comes from good business management on a conservative cash basis; starting from moderate cash capital a generation ago, it has been able not only to build the fine building which it occupies in Philadelphia, but to extend its organization steadily on the basis of its own earnings. It has now several depositories at the West under the authority of the General Assembly, as well as special relations with more than twenty important houses representing it throughout the country.

The American Sunday-school Union, as the beneficiary of the John C. Green Fund, has been able to do much good work in obtaining and publishing books of real service to the community at large as well as to the Christian Church. This year the income of the fund will be used for a work on Biblical antiquities by a capable writer, who is expected to make an exceptionally good hand-book on this subject.

For next year a premium of one thousand dollars will be paid from the fund for the best book on the "Christian Obligations of Property and Labor," the manuscript to be submitted to the Committee on Publication on or before November 1, 1887. The subject is one of the most important of the present day, and it is an excellent judgment that selects it for the competition. The Union is desirous of promoting in every way the growth of a higher class of Sundayschool literature of American origin, and its intention is not to adopt or adapt English books so long as there is a fair supply of good American literature of the kind. It would be worth while for more American writers to turn their attention to juveniles to fill this blank—books good as well as goody, equally acceptable from a literary and from a moral point of view.

Mr. Henry Altemus is now well settled in his new quarters at 513 Cherry Street-an establishment which would doubtless surprise the elders in whose time the business was started. This house can now boast four generations in the trade, Mr. Howard Altemus being the greatgrandson of the original founder of the house. Mr. Altemus often recalls in his interesting talk the crisis in the binding business at the early years of the war, when the new manufacture of photograph albums came as a special providence to start up idle factories. The Appletons in New York and the Lippincotts and Mr. Altemus in Philadelphia were the first manufacturers of these goods in this country. The Appletons' attention was called to them through Baron Rothschild, who had brought over half a dozen of French manufacture as presents to friends, and who put an order in the hands of Mr. Matthews for a half dozen more like them. About the same time Mr. Gottschalk, a Philadelphia merchant, had been given one by some Paris friends as a present to a daughter, and some years ago, when the suit over the alleged patent was going on, he was able to date his importation exactly by recalling that he took the book out of his trunk in his stateroom just before landing in preparing for custom examination, and having forgotten its purpose, wondered what on earth it could be for. While he was doing this the pilot came on deck with the news that Abraham Lincoln was nominated for President, and the first question of every one, Mr. Gottschalk said, was, "Who is Abraham Lincoln?" Mr. Gottschalk afterward imported a few albums, and samples were brought by two different Philadelphia photographers to Mr. Altemus with the query whether he could make them here. On his saying that he could, one of the photographers offered to place an order for a thousand copies or as many as he could make, and from this sprang the business in which this house is now so prominent. The desire at the beginning of the war for some means for keeping together the pictures of "the boys in the field" or "the dear ones at home," came just in time to save a business which was fast going to pieces in the general stagnation. The Appletons and the Lippincotts have both frequently acknowledged that albums turned the tide in both their cases also.

Messrs. Sower, Potts & Co., who suffered in the printing-office fire of last spring, have been busy during the summer in making over again such plates as were destroyed, and are now in shape to supply all orders for their educational books.

General sympathy is expressed throughout the Philadelphia trade in the illness of Mr. Roger Sherman, who has been very low for some days as the result of a paralytic or appoplectic attack. Since the failure of J. M. Stoddart & Co. last year loaded on his shoulders the Encyclopædia Britannica, which he had been financially carrying, Mr. Sherman has been working the better part of the twenty-four hours in the day to make it a success. Something like $400,000 is said to have gone into this work, and Mr. Sherman's energy was said to be proving successful in getting his money back again. Few men, however, can stand the strain of continuous work from half past six in the morning to eleven o'clock at night, which were frequently his hours, and there has been much anxiety as to the result of the illness which has overtaken him.

COMMUNICATIONS.

NEW YORK, August 24, 1886.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly. SIR: One little phase of the subscription book question has never received, I think, publicitythat is, the exceedingly large discount at which the trade are offered "subscription" books after their first sale has been effected. As the works of the most prominent member of the most prominent subscription book firm agitating the subject in the press can be bought by any bookseller at half price from the jobber, who, pre-sumably, makes a profit thereon, I think it is pertinent to ask why so much fuss should be made over booksellers selling a book which they have bought honestly, but which the publishers pretend to withhold, while other books emanating under the same circumstances and from the same individual are thus thrown on the market at extraordinary discounts-and that, too, when they are exceedingly popular books. The subject is one on which a good deal of light can be

BOOKSELLER.

FREDERICK STEIN, the bookseller, died at his home in Groton, Conn., on the 17th inst., after an illness of about a week, of a disease of the kidneys. Mr. Stein had been in business in New London for nearly thirty years. He settled in that place, we are informed, in 1857, and with a Mr. Werden, with whom he had been associated in business in Pittsfield, Mass., established the firm of Stein & Werden. He continued in business until the time of his death, occupying the store No. 44 State Street all that time. After the firm of Werden & Stein was dissolved, the business was continued under the title of Stein & Belden, and subsequently George Colfax was admitted a partner with Mr. Stein, and they conducted the business under the firm name of Stein & Colfax. Mr. Colfax retired from the firm about a dozen years ago. Mr. Stein was a German by birth. He came to this country when a boy and located at Pittsfield, Mass., where he obtained employment with Mr. Werden, then a manufacturer of pocket books, and with whom he was afterward associated as a partner in New London. He was a careful and conservative business man, and was fairly successful without entering into the bustle of trade.

ROGER SHERMAN.

As we go to press the painful intelligence reaches us that Mr. Roger Sherman, one of the best-known printers in this country, died at his home in Philadelphia, at the age of fifty-three years. He obtained his education in a New York seminary, and graduated from the institution with high honors. He amassed a big fortune, and was the actual publisher of the "Eacyclopædia Britannica," although James Stoddart was nominally the publisher. The work in connection with this enterprise wore heavily on Mr. Sherman, and no doubt caused in a large measure his illness. Mr. Sherman had commad of several languages. He was a member of the Academy of Fine Arts, and for charity he had an enviable reputation. He leaves no family.

MRS. ANN SOPHIA STEPHENS.

MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS, the novelist, died at Newport, R. I., on the 20th inst., at the advanced age of seventy-six years. She was the daughter of John Winterbotham, and was born in Derby, Conn., or was brought there an infant from England. The family record does not seem to be clear upon the subject. In 1830 she became the wife of Edward Stephens, and soon after they went to Portland, Me., where Mrs. Stephens edited the Portland Magazine from 1835 to 1837. In 1836 she compiled "The Portland Sketch Book," a volume composed of writings of natives or residents of that city. In 1837 Mr. and Mrs. Stephens removed to New York City. Mrs. Stephens edited the Ladies' Companion for four years, and in 1842 became editorially connected with Graham's Magazine, and later with Peterson's Ladies' National Magazine. In 1843 she established the Ladies' World, and in 1846 she started the Illustrated New Monthly. During her busy life she also contributed to the Columbia Magazine, the New York Weekly, the Philadelphia Home Journal and many other periodicals. She wrote many fugitive poems, but these have never been collected. As a writer of fiction she has been known throughout the country for nearly fifty years. Her "Fashion and Famine," the first of her novels published in book form, appeared in 1854 with the imprint of three publishers. Since then new tales have rapidly appeared from her pen until a short time ago. Her novels are chiefly devoted to the trials, sorrows and joys of young lovers. The titles of her twenty-three works are: "The Reigning Belle," "Mabel's Mistake," "The Reigning Belle," "Mabel's Mistake," "The Wife's Secret," "Lord Hope's Choice," "Bertha's Engagement." "Bellehood and Bondage," "Fashion and Famine," "Palaces and Prisons," "Married in Haste," "Ruby Gray's Strategy," "The Old Countess," "The Hairess" "The Soldier's Orphane" "A Noble Gray's Strategy," "The Old Countess," "The Heiress," "The Soldier's Orphans," "A Noble Woman," "Mary Derwent," "Doubly False," "The Gold Brick," "The Rejected Wife, "The Curse of Gold," "Silent Struggles," "Wives and Widows," "Norston's Rest," and "The Old Homestead." Her tale of "Mary Derwent" was the one which first brought her into prominence, and with it she wone a prize of into prominence, and with it she won a prize of $400 offered by one of the periodicals. Mrs. Stephens also published some works on fancy needlework and edited "The Pictorial History of the War for the Union." She was buried in Greenwood Cemetery in Brooklyn, L. I., at the side of her husband, whose death preceded hers by exactly twenty-four years.

CHARLES C. PERKINS.

CHARLES C. PERKINS, the art critic and writer upon art subjects, met with a sudden and painful death at Windsor, Vt., August 25. He was born in Boston in 1823, graduated from Harvard in 1843, and went abroad in 1855 to reside there for twelve years. He was the first American to be elected a member of the section of belleslettres in the French Academy. Mr. Perkins has published a number of works upon art which have won signal praise. His "Tuscan Sculptors" appeared in 1864, and was published in London the following year. Three years later, in 1867, "Italian Sculptors" appeared. In both these books the plates were etched by the author, many of them from his own drawings. He was not an artist in the professional sense, but he had studied painting in oils under Scheffer and etching under Bracquemond and Lalanne. In 1878 he published a biographical and critical essay upon "Raphael and Michael Angelo." At the time of his death he was associated with John D. Champlin, Jr., in editing "The Cyclopedia of American Art," published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

PROF. W. SCHERER.

The death is announced of Professor W. Scherer, the author of the well-known history of German literature recently published in this country by the Scribners. He was born at Schönborn, in Lower Austria, in April, 1841. In 1864 he edited with Müllenhoff at Vienna "Denkmäler Deutscher Poesie und Prosa," following it up with a volume "Zur Geschichte der Deutschen Sprache." In 1872 he became a professor in the university the Germans established at Strasbourg. In 1877 he accepted a "ruf" to Berlin. He fell ill early in last winter, but ralled and continued lecturing till the close of the summer session.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

A NEW volume of poems and sonnets by George H. Boker is announced for publication in the fall.

MR. JOAQUIN MILLER has undertaken the preparation of an editorial department for the Golden Era, a San Francisco magazine.

MISS KATE GREENAWAY'S Christmas book will be "A. Applepie;" Mr. Walter Crane's, Baby's Own Æsop:" while Mr. Linley Sambourne is engaged on an "Illustrated Alphabet."

MR. JOHN D. CHAMPLIN, JR., is about to publish a volume dealing with the coaching tour made in Great Britain by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, Mr. Matthew Arnold, and Mr. William Black.

JULES VERNE'S new novel is to be entitled "Robur le Conquerant," the scene of which is laid in Philadelphia. It is said that its details of American life are calculated to astonish Americans.

MR. NATHAN HASKELL DOLE is engaged upon a translation of Don Armando Palacio Valdés's "Marta y Maria," a Spanish novel of great power and interest, which T. Y. Crowell & Co. will publish in the early autumn.

"Mrs. SARAH T. BOLTON—not Sarah K. Bolton," says the Literary World, "intends soon to publish, in two volumes, some of the recollections of her life abroad, under the title, 'Europe, as I Saw It Thirty Years Ago: "she is now busy with a book for the times, to be called 'Pontius Pilate.'"

MRS. ANNA M. B. ELLIS, society editor of the Boston Herald, will bring out a volume of personal interviews, entitled "Chats with Famous Artists" (actors and singers), and a revised and much enlarged edition of her "Life of Mrs. J. R. Vincent," the actress, through Lee & Shepard, in September or October.

VERNON LEE (Miss Violet Paget) has written a "fantastic story," which will shortly be published, in one volume, by Messrs. Blackwood, under the title of "A Phantom Lover." The same house also announces the following novels: "A House Divided Against Itself," by Mrs. Oliphant; "A Strange Inheritance," by F. M. F. Skene; and "Lesterre Durant," by the author of "Miss Molly."

MRS. SCHUYLER VAN RENSSELAER is preparing for Houghton, Mifflin & Co. a life of the late H. H. Richardson, the architect, and would be glad to have an opportunity of examining any letters to or from Mr. Richardson, or any other material that might add to the thoroughness and interest of her work. Any manuscripts sent to her in care of her publishers will be carefully preserved. The forthcoming book, of which only 500 copies will be printed, will be a large one, handsomely illustrated. It will be published by subscription only, at $15 a copy, and may be expected to appear some time next winter.

On the 16th of September Mr. Justin Mc-Carthy, M.P., will sail from Liverpool for the United States, where he has made arrangements to deliver a course of lectures during the winter season. The tour will be a literary, not a political one, and Mr. McCarthy will probably choose subjects akin to those by which he won popularity in America some twelve years ago. Even should he be induced to include historical and political matters, he has wisely determined to avoid party and controversial subjects. "It is an open secret," says the London Athenaum, "that the success of The Right Honorable has decided its authors to write another novel conjointly. This will be completed before Mr. McCarthy leaves England."

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—A scheme is on foot looking to the incorporation of Rand, Avery & Co. as a stock company, with a capital of $300,000. Mr. Moses King, the publisher, is prominently identified with the movement.

NORWICH, CONN.—Battin & Taylor, booksellers, stationers, etc., have been succeeded by H. S. Battin.

PHILADELPHIA.—The publishing portion of the business of George H. Buchanan & Co. will be conducted hereafter under the style of Arnold & Co., the printing portion of their business continuing under the style of George H. Buchanan & Co., both firms being composed of the same individuals.

ROME, GA.—L. V. Brazer, bookseller, stationer, etc., has been succeeded by L. V. Brazer & Co.

WALNUT, Mo.—Anson Perkins, bookseller and stationer, is closing out his business.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Mr. George F. Wharton, the enterprising New Orleans bookseller, is on a visit North. Mr. Wharton, we learn from the Picayune, though still in his teens, "is a young man that New Orleans may well be proud of. He comes of good stock—being the son of Major E. C. Wharton, an old journalist—and commenced his business career with absolutely nothing, undertaking to supply with his own hands such customers as he could find with current reading matter. The business grew on him, and he took a modest store, and the store grew and new customers continued to come. Then he employed assistants, clerks, and a bookkeeper, and finally took in an older brother as junior partner; and now the establishment of George F. Wharton & Brother is, in its line, one of the most prosperous in the city."

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

A NEW "Catalogue of French Books," of equal value to general readers, booksellers, and teachers, has just been published by William R. Jenkins, 850 Sixth Avenue, N. Y. City. It comprises large lists of standard and popular French literature and text, books for the study of French, adapted to American students. It also contains a list of "recommended" French novels, which a bookseller would be perfectly safe in recommending to any of his customers. (70 p. S. pap.)

CATALOGUES OF SECOND-HAND BOOKS.— Henry Sotheran & Co., London, a catalogue of second-hand books, ancient and modern, in all classes of literature (July, 1886), No. 258. (32 p. O.)—Bertram Dobell, No. 66 Queen's Crescent, Haverstock Hill, N. W., has published a "Catalogue of Choice Books" (No. 3, new series), offered by him for sale. They are mostly rare books and choice editions. (32 p.S. pap.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

W. J. JOHNSTON, Potter Building, New York City, will shortly issue "The Electric Motor and its Applications," by T. C. Martin and J. Wetzler.

THE Critic announces that Thomas Hughes's life of Peter Cooper "having proved unsatisfactory to the family, Mr. Hewitt has placed the work in other hands, and a new life is being written."

DODD, MEAD & Co. will delight many readers with the publication of another of E. P. Roe's ever popular novels, with the taking title, "He Fell in Love With His Wife," to be brought out uniform with his other books already on the catalogue of this house.

CLEAVES, MACDONALD & Co. are about to issue a new edition of the works of Rev. Walter S. Colton. The series comprises four works of "Land and Sea, and Notes on Italy;" "Ship and Shore, and Sea and Sailor;" "Deck and Port," and "Three Years in California."

THE Science COMPANY, 47 Lafayette Place, will shortly issue in pamphlet form the series of articles that appeared in Science, discussing economic subjects, by Professors H. C. Adams, Sımon Newcomb, and Richard T. Ely and others. It will be called "The Science Economic Discussion."

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. have just published in handsome paper covers "The Story of a Bright Idea," "Silken Threads," and "Simply a Love Story." They will also soon issue an important medical work entitled "The Relations of Hospitals to Medical Practice," by Charles F. Withington.

THE next volume of the Famous Women series will be Miss Mary Robinson's "Life of Marguerite of Angoulême, Queen of Navarre and Sister of Francis I." Miss Robinson is also engaged upon a history of the foreign relations of France from the invasion of Italy by Charles VIII. in 1484 to the fall of the House of Valois in 1589.

WILLIAM R. JENKINS has nearly ready the sixth volume in his Romans Choisis, which will be Erckmann-Chatrian's "L'Ami Fritz;" a new volume in Contes Choisis, entitled "L'Ombra," written by A. Gennevraye; and "La Filled Roland," number fourteen in his Thidten Contemporain. He will also furnish little French students with the amusing story of "Les Malheurs de Sophie," by Mme. de Segur.

WHITE, STOKES & ALLEN are preparing a new edition of George A. Baker's remarkably successful "Point Lace and Diamonds," which will be augmented by a few more original veri de societé, composed in the author's happiest vein. They will also bring out a new edition of his "Bad Habits of Good Society," on fine-laid paper. These volumes will be uniform and issued in various styles of bindings, such as olive green vellum cloth, bevelled boards, half calf, gilt top, limp calf, tree calf, etc.

D. LOTHROP & Co. have just ready "What is the Bible?" a translation from the French of G. de Felice; an abridgment of Baxter's "Saints Rest," edited by Benjamin Fawcett; and in their Golden Treasury series "Hours of Devotion," by Dr. A. Tholuck, with a preface by Rev. Dr. Horatius Bonar. Rev. William Leonard Gage has written the record of his seventh trip to Europe, and it is published under the title of "A Leisurely Journey." The pretty stories of the Wide Awake have again furnished material for three volumes, which appear as "Foreign Facts and Fancies," by eleven well-known writers for children; "In City and Camp," also contributed by eleven writers; and "Put in his Hand and Pulled out a Plum," by Mrs. Ella M. Baker, a collection of twelve stories "for a Christmas pie."

G. P. Putnam's Sons have in press "Humorous Masterpieces from American Literature," edited by Edward I. Mason, in three volumes uniform with "Prose Masterpieces from Modern Essayists," the selections covering American literature from the first writings of Washington Irving to the present day, and including all the well-known humorists from Alcott to Warner. This house also announces "American Literature, 1607–1885," by Charles F. Richardson, Professor of English Literature in Dartmouth College; and "Half a Century of American History, 1846–1886," by Alexander Johnston, Professor of Jurisprudence and Political Economy in the College of New Jersey. They have also in press a "List of Books Written by or Relating to Alexander Hamilton," by Paul L. Ford, of Brooklyn. Only 500 copies of the volume will be printed. In form it will be a large octavo, uniform with Mr. Lodge's edition of Hamilton's works. Only one side of the leaves will be printed on. In all more than 300 titles are given.

SWAN, SONNENSCHEIN & Co. will publish at once "A Short History of Parliament," by Mr. B. C. Skottowe.

CHATTO & WINDUS will soon publish R. L. Sievensom's "The Merry Men, and Other Tales and Fables."

THE Parisian house of Hachette announces a book on Metropolitan Railroads in New York and the Great American Cities, by M. Banderai, a civil engineer on one of the principal French railroads.

THE title of Mr. J. H. Shorthouse's new work will, it is said, be "Sir Percival;" the story is adapted from the "Morte d'Arthur," with an aim to show up modern agnosticism, the plot being laid in the present day.

MR. BRANDER MATTHEWS'S volume of tales, soon to be published, will appear in London as well as New York. Chatto & Windus are the publishers there. Its title is "A Secret of the Sea, and Other Stories."

MESSRS. LONGMANS have in preparation a new edition of Professor Hearn's standard work on "The Government of England—its Structure and its Development," which has been called for by the recent attention given to the subject by political discussion.

THE next volume in the series of Philosophical Classics for English Readers will be "Hume," by Professor Knight of St. Andrews. "Bacon" has been undertaken by Professor Nichol of Glasgow, and "Spinoza" by Principal Cairdin in place of Dr. James Martineau.

What is described as "a thrilling book for boys somewhat after the style of Mr. R. L. Stevenson's 'Treasure Island,' " is announced to be published shortly in London by Commander Cameron, the well-known African traveller.

The title will be "The Cruise of the Black Prince Privateer, by Quartermaster Hawkins."

WARD & DOWNEY, London, have in press a biographical memoir of the late Abbé Liszt from the pen of M. Raphael Ledos de Beaufort, the translator and editor of the recently-published "Letters of George Sand." The work was suggested by the great public interest taken in the venerable Dr. Liszt during his recent visit to England. Its publication was delayed at the time, but it will now be issued without delay.

THE biography of Queen Victoria, which Mr. Barnett Smith has had in hand for some time, will be published in September in one volume of 400 pages. It will contain several portraits.

A FORTHCOMING work on Dickens promises to be interesting. It is written by an Englishman, F. G. Kitton, and is to be called "Dickens Portrayed by Pen and Pencil." It will give a complete description of the portraits of the novelist, together with a great number of copies of portraits made during every period of his lite. Many rare and unknown pictures will be included, as well as "pen-portraits" and reminiscences by artists to whom he sat, and by authors and other friends with whom he associated. Mr. Kitton hopes to produce his volume in the course of a few weeks.

T. FISHER UNWIN, London, has just published a new political handbook on the Irish Question, by Mr. J. A. Partridge, author of several works on political questions of the day; its title is, "The Making of the Irish Nation." It contains a resume of what historians and statesmen have had to say at different periods of Anglo-Irish history, and is intended as a compendium of useful information on the Home Rule question. He has just published a new work by M. Dal. Vero, author of "A Heroine of the Commonplace," entitled "Francis: a Socialistic Romance."

THE first volume of the late Dr. Friedrich Kapp's "Geschichte des deutschen Buchhandels" (History of the German Book Trade) we learn from the New York Evening Post, has appeared in print. Dr. Kapp had been busy gathering material for this work during the last seven years of his life, visiting the archives of many German and Austrian cities for that purpose. He had hoped to finish the first volume in the winter of 1884, but death overtook him in the autumn of that year, shortly after his return from Antwerp, where he had consulted the col-lections of the Musée Plantin. Two learned booksellers, Dr. Albrecht Kirchhoff and F. Hermann Meyer, and the literary historian, Professor Zarncke, have, at the instance of the German Book Exchange, completed the first volume. It fills 900 pages, and comprises the period from the discovery of the art of printing to the second half of the seventeenth century.

CORRECTION. — Through inadvertence the prices of "Sheldon's Studies in General History," published by D. C. Heath & Co., on page 90 of the Educational Number of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, were misquoted as seventy-five cents mailing and sixty cents wholesale. Dealers are therefore requested to correct the prices to $1.75 mailing and $1.60 wholesale, in the copy of the catalogue which they use for reference.

For 1886 (Fourteenth Year).

A Large 8vo, over 2500 pages. (Ready in September.)

The improvements of recent years in the Trade-List Annual have given such general satisfaction that there will be no change in the forthcoming volume (fourteenth year) as to the essential features, which are:

- The latest Catalogues of American Publishers and Manufacturers, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm names.
- 2. A complete reprint of the "Publishers' Weekly" full title RECORD of BOOKS published (inclusive of all the descriptive notes) from July 4, 1885, to June 26, 1886. In order to facilitate reference, it will be accompanied by a full INDEX, by which every book on record can be found, whether it is looked for under author, title, or subject.
- The "EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE" for 1886, which is used by the entire trade and educational interests as the most representative reference-list of School-books.

The above Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase and sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction last year, we have decided to apply it to all copies of the "Annual" this year. The price of the book before publication will be ONE DOLLAR AND A HALF NET, including the index. Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concarre surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut. The price of the book will be raised to Two Dollars net after day of publication.

Delayed or unpaid subscriptions are not entitled to the subscription price ($1.50).

Remittances should be made by check, express or Post-Office money-order, or registered letter, as we cannot be responsible for any losses. Receipt for remittance will be sent by return mail.

Unless special shipping directions are received, copies ready for delivery will be dispatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for 70 cents per copy extra.

BY THE RIGHT HON.

i volume, 12mo. Paper, 10 cents.

CONTAINING TWO PARTS:

Part I.—THE HISTORY OF AN IDEA. Part II.—LESSONS OF THE ELECTION.

The bare announcement of this extraordinary publication has created the greatest sensation in London, where its political effect will be momentous, and its interest and importance will be hardly less marked in this country.

The book is divided into two parts. Part I. is entitled "The History of an Idea," and traces the development of the Home Rule idea in Mr. Gladstone's own mind, defends his past course. and defines his present position. Part II. is entitled "Lessons of the Election." In it Mr. Gladstone analyzes the election returns, and concludes that Ireland has only to wait with patience and hope.

THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG.

BY THE COMTE DE PARIS.

The Battle of Gettysburg fills three chapters in the third volume of the Comte de Paris' "History of the Civil War in America," and is acknowledged to be the fairest and most graphic account of the battle ever written; and in response to numerous demands it is now published separately.

With an appendix containing an itinerary of the Army of the Potomac and co-operating forces in the Gettysburg campaign, which has been carefully revised and enlarged from documents in the possession of the War Department, giving the most complete organization of the Army of the Potomac, and detailing the name of every general and subordinate commander on the field, with a return showing the casualties by regiment and battery in the Union and Confederate armies, July 1-3, 1863, gives to this book an official character possessed by none other relating to the battle.

ILLUSTRATED POCKET EDITION OF

SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS AND POEMS.

With Glossary and Life and Index to Familiar Quotations.

By J. TALFOURD BLAIR.

Carefully Edited from the Best Texts. With 40 Line Block reproductions of Westall and others' well-known Engravings.

8 Volumes, Crown 32mo, set up from a new font of Nonpareil Type, and beautifully printed by the Glasgow University Press on thin opaque paper, specially made for THIS EDITION.

Though there are many editions of Shakespeare, the publishers feel confident that there is a relivant for one smaller in size and price than any which has yet appeared. The "Illustrated Pocks Edition" adds to its other advantages as clear a letterpress as the other smaller editions, although these latter are almost twice as large, and more costly.

Two Neapolitans—a brother and sister—from the very lowest strata of society enter into a scheme to pass themselves off as the heirs to an immense fortune that has lad unclaimed in Paris for a long time. Fortified with forged documents, they leave Italy for France, and are in a link while put in possession of the "twenty millions." As the adventurers are both young and handsome, they at each obtain the entress to society. Their Aladdin like adventure and dishonest intrigues make a thrilling story, in which however, they are finally unmasked.

"John Parmelee's curse" is the opium habit, contracted in the hope of finding consolation for his breaking heart, after witnessing his wife's downfall, and the utter wreck of her womanhood, from the same vice. The picture of Parmelee's home is a sad and realistic one, and the figure of his little daughter Sophie most pathetic. The story turns on an attempt that is made to rob the bank of which Parmelee is cashier. He has been warned that the robbery is planned, and makes an honest endeavor to save the funds in his charge. His ungovernable love for opium gets him into a very suspicious tangle of circumstances, which are only straitened out after a number of strange adventures which bring him to New York City and into a den of thieves and a Chinese opium joint.

The last novel from Miss Hay's pen. A character study of a young girl, as to whom the reader is left in doubt whether she is "wicked" or insane. She succeeds in committing one murder and plans another, in which the victim is her sister. In the latter case she loses her own life, fortunately for herself and all belonging to her. The story takes place in an out-of-the-way English town, and is full of interest in spite of its unhealthy subject. A pretty towe experience and a saucy Irish heroine are the lighter elements of the stery. elements of the story.

Harper, 1886. 88 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 540.) pap., 25 c. Lady Jackson has a special gift of description, which has full scope for its exercise in the brilliant courts of Francs I. and Henry II., whose reigns occupied the first part of the 16th century. The many pageants of marriages and deaths, notably, among the former, that of Mary of Scotland to the young Dauphin of France, are presented to the reader with a wealth of detail that is quite fascinating. This epoch is rich in many interests. It witnessed the beginning of the Reformation in France, and possessed the infamous Catherine de Medici. It was a period of great luxury and display, and one in which learning und the fine arts received a great impetus. Lady Jackson has done full justice to all these subjects.

A sequel to "Birchwood." Those who read that book will remember that Mr. Plimpton had offered the use of as eld vacant house on his place to his children and their young friends, upon condition that they should use it not as a mere play-house, but for some purpose tending to their imprevement. After much thought and consultation the young folks decided to make a museum of it, for the purpose of studying and collecting specimens of natural objects in the neighborhood; and to this was added a library, consisting of donations of books and papers for the children themselves. The account of how the museum progressed through the fall and winter is contained in this volume. Almost all the old characters reappear, each one riding a hobby in search of "specimens" of some kind—birds, minerals, grasses, flowers, etc.

"Princess" is the familiar title given to Miss Pocahontas Mason by her friends and family. The story is of Virginia after the war, a greater part of it being enacted upon the Mason plantation. The Masons pride themselves upon being descended, from the historical Pocahontas—her name having been borne by eight different Masons of successive generations. A General Percival Smith, an exbrigadier of the Union army, buys a place near the Masons, and transplants his family from their Northern home, hoping the climate of Virginia will lengthen the life of his invalid son. The Northern and Southern characters are ably contrasted, and the different methods of living, and opposite ways of viewing the same question, well illustrated. The usual love story has an unusual element in having for a hero a divorced man. Whether or no any law, human or divine, stands in the way of his marrying again in warmly discussed. again is warmly discussed.

Aims to give a clear view of all our governmental institutions, and their relations to one another. It is chiefly peculiar in its way of doing this. The historical method is followed, and the growth of our institutions is briefly traced from "old Schleswick in Denmark"—where our ancestors lived in free towns and villages—through Eagland, where wars and violence resulted in kings and lords, and where the old free institutions of town and shire gave birth to a free Parliament—to America. where the same and where the old free institutions of town and shire gave birth to a free Parliament—to America, where the same institutions, transplanted and preserved, were finally united into free commonwealths, and the commonwealths into a national Republic. In treating of "Our government," attention is first called to local matters that can be explained and understood most readily. "Constitutions" come last, and are then fully explained. Summaries and suggestions, with helpful questions, are given to assist in the thorough mastery of the subject.

Of the many attractive women that have presided at the White House, none was more popular than beautiful "Dolly" Madisos. Even to the present time she remains one of the most charming figures among American historic women. Her letters, written without the most remote idea of publication, are transcripts of her gentle, womanly nature in Her letters, written without the most remote idea of publication, are transcripts of her gentle, womanly nature, in times of no ordinary trial, and under circumstances that are exceptional with the majority of her sex. Besides throwing a new and pleasing light on many public events and persons of the time, and affording valuable information regarding social and political life, they abound in delightful feminine details referring to the fashious, toilets of special occasions, love affairs, marriages, etc. The editor links the letters together with a pleasant running narrative, whereby a complete history of Mrs. Madison's life is furnished from her earliest childhood until her death at an advanced age. Many facts and anecdotes, handed down by near relatives, are also happily saved from oblivion, by the plan of the work.

Mrs. Mason, who is the well-known author of "The cherry blooms of Yeddo," was with her husband for many years a missionary in Japan, their mission field being Tokio, where she had excellent opportunities for studying the lives and characters of the people, and for the collection of material which she has made use of in this book. She not only relates her experiences as a missionary, but sketches very vividly and picturesquely the scenery of the country, its peculiarities in the way of trees, plants, and flowers; the streets of the cities, with their multitude of shops, tea-houses and bazzars; and, most interesting of all, the people themselves, their domestic habits, religious beliefs, industries and amusements. The book opens with several chapters descriptive of her early life in Maine.

The Publishers' Weekly.

POUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

SEPTEMBER 4, 1886.

PUBLISHERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for enery in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or eard should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications. All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

UNDERSELLING IN ENGLAND.

A NOVEL and at the same time a very simple plan, says the London Bookseller, now has been suggested by an Edinburgh bookseller for meeting the case. It accepts underselling as inevitable, but by a change of method seeks to diminish its evils. Another point in its favor is that it does not require the universal coperation of the trade; any bookseller may adopt it without placing himself at a disadvantage with his neighbors. The details of the plan are shown in the following circular printed for distribution among the customers of the house in question, but not yet sent out:

Messrs. Blank have long felt that the anomalous system of discounts prevailing in the bookselling trade is most unsatisfactory, alike in the interests of the buyer and the seller, and they believe a change in the terms of supply more in accordance with sound business principles would be welcomed.

At present a book is marked one price and sold at another; and to an increasing extent it is found that the one bears no uniform and definite proportion to the other, but varies most capriciously.

Messrs. Blank will in future adopt the common-sense method of marking each book the actual price they mean to sell it at, and the rate of profit charged will be as moderate as is consistent with right trading.

Messrs. Blank feel sure this change will be appreciated by all who favor them with their patronage, and be found much more satisfactory than the present irritating and variable practice. The whole stock has been re-marked at the net prices now adopted.

It will be seen that published prices, as far as the bookseller is concerned, are to be quietly disregarded; no mention will be made of discounts, but each book will be offered at a net price to the public. It will, no doubt, occur to some of our readers that provision is not made for goods charged to account as distinguished from those sold for cash, and the question arises whether it would be better to meet that difficulty by charging interest, or in fixing the net price so as to allow a small discount for cash.

A BIT OF EARLY TRADE HISTORY.

By R. L. Stevenson, in the London Academy.

THE first book published by Baker and Scribner was "The Puritans and Their Principles," by Edwin Hall, D.D.; but the first that proved to be a popular success and encouraged the young publishers was Rev. J. T. Headley's "Napoleon and His Marshals." This was insued in 1846. The book had an immense sale, and was followed in the same year by "The Sacred Mountains" and "Washington and His Generals," which were also extremely popular. The rhetorical style in which they were written captivated the clergy as well as the laity, and "The Sacred Mountains" was reommended from the pulpit, and circulars setting forth its merits were allowed to be distributed in the pews. Within two years from the date of the first publication more than a quarter of a million volumes of the three works were sold, and up to the present time the total sales have exceeded half a million. The next remarkable success of the house was made with "Ik Marvel's Reveries of a Bachelor." Donald G. Mitchell, who wrote under that name, was an unknown writer, and when he offered. The Battle Summer" to Baker and Scribner for publication, a work by him which had been issued by another house had proved a failure. "The Battle Summer' came out in 1849, and was also a failure. But the "Reveries of a Bachelor," with its delightful sentiment, captivated the public, and the sale was enormous. Then came "Dream Life," by the same author, and this, too, was very successful. The firm had published a book by N. P. Willis in 1849, which had a large sale. This was his "People Whom I Have Met." They also published a complete edition of his access makes the complete edition of his access makes. edition of his prose works. But the great encouragement that Baker & Scribner received in the first years of their business was from the extraordinary sale of Headley's and of Mitchell's works. They had already begun to publish some theological works, and these formed the nucleus of the extensive business of the house in this department in after years.

THE ITALIAN BOOK-TRADE.

BY FRANCIS KING.

From the London Rookseller.

ONE cannot help being struck with the number of foreign names among the bookselling and publishing fraternity at Rome. Modes & Mendel, Spithöver, Loescher, Treves. named issues, among other works, a large number of illustrated gift-books (libri di strenne) such as Bersezio's "Roma, la Capitale d'Italia:" Bertolini's "Storia di Roma;" Bianchi's "Galla Land," and Chirtani's "L'Arte attraverso di Secoli (Art across the Centuries)," all well illustrate de l'arte across the Centuries), all well illustrate de l'arte across the Centuries). trated and attractive-looking volumes. The Brothers Treves are also publishers of the two leading Italian illustrated weeklies, L'Illustrazione Italiana, and Illustrazione Popolare. Among the recent issues of Messrs. Modes & Mendel, of the Corso, should be mentioned the "Tesero d'Ornato (Grammar of Ornament)," of one of the members of the firm, Prof. G. J. Mendel, suplying a want long felt by Italian teachers and students of design, and following pretty much the kindred works of Owen Jones in our own country, and Charles Blanc in France. Herman Loescher (Corso) deals chiefly in the linguistic accessories of the teacher of modern languages, and has a fairly complete series of Grammars, Dictionaries, Reading-books, etc., of the various European tongues, including even Roumanian, Slave, Hungarian, Polish, Modern Greek, and Turkish and Russian. Book-hunters and bibliographers, I may add, will do well to apply at the Turin house of Herr Loescher for catalogues of his "Liberia Antiquaria" (sent free on request), or, still better, to ask first for the subject list of the seventeen catalogues (out of sixty-five) still available for distribution. The house of Spithöver is famous for its fine and costly works on Roman Art and Antiquities, such as De Rossi's "Roma Sotteranea Christiana," a folio on the Catacombs (Vol. IV. just out); Cav. Tosi's "Sacred and Sepulchral Monuments of Rome, Fifteenth and Seventeenth Centuries; and De Rossi's "Christian Mosaics and Pavements of Roman Churches," a superb folio, illustrated by admirable chromo-lithographs, and issuing at fifty francs the number; complete for £50. The maps and plans to be had at this shop are also excellent. Not far off lies another publishing establishment, "The Collegio di Propaganda Fide," whence issues Catholic the-ological literature. Recent publications include the complete works of S. Thomas (by order and at the expense of the present Pope), in folio and quarto, with special editions de luxe. The typography and paper of the "Propaganda" struck me as superior to the general run of Roman book-work. Paravia's extensive place of business in the SS. Appostoli is the headquarters of the educational and scholastic works in use in the Government Schools, from the Asilo and Elementary Schools up to the Liceo and the Università. Among educational "curiosities" at Paravia's, I saw life-size colored models of the chief organs of the human body, and also of the edible and the poisonous fungi, the latter being a practical form of demonstration which might be well, it seems to me, introduced into our English Other publishers are Verdesi (Via Lato), Perino (Piazza Colonna), Mantegazza (Via Nazionale), dealing in questionable and more than questionable literature, and Manzoni and Bocca both in the Corso. As this lastnamed gentleman bluntly refused to specify any particular books in his list, declaring that they were "all good," I leave him where I found him.

The Roman bookselling business is hard to distinguish here from that of the publishers, who vend their own and other wares and whose repositories do not differ outwardly from the ordinary bookseller's shop. Second-hand books may be had at Rossi's, in the Corso, Silvio Bocca's (Via del Giardino), Van Riel (Via Canestrari), and at P. Pieri's, who has a haunt in the Via del Colosseo, as much resembling a bookshop of the time of Martial as perhaps it is at this day possible to be. Then there are the various al fresco sellers with their stock-in-trade set up by the roadside, here and there, beside the book-stalls which appear every Wednesday in the Campo dei Fiori, where the Jews hold a kind of weekly rag-fair. Piale, in the Piazza di Spagna, deserves mention not only as bookseller and as the principal lending library and newsroom in the place, but also as a centre of information on a multitude of subjects (often of the most heterogeneous kind), with which the so-journer in Rome is concerned. The price of a cab fare, the chances of an introduction to Cardinal Howard or an audience of the Pope, at what o'clock the Roman foxhounds meet, or the nuns sing at the Trinità, where to buy tea, where to get English tobacco (hopeless request!). With these and such-like inquiries (so appropriate to a bookseller) will you find Signor Piale and his assistants beset at any hour of the day, from morn to dewy eve, and always responding with the most unwearied amiability and good nature. A list of the special Church ceremonies for the coming week is regularly posted up at the door. I had meant to say a word on the various libraries and on the learned societies of Rome, but my space grows short. It is well, however, to know or to remember that the Vatican Library is a library of manuscripts, not books. This, if borne in mind, may save many a useless journey. Among societies should be mentioned the " Commissione Arcologica Communale," a civic commission occupying itself with the excavations still proceeding; the "Societa Archeologica Christiana," the "British and American Archologica Society of Rome" (Mr. A. Strutt, Secretary); and the "Lince" (Lynx), a Catholic society dealing, somewhat after the manner of the French Academy, with every department of Letters and Art. All these societies publish their "Bolletini" (Journals), which, for carefulness of detail and general execution of plan, are just what such reports ought to be.

The typographers of Florence are numerous, the publishers few. Le Monnier and Barbèra are the best known. I paid a visit to Sig. Barbèra, more recently established, but the most enterprising member of his profession here, and he courteously gave me some details of his business. He is issuing now a "Little Library for the People" of living Italian authors, under the able editorial triumvirate of Mantegazza, Barrili and Bonghi, one volume to appear every fortnight and at the cost of half a here (5d.) each. Of recent publications are the "Matrimonio" of Alfred Orsiani, a vigorous rejoinder to Dumas' Defence of Divorce, and a collection by Raffaelle Barbiera, of representative Venetian Poetry. He has also an excellent "Diamond Library" of standard authors (Massinio d'Azeglio, Leopardi, etc.), six, ten or twelve volumes, neatly bound, in a case. Among works of note published by this house may be mentioned Marcotti's "Nuova Austria" (Impressions of Modern Austria), Matilde Serao'seditor or editress of a Roman paper, I forget which—"Conquest of Rome," i. e., Rome considered neither archæologically nor ecclesiastically, but in its actual present aspect of to-day. The "Popular Tuscan Tales" of Pitré, a wellknown writer on Folk-lore, also deserve notice. In Barbera's list many English authors -Huxley, Spencer, Smiles (very popular), Lewes, Helps, Mary Somerville, and J. R. Green figure among the translated works.

The booksellers of Florence are, as may be supposed, many and various. England is represented by Messrs. Coles and Goodban. Loescher also deals in foreign books. Among the native booksellers, Bocca, Paravia, Carumelli and Paggi take the lead. Old and second-hand books, of good value and quality, will be found at the repositories of Cecchi, Franceschini, Ducci, Grazzini, and Sercelli. I must also not forget M. Vieusseux, the "Mudie" of Florence, to whose diligent and attractive catering the foreign residents and visitors at Florence owe more than perhaps they can express. Vieusseux's Library occupies nearly the whole of the ground floor of the old Palazzo of the Podestas of Florence, and contains some 130,000 volumes, English, French, German, Italian, etc. Every and any new English book, almost, may be had, and all the principal European Reviews. Added to which there is a good Reference Library, and a News and Reading Room—in short, a very good club.

Native living authors are few and far to seek in Florence. When I have named Professor Villari, the President of the Institute, whose "Machiavelli and his Times" is known in England through his wife's translation, and Sig. Comparetti, the author of "Virgil in the Middle Ages," I have nearly exhausted the names of the indigenous literati of the city. The foreign contingent is, per contra, considerable and, curiously enough, all female.

Ouida, a host in herself, has her villa about three miles out of town. The Miss Horners, authors of "Walks in Florence," are to be found just without the Porta Romana. there is Miss Paget, who, under the name of Vernon Lee, has published "Euphorion," and a second novel, "Miss Brown;" Mrs. Bagster, the writer of "A Nook in the Apennines;" Miss Duffy, a contributor to the Argosy, and last, but not least, our gifted countrywoman, Madame Villari, who has written "Tuscan Hills and Venetian Waters," "Camilla's Girlhood," and other novels, besides various literary and art critiques in the Athenaum and Academy. There are various public libraries in the city, the chief being the Biblioteca Nazionale, which, like certain libraries in England, has the privilege of receiving a copy of every published work. Admittance is free to all comers, and books may be even taken home by those who give a sufficient guarantee that the volumes will be returned in good order.

SLOW PROGRESS TOWARD INTERNA-TIONAL COPYRIGHT.

From the Book News.

THE history of international copyright for the past year prolongs the record of feeble Congressional procedure, now in its fiftieth year, for it was in 1837 that the subject was first brought up in the Senate by Henry Clay. Of the two bills introduced in the Senate early in the session just closed, one had been prepared by the American Copyright League and intrusted to Senator Hawley, who had introduced it also a year before without then securing action. On its second appearance it was referred to the Committee on Patents, where about a month later a bill introduced for the first time by Senator Chace likewise found its way. The Hawley bill was also introduced into the House simultaneously with its introduction into the Senate. Early in the year hearings were given by the committee to authors, publishers, and others interested, and lastly the Chace bill was favorably reported. There now remains the assurance Senator Chace is reported to have given, that he intends bringing up his bill early in the session, "with an important speech on the subject of international copyright in general.'

The difference between the two bills is wide and distinct. Senator Hawley's was prepared in the interests of authors only, on a basis of reciprocity, providing that a foreign author could have copyright here on the same terms as an American citizen, on the sole condition that the foreign author's country gave the right of a metive to an American author. This bill was approved generally by authors and publishers, but was opposed by the artisans and mechanics concerned in the material processes of book-making. It was in the interests of this class that Senator Chace prepared the manufacturing clause characterizing his bill, which gives copyright only to American editions of foreign works, and prohibits the importation of foreign editions of works so copyrighted.

Judging solely from this legislative business, there is nothing that could be regarded by the most sanguine as good ground for a hopeful outlook. Other signs, however, are more encouraging. Much effort has been made by the friends of the movement to arouse general interest, and from the space given in newspapers and magazines of wide influence to its discussion is popular form and to reports of interesting proceedings, it may be inferred that the desired object has been attained and that the popularear is open to the subject. A gain of great importance is found in the removal of a long standing obstacle in the shape of the differences of opinion among authors and publishers with regard to the terms of the measures proposed. They now admit that "any bill is better than no bill," are willing to support any measure recognizing the rights of foreign authors, trusting to familiarity with the subject and to the growth of intelligence and a sense of justice to amend and perfect the law, however inadequate in its original form. A very direct aid to the spread of intelligence is the treatise on copyright by the Messa Bowker and Solberg, published last spring and containing in convenient and agreeable shape a useful source of information to those interested in a question whose long neglect to settle has become a national disgrace.

In strong contrast with the tardy and irregular movement in the United States, is the advanced position reached by nearly all Europe. Not only has almost every government there some form of international copyright, arrived at independently, but for some years there has been steady progress toward an International Copyright Union, whose first assembly will meet this The amended draft adopted in September, 1885, as a basis of the general convention of this year, declares that in all countries belonging to the Union, the authors of one country are to enjoy for their works in the other courtries the rights which the respective laws grant to natives. It can hardly be possible that such unanimity among civilized nations should not stimulate Congress to make speedy amends for the long-standing injustice conclusively shown to affect American as well as foreign authors, and, indirectly, the readers of a much-reading American people.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MISS WARDEN, the author of the grewsome story "The House on the Marsh," is reported to be a niece of the actor, Thomas Whiffen.

ACCORDING to the New York World, Mrs. Annie Sheldon Coombs, whose husband is of the firm of Coombs, Crosby & Eddy, of Brooklyn, is the author of "As Common Mortals." This novel, published by Cassell & Company, is said to be her first essay in fiction, though she frequently contributed verses to the pages of the deceased Manhattan.

ANOTHER NEW PUBLISHING FIRM.

THE HISTORY COMPANY is the name of a new firm. of which Mr. H. H. Bancroft is president, N. J. Stone, vice-president and manager, and Messrs. M. G. and K. K. Bancroft and O. A. Stone copartners, which has just been incorporated with ample capital at San Francisco. The firm has been incorporated exclusively for the purpose of handling the historical works of Hubert Howe Bancroft, the publication of which has been withdrawn from the house of A. L. Bancroft & Co.

On the site formerly occupied by the publishing house of A. L. Bancroft & Co., 721 Market Street, San Francisco, a first-class building is about to be constructed by the new company, the contracts for which have already been let by Mr. H. H. Bancroft. According to plans furnished by Mr. Clinton Day, architect, the building, which is to be known as "The History Building," will be five stories high, seventy-five feet front by one hundred and seventy deep, provided with commodious elevators, and divided into rooms for mercantile business or into suites for professional offices.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

MRS. LAURA C. HOLLOWAY, of Brooklyn, has been selected as associate-editor of Miss Rose E. Cleveland's magazine, Literary Life.

A PAPER on "Autumn in England," written by Mrs. Lillie and illustrated by Alfred Parsons and A. C. Corbould, will appear in the October Harper.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS now make the definite announcement that they will issue on January 1, 1887, the first number of a magazine to be known as Scribner's Magazine, and which will after that be published monthly, with illustrations.

The Book Buyer for September contains a number of illustrations printed in color, a new feature in magazine making. A new process has been used, by which three or four colors are printed by one impression. New portraits of Tolstor and Donald G. Mitchell are given in this issue.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Franklin, Pa.—McCormick & Co. and E. E. Smith & Co., booksellers and stationers, have united their interests under the firm name of Bensinger, Smith & Co., Limited; E. W. Smith, president; F. L. Bensinger, secretary and treasurer. The new firm, combining the largely increasing wholesale and retail trade of both of the old firms, will continue the business of each of the old firms at their former locations, 1205 and 1243 Liberty Street, for the present, but is contemplating the erection of a commodious building that will give it facilities to transact the largest jobbing and retail book, stationery and wall-paper business in Western Pennsylvania.

JACKSON, MICH.—Brown & Pilcher, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

NEW YORK CITY.—Howard Challen, publisher of labor-saving books, etc., has removed to 150 Nassau Street (Room 29).

NEW YORK CITY.—Townsend MacCoun has removed to 150 Nassau Street, in the American Tract Society Building.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

ROBERT CLARKE & Co. have just published their long-delayed "Bibliotheca Americana, 1886," a catalogue of a valuable collection of books and pamphlets relating to America, with which is included a descriptive list of their own historical publications. This catalogue, which is unusually full and comprehensive, represents in a large measure the general character and variety of the stock of Robert Clarke & Co., it being their aim to keep the larger portion of the works constantly on hand. The prices in this catalogue of course supersede all others published. It is a neatly printed octavo, in paper covers, of 280 pages. The books are classified under 85 subject headings in alphabetical order. (Price 50 cents.)

THE AMERICAN NEWS Co., N. Y., has published a handsome "Catalogue and Price List of the Domestic and Foreign Stationery" handled by them. This is the sixteenth annual issue, and is a decidedly handsome production from a typographical point of view. Everything that can be illustrated has been done so by clear, well-engraved wood-cuts and by handsomely colored plates. (164 p. Q.)

PETER G. THOMSON, Cincinnati, has issued a neat catalogue of his toy books, blocks, and games. The text is printed on tint blocks, and the cuts are all printed in colors to fac-simile the originals they represent. (40 p. D.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE HENRY BILL PUBLISHING Co. announce a new volume, by Rev. W. M. Thayer, to be entitled "Marvels of the New West." It is to be profusely illustrated.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. will publish this fall a translation of Don Armando Palacio Valdés's novel, "Marta y Maria," from the pen of Mr. Nathan Haskell Dole.

MR. A. B. McGLASHEN, representing A. & C. Black, of Edinburgh, is in New York City, making his headquarters at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. He will be in Philadelphia next week for a few days.

TOWNSEND MACCOUN, 150 Nassau Street, N. Y., announces that hereafter his publications will be listed at a net wholesale price, from which there will be a discount to the trade of ten per cent

CASSELL & Co. have just issued Julian Hawthorne's latest novel, "John Parmelee's Curse." This story originally appeared in a syndicate of newspapers, but since its conclusion there it has been rewritten and added to by Mr. Hawthorne.

THE publication of Mr. Gladstone's book, "The Irish Question," necessitated a quick piece of book making. Sheets were received by the Messrs. Scribner on Monday morning; the pamphlet was set up, printed, and bound twenty-four hours later.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. will publish in this country "Transformed," a story by Florence Montgomery, the author of the pretty little tale, "Misunderstood." The same firm announce a volume of studies on "The Curability of Insanity," by Pliny Earle, late superistendent of the Massachusetts State Lunatic Asylum.

THOMAS WHITTAKER has published a volume entitled, "Records of an Active Life," by Herman Dyer, D.D. The author is widely known as a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, who for fifty years has been a leader of men and thought in that body. His notes are anticipated with considerable interest. He has also published a volume of the unprinted sermons of Charles Kingsley, entitled "True Words for Brave Men."

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have published "Collisions in United States Waters: being a list of all the cases decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, involving maritime collisions, with a brief synopsis of the points of law and fact therein decided, arranged under alphabetical headings," by W. P. Preble, Jr.: "Vol. 144. Massachusetts Reports, January to May, 1886," by John Lathrop, Reporter: and "A Digest of the Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, from the Organization of the Court to the Close of the October Term, 1884," by Jonathan Kendrick Kenney.

'ROBERTS BROS. have in preparation a new work by Philip Gilbert Hamerton, entitled "Imagination in Landscape." This volume will be a large quarto, uniform in size with "Paris in Old and Present Times," and will contain numerous wood-cuts and full-page etchings. The call for "Jo's Boys," by Louisa M. Alcett, is so great that 10,000 copies more are now being printed, making 30,000 in all; as the publication day is still a good way off (October 1), the probabilities are that the first edition will be not less than 50,000 copies. The next volume of Balzac's novels will be "Cousin Pons," and will probably appear in September.

A. C. Armstrong & Son announce the smallest complete edition of Shakespeare, to be known as the "Illustrated Pocket Edition of Shakespeare's Dramatic Works and Poems," and to contain also a glossary and life by J. Talfourd Blair. It will be carefully edited from the best texts, and will have forty line block reproductions of Westall's and other well-known engravings. It will be in eight volumes, 32mo., in nonpareil type, and perfectly printed by the Glasgow University Press on thin opaque paper, specially manufactured for the purpose. It will be issued in a neat box in many varieties of binding, including cloth, French morocco, Russia, full calf, Turkey morocco, etc.

GINN & Co. announce that the fourth volume of Cynewulf's "Phœnix." which was to be published in the Library of Anglo-Saxon Poetry in August, has been delayed until fall to allow time for collating the Phœnix with the original manuscript at Exeter. The value of the present edition will, of course, be considerably enhanced. The text will be accompanied by foot-notes, with readings of the Ms. and of various editors. Facing the Anglo-Saxon text will be found the Latin original. The introduction will give a brief discussion of the Phœnix myth, an abstract of the present aspect of the Cynewulf question, its bearing upon the authorship of the poem, and a bibliographical outline. Critical, textual, and explanatory notes will be added, and a complete glossarial index.

LEE & SHEPARD have now ready "The Book of Eloquence," by Charles Dudley Warner, a collection of extracts in prose and verse from the most famous orators and poets, intended as excises for declamations in colleges and schools; "Study of the English Classics," a practical handbook for teachers, by Albert F. Blaisdell;

"The Child's Book of Health in Easy Lessons for Schools," by the same author; "Psychology in Education," a treatise for parents and educators, by Louisa Parsons Hopkins, author of "The Handbook of the Earth;" a newedition of "Simplicity and Fascination," a novel by Anne Beale; and the Holland Series in four volumes, comprising "The Deerings of Medway," "The Hollands," "Six in All," and "The Mills of Tuxbury," which are among the best home stories written by Virginia F. Townsend.

NINE of the ten volumes of Burton's "Arabian Nights" are now published.

THE first portion of a Dictionary to the Divina Commedia is shortly to be published by Mr. Paget Toynbee. The completed work will probably form one thick volume.

MACMILLAN & Co. will publish shortly a work on Madagascar, which comprises a narration of the principal operations in the recent war between the French and the Malays.

An English translation of Ranke's "Origin of the Seven Years' War," undertaken by a lady at the author's request a few months before his death, will be ready at the beginning of the new year.

For some time back Mr. Barnett Smith has been engaged in preparing for Routledge & Sons a "Life of Her Majesty the Queen." The work is being compiled from all available sources, and will be issued next month in one volume of about 400 pages. It will be illustrated by several steel portraits.

SAMPSON Low & Co. have in the press the first part of a new translation of Hans Christian Andersen's "Fairy Tales and Stories," which will be embellished with over five hundred illustrations by eminent Scandinavian artists, drawn expressly for this edition. The first part will appear before Christmas, and the second next year. The translator is Mr. Carl Siewers. They will publish in October the "Memoir of the late Randolph Caldecott, R. A.," on which Henry Blackburn has been engaged for some time. It will contain upward of one hundred and fifty illustrations, besides numerous original letters and sketches.

HUMORS OF THE TRADE.

The following unique notice of the English edition of General Grant's "Memoirs," cut from the first number of a new English literary monthly, the Circulating Library, and written in all seriousness, is quite worthy of Mark Twain in his most hilarious moments. With child-like blandness the reviewer declares:

"The biography of Grant will be interesting, not only for the career of this great man himself, but as showing how people rise sometimes from obscurity to great positions through industry, ability, and circumstances. Grant was the son of a farmer, who gave him a much better education than he had himself received. The Civil War obliged Grant to become a soldier, in which capacity he served for fourteen years, when he again took to farming, which he had to relinquish on account of ill-health. He then became successively estate agent, clerk in a store, and Senator. In this last vocation he distinguished himself so highly that he was elected President."

THE LITERARY NEWS.

THE literary paper is one of the features of the day, and while directly benefiting the cause of good literature, as directly benefits the book trade by creating a demand for the books it notices. Every bookseller should, through such mediums, endeavor to keep his customers thoroughly posted on the literature of the day. But without taking into account the time and labor expended, and the painstaking discrimination necessary for the compilation of a reliable literary journal, the cost entailed by such a publication necessarily deters booksellers from, themselves, editing and issuing such a medium.

The LITERARY NEWS, however, based on an experience of over fifteen years' continuous issue, is an acknowledged authority on current books and reading, and the plan upon which it is issued, enabling booksellers to circulate it among their customers under their own imprint, virtually makes it the recognized organ of each bookseller distributing it, and turns a direct trade in books into his own hands.

No better time than the present can be found for the adoption of the LITERARY NEWS by live booksellers as a personal medium. Especial attention is therefore invited to it, in the hope that booksellers who are not now using it will test its efficiency by ordering an imprint edition for the fall and winter months.

The book-notices of the LITERARY News are always selected from leading papers, and are such as have weight with readers, while the other features of the paper make it a welcome monthly visitor in every home, and establish pleasant and direct relations between booksellers and bookbuyers.

CHRISTMAS NOVELTIES.

Messrs. Geo. R. Lockwood & Son desire to inform the trade that they have NOW READY a very attractive and novel line of Christmas souvenirs. They are as follows:

.OCKWOOD'S PARCHMENT DAINTIES."

This Series, so well known, has reached in a single year a sale of many thousands, and is perhaps the most popular line of booklets ever put on the market. They will be issued in a decidedly novel style, more attractive that ever. line of bookiets ever purchase.

They are:

I. GLAD TIDINGS. (New this season.)

I. THAS THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS.

I. THAS THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS.

THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM.

4. POEMS FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR. By Frances Ridley Havergal.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES. By CHARLES DICKENS AND WASHINGTON IRVING.

Retail price, 40 cents each.

HOLLY LEAVES. MISTLETOE SPRAYS.

These two novelties consist of appropriate verses, bound in dainty covers, each being cut in the shape of the laws named (so universally associated with Christmas), and richly lithographed in bright colors and hard polished sive.

They are remarkably original as to shape, and will readily be recognized as a refined and popular Christmas souvenir.

Retail price, 40 cents each.

This souvenir is issued with the kind permission of Messrs. Harper & Broa., publishers of "Ben Hen," at Gen. Lew Wallace, its author. It consists of four colored etchings, illustrating the meeting of the three was as Seekers after the Light, and the appearance of the star, announcing the birth-place of the Redeemer.

The etchings are accompanied by text explanations selected from "Ben Hur." Embossed silver stamping a heavy tinted cardboard, bound with a wide satin ribbon to match, forms the very unique cover.

The unprecedented and continued sale of "Ben Har" needs no comment, and we therefore feel coakies that the many thousand readers of that interesting book will be gratified also to possess this little token, so appropriate for a Christmas gift.

Retail price (in a box), $1.25.

The trade are respectfully urged to reserve a place for them in their stock. Correspondence solicited.

 This book has long been out of print, and scarce. Its introduction into the Chandos Classic will bring it in a cheap form before a class of readers who would otherwise have no opportunity of becoming acquainted with this celebrated heroic poem, known as the "Itiad of the East" of the great poet of Persia, comprising the annals and achievements of the ancient Persian kings and conqueres.

There is great interest now displayed in Oriental literature and thought, and booksellers can u doubt make sales if this volume is shown.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE next issue of the Publishers' WEEKLY will be the regular Fall Announcement number. All matter, to be in time for insertion in this issue, ought to reach us not later than the 15th.

THE FALL TRADE sale will commence on September 21, at 9 A.M. Nearly forty houses are represented, all of which have made liberal consignments. During the sale will be offered some of the stereotype plates of H. A. Sumner & Co., Edward Meeks, and E. W. Muller.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. have issued in pamphlet form "Ralph Waldo Emerson—his maternal ancestors, with some reminiscences of him," by David Greene Haskins, D.D., reprinted from the Literary World.

T. B. PETERSON & BROS. have issued a com-plete, unabridged, and illustrated edition of "The Count of Monte Cristo," by Alexander Dumas, making a large octavo volume of six hundred pages, for fifty cents.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish next week "Half Hours with a Naturalist: rambles near | Young People's Series, by David Ker.

the shore," by Rev. J. G. Wood, with over one hundred illustrations. It will form a companion volume to "Half Hours in Field and Forest," by the same author, issued last year.

TICKNOR & Co. have just ready "A Romantic Young Lady," by Robert Grant, which is considered the strongest and most brilliant work of this successful delineator of modern society life and manners: "Shakespeare's England," by and manners; "Shakespeare's England, William Winter, so called because it relates so largely to Warwickshire, and depicts not so much the England of fact as the England created and hallowed by the spirit of her poetry, of which Shakespeare is the soul; "Some Strange and Curious Punishments," by Henry M. Brooks, a new volume in the Olden Time Series; Byron's "Childe Harold" in two fine editions the Tremont and the Pocket-both beautifully illustrated and bound uniform with "Lucile" and " Lady of the Lake."

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have just published "Meditations of a Parish Priest," by Joseph Roux, with an introduction by Paul Marieton, translated by Isabel F. Hapgood, which has caused considerable enthusiasm in France among thinkers of all classes, who with one accord have done homage to the little book; accord have done nomage to the little book;
"St. John's Eve," by Nikolai V. Gogol, author of "Taras Bulba," translated from the Russian by Isabel F. Hapgood, a selection from "Evenings at the Farm" and "St.
Petersburg Stories," showing the marvellous style and wild grace and flavor of this remarkable author; "Silent Times, a Book to Help in Reading the Bible into Life," by Rev. J. R. Miller; "Girls who Became Famous," by Sarah K. Bolton, author of "Poor Boys who Became Famous," containing sketches of the lives of Harriet Beecher Stowe, George Eliot, Helen Hunt Jackson, Louisa M. Alcott, Harriet Hosmer, Rosa Bonheur, Florence Nightingale, Maria Mitchell, and other eminent women who have become famous in literature, science, and art, with portraits of the most prominent-those of H. H. and L. M. Alcott being especially true and life-like.

HARPER & Bros. have published this week the long-expected volume on 'Mary and Martha, the Mother and the Wife of George Washington,' by Benson J. Lossing. It is a delightful collection of personal memorials of those nearest to Washington, gathered from contemporaneous letters and memoranda, from journals and minutes of conversation, from the recollections of those who were relatives and connections or friends of the family, from publications of the time, and from trustworthy tradition. complete and accurate sketch of the lives of the mother and wife of Washington, it also reveals more fully than it has ever been revealed before the social and private life of Washington himself. Other books just ready are: "Contributions to the Science of Education," by Prof. William H. Payne, a timely book, bearing on active controversies of to-day and casting new light upon them; Homer's Iliad, books xvi.-xxiv., with notes by Prof. W. S. Tyler, which forms a new volume in their New Classical Series; "Voyages of a Merchant Navigator of the Days that are Past," compiled from the journals of the late Richard J. Cleveland by H. W. S. Cleveland; and "Into Unknown Seas, or, the Cruise of Two Sailor Boys," a new volume in the Harper's

The aim in preparing this book has been to bring to-gether a collection of pieces of intrinsic literary excellence and with reference to their suitability as declamations and recitations. They have been selected from a large number of authors, and present a wide range of style, and are con-

Voyages of a merchant Cleveland, R: J. navigator of the days that are past; comp. from the journals and letters of the late R: J. Cleveland by H. W. S. Cleveland. N. Y., Harper, 1886. 6+245 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

The present work gains in interest in having for its hero an ancestor of President Cleveland. He was a typical seaman of two generations ago, who sailed from Salem in a merchant vessel and had many stirring and remarkable adventures, compared with which the stories of Defoe seem tame. This book has the advantage of being true, and also of depicting the whole life of an American seaman at the beginning of this century. Mr. Cleveland was a type of letters from a little garden, il. by Gordon Browne. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1886.] 96 p. O. bds., 30 c.

Ewing, Juliana Horatia. Mary's meadow and

In 1883 Mrs. Ewing went to live at Villa Ponente, Taunton, where she reverted to a favorite pursuit of her girlhood—the practical cultivation of flowers—hence the origin of "Mary's meadow." It was her last serial story, published in Aunt Judy's Magasine in 1883-1884, and was followed by "Letter from a little garden," which Mrs. Ewing's death left unfinished. The chief charm of the book is in the blending of humor and pathes when Mary tells how she, with her brothers and sisters, made their "Earthly paradise," a game in which each child assumed a character, and dressed to suit the part. Chris creates much amusement by quaint sayings and his conception of the part "Hose in hose."

Silas Carston is the chief attraction in the group of characters, of which each seems possessed of an individual mystery. Silas is introduced as a pupil in the school of the Rev. Josiah Porter, where he quickly runs the gamut of schoelboy, usher, and husband of his master's daughter, who gains ascendancy over him by her mesmerie powers, which are as binding as a spell. He finally escapes the strange power of Judith Porter's eyes for a time, and new complications ensue, which lead to the discovery of Silas' identity.

Knox, T. W. The life of Robert Fulton; and a history of steam navigation. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1886. 10+507 p. por. and il. D. cl., $1.75.

" In the b elief that a history of steam navigation com-In the belief that a history of steam navigation com-bined with a biography of the man who designed and built the first successful steamboat would be of general interest, the author has prepared this volume. He has avoided the use of technical terms wherever possible, in order that the work might prove acceptable to youthful or non-scientific readers as well as to those with whom steam navigation is a special study. The materials for the life of the inventor have been drawn from many sources. The author acknowl-edges his indebtedness to the biographies of Fullon by edges his indebtedness to the biographies of Fulton by Colden, Renwick, and Reigard; to Life and letters of Joel Barlow, by C Burt Todd; and also to the officers of the New York Historical Soc. for the use of records in their New York Historical Soc. for the use of records in their possession. In the history of steam navigation he has been greatly aided by the work of Admiral Preble upon the same subject; by Professor Thurston's 'History of the growth of the steam engine;' Bourne's 'Catechism'; King's 'Practical notes for students and engineers;' and by other books of a similar nature." Preface. Many of the illustrations of the contraction of the co trations are reproductions of Fulton's original drawings.

Lossing, Benson J. Mary and Martha, the mother and the wife of George Washington; il. by fac-similes of pen-and-ink drawings, by H. Rosa. N. Y., Harper, 1886. 16+348 p. il. D. cl., $2.50.

From a large number of autograph letters and documents pertaining to the Washington and Custis families, and from other papers found at Arlington House, from bits of trustworthy information picked up here and there, sometimes by accident but more frequently by research, during the past thirty-five years, Mr. Lossing has succeeded in gathering much knowledge concerning the mother and wife of Washington, which has hitherto been unrevealed to the public. In delineating the career of Martha Washington Washington, which has national been allowed by the career of Martha Washington he has mingled sketches of events in the private and public life of her husband in which she was directly or indirectly a participant—such as amusements, fêtes, military reviews, receptions, entertainments, hospitalities at Mount Vernon, and notably the life at various head-quarters of the army during the war for independence at which they resided together.

Shifting scenes, a fleeting love affair, and a fatal seed make up the transparent plot in which the Countess Losina is the prime mover. Wiera Lodrin, who has erred in her youth, strives to bury her past and create a future which she thinks will remain invincible; a few moments' idle gossip and her son's quarrel with a parvenu are sufficient to overthrow the frail structure which she has been thirty years building; but Oswald Lodrin's death is a grand victory, atoming for the shame of his birth. According to the promise of the "Primer," which preceded this little volume, children are here introduced to real reading. The aim has been to provide stories and verses which shall have the same interest for them as the magazine has for grown persons, and yet be entirely suited to their small powers. The guiding principle has been the cultivation of a taste for reading, hence many of the selections are standard or classic; the remainder are in the simple narrative style. Many of the stories as well as the illustrations, which are notably good, have, by special arrangement, been taken from Our Little Ones.

A number of works have been written on the subject of microbes, but they have all been prepared for the physician or naturalist, and take for granted that the reader is familiar with the ideas already established on pathology or on cryptogamic botany. This work, while it will interest and be found to have much of value for physicians and practical men, is written more for the general public—those persons, in fact, who possess only the elementary notions of natural science which are included in the course of prishary instruction. The author hopes it may therefore find a place in the libraries of secondary instruction, and in public libraries, and may serve as an introduction to the learned works of Cornil and Balies, of Duclaux, Klein, Koch, Sternberg, and others.

Professor Vámbéry, whose time has principally been devoted to a study of Central Asia, gives as his reason for entering upon a new literary field his desire to make American and English readers acquainted with the record of his native country, and to present the various phases of the history of Hungary in "the light best suited to attract the attention of the citizens of England and of the Great Republic to whose opinion we Hungarians are by no means indifferent." Like the other volumes of this deeply-interesting series, the book only deals with the salient events, the most noteworthy personalities, and the most thrilling episodes in a narrative which covers nearly a thousand years. Mr. Heilprin did the proof-reading of the work, and revised Professor Vámbéry's English where necessary. As the first story of Hungary written in English, this work is worthy of special attention, aside from its literary excellence and the high character of its author.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Burton & Co., booksellers and stationers, have started business at 321 Central Avenue, with a branch at 466 Madison Avenue in the same city.

ALLEGAN, MICH.—Mrs. L. B. Williams, dealer in books, has sold out.

Austin, Tex.—J. C. Raymond, bookseller, is closing out his stock.

CHATTANOGGA, TENN.—A. Burt & Co., booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership, A. Burt withdrawing.

DES MOINES, IOWA.—Smith, Crosswait & Clarke, wholesale and retail book and stationery dealers, have dissolved partnership.

MONTREAL, CANADA.-W. Drysdale & Co., 232 St. James Street, have recently put a new plateglass front in their premises, and extended the store back, placing the old front window at side and back end of the store, so that they have now the advantage of greatly increased light. They are introducing a new feature in the shape of a book parlor for convenience of ministers, teachers, and others, giving an opportunity of meeting friends while in the city and discussing the new books. Their store is now 112 feet in length by about 20 in breadth, and they occupy the four flats, the first being devoted to showroom generally, the second to theological and miscellaneous, juvenile, with parlor; third floor, stationery, and fourth, reserve stock. Messrs. Drysdale will be thankful for catalogues of books, stationery, and specialties.

Montrose, N. Y.—W. B. Deans, bookseller, has been burned out.

NEW YORK CITY.—Herman Rosenthal opened, on the 7th inst. a book store at 14 Cooper Union (Third Avenue). He will make a specialty of English and foreign books for scholars.

PITTSBURG, PA.—S. A. Clarke & Co., book-sellers, have dissolved partnership.

YATES CENTRE, KANSAS.—C. E. Florence, bookseller and stationer, has sold out.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

THE next of his classified catalogues that Mr. Bernard Quaritch has in preparation, says in London Athenaum, is a "Catalogue of Type graphical Monuments," consisting of a list of the most valuable works in his possession the were produced in all countries during the years immediately following the invention of printing. It will be arranged in typographical and chronological order, so as to illustrate the history of the art. Among the books comprised in this catalogue will be: under Germany, the Menu Psalter, printed on vellum by Schoeffer in 1454 and the Catholicon, printed by Guttenberg in 1460; under England, some ten Caxtons, ik two Books of St. Alban's, and many works by Wynkyn de Worde, Richard Pynson, and Julian Notary; under France, several issues of the first press established in the Sorbonne, and others printed by Verard and Géoffroy Tory; under Holland, several books with wood-cuts, produced by Geraert de Leeu and other early printers: under Italy, many of the Subiaco and Rome editions printed by Schweinheim and Pannaru. and impressions on vellum by Jenson.

BOOKSELLERS' CATALOGUES.

From the London Publishers' Circular.

In olden times there was a law by which it was enacted that booksellers should be compelled to keep an accurate list or catalogue of every book they had in stock, the catalogue to be kept hanging in an easily accessible place in the shop. Now, when the written law is obsolete, there is another which compels the bibliopole of our day to do much the same thing. Railways and the Post Office have so altered the conditions under which our own in common with other trades has to be carried on, that it is not only to the comparatively few book-buyers in his own town that the bookseller appeals to for support, but to the many outside it, in all parts of the world, with whom it is necessary he be able to communicate some idea of the contents of his stock.

Thus we fall back upon the ancient catalogue, thousands of which are by our larger firms distributed throughout the whole world at frequent intervals, while the humbler members of the trade follow with their smaller numbers, with longer spaces of time intervening.

From a frequent and careful inspection of various catalogues issued by the British trade, we feel bound to say that of all the undertakings which a bookseller has on his hands, that which he seems to give the least care to is-his catalogue. Errors in catalogues are painfully numerous, stupid, and unintelligible headings and notes are the rule rather than the exception; and to a careful, conscientious and painstaking cataloguer the run of such productions form dis-Want of learning one could heartening reading. readily forgive, for it is not to every one that a good education-in the proper sense of the term | Dovaston's Poems, 1825.

has been given. But when we see error after error, mis-statement after mis-statement, due to carelessness alone, we cannot but feel dissatisfied with the trade for allowing such productions to pass current.

Affectations of eccentricity are among the chief stupidities rife among booksellers; for instance, we have seen a catalogue to which has been given the title, "Daintie diet for Boke Worms," and its whole preamble setting forth the proprietor's name was written in a style supposed to be old English, but which was a conglomeration that would puzzle even the most profound of philologists. In another we see the catchword or heading under which each article is placed put, not at the beginning of the article, but as it occurs on the title of the book, which brings it in the middle. The effect of a word in full and bold capital letters in the middle of each article is, at least, not pleasing. Sets of Gilfillan's "British Poets" we see catalogued under "British," while such headings as "Black-letter," "Curious," "Facetiæ," etc., should find no place in the well-regulated catalogue.

Some of the larger houses are the greatest offenders. Indeed, to a large and well-known London firm of second-hand booksellers belongs the credit of having the most careless catalogue in the trade—an unenviable distinction! It is a question that should appeal to every tradesman, and indeed every assistant-How can our catalogue be improved? The answer is, by a careful and conscientious study of the well-defined rules which should regulate the preparation of all catalogues, and by an intelligent, though hasty, grasp of the motif of the book catalogued, the latter preventing incongruities which in print appear ridiculous. Every cataloguer, too, should have access to Lowndes, Brunet, Allibone, and as many other reference books as possible. three above-mentioned as a whole are a sine qual non, while to most people a perusal of Black-burn's "Hints on Catalogue Titles" would prove decidedly beneficial.

In conclusion we would remark that much of the "bad workmanship" in the second-hand bookselling trade is due to the abolition of the much-abused and old-fashioned rule of apprenticeship, by which ignorant amateurs and other incompetent persons call themselves booksellers and are classed with and compete against men who have literally had to learn their business by long and often harsh experience.

From Book Lore.

THERE is a sort of busy worm That will the fairest books deform, By gnawing holes throughout them; Alike through every leaf they go, Yet of its merits nought they know, Nor care they aught about them.

Their tasteless tooth will tear and taint The poet, patriot, sage, or saint, Norsparing wit nor learning: Now, if you'd know the reason why, The best of reasons I'll supply— 'Tis hread to the poor wermin Tis bread to the poor vermin.

Of pepper, snuff, or 'bacca-smoke, And russia-calf they make a joke. Yet why should sons of science These puny, rankling reptiles dread? Tis but to let their books be read. And bid the worms defiance.

FUNERAL OF ROGER SHERMAN.

ROGER SHERMAN, who died August 25, was buried at Mount Vernon Cemetery, Philadelphia, on the 8th inst.

The funeral services were held at the family residence. No. 311 South Tenth Street. body, which had been embalmed, rested in a cloth-covered coffin, which was placed in the parlor of the house. There were no flowers. The services, which were unusually impressive, were conducted by Rev. Andrew D. Heffern, rector of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church, Second and Catharine streets, Southwark. He delivered a brief eulogy. Rev. D. O. Kellogg, D.D., of Vineland, N. J., who has been employed by Sherman & Co. for several years; also delivered a eulogy. From this it appears that deceased was the son of Conger Sherman, who founded the business to which his son subsequently succeeded. He was educated in the public schools of the city and a seminary in New York, and from the latter he graduated at the age of sixteen years. He at once entered his father's establishment and made himself thoroughly conversant with every branch of the business.

He was made a partner in 1853, and eleven years later the father retired, the business being assumed by Roger Sherman, M. F. Bennerman, and Andrew Overend, under the title which still remains. The business prospered wonderfully under the able management of the head of the firm, and he lived to see his labors rewarded by the accumulation of an ample fortune.

The following officiated as the pall-bearers: Andrew Overend, William Rutter, William Robb, Eugene Munday, A. G. Elliot, and John L. Attwater, of Cincinnati. The employés of the printing house were represented at the funeral by a large delegation. Nearly every member of the Book Trade Association attended. Among the prominent persons present were the following: Henry Carey Baird, J. R. Jones, F. W. McDowell, E. H. Butler, Julian B. Shoemaker, Dr. William Hunt, Dr. A. Fricke, Ignatius Kohler, J. B. Blakiston, J. B. Cowperthwait, H. T. Coates, T. W. Hartley, and John F. Smith.

Hartley, and John F. Smith.

Mr. Sherman had but one living relative, a sister, Mrs. Somerville, who was in Paris at the time of his death, and on whose account the funeral was delayed.

NORWEGIAN LITERATURE IN 1884.

THE "Universitets-Bibliothekets Aarbog for 1885" of the "Kgl. Norske Frederiks Universitet," at Christiania, which has just been published, contains among others the "Norsk Bogfortegnelse for 1884," which gives an approximate idea of the number of books published annually in Norway. According to the catalogue there were received at the library 787 bound volumes and pamphlets, 104 volumes of periodicals, 104 vo'umes of political and other journals, 1060 numbers of so-called Smaatryk—that is, laws, statutes, and legal and official publications generally, 77 pieces of music, 26 charts, and 23 plates of lithographs, wood-cuts, etc. This makes a total of 2190 separate publications that were printed in 1884 at 118 printing and 8 lithographing offices, and by 3 music publishers. As every publisher is obliged to deposit a copy of his new issues in the Library of the Fredericks University, this total represents fairly the publishing capacity of Norway.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

JOHN ALLYN has just published "Casa's Gallic War," with introduction, notes, and vocabulary, by Francis W. Kelsey, of Lake Forest University. The work is finely made up, and abundantly illustrated with wood-cuts and six colored illustrations.

THE historical division of the Prussian "Grossen Generalstabes" has prepared a history of the German-Danish war of 1864, concerning which no official account has yet been published. The first volume, about ready for publication, will contain the political prelude to the war, and the operation in Jutland and before Düppel down to April, 1864.

C. W. BARDEEN, Syracuse, N. Y., desire to inform the trade that the fire which on the 2d inst. destroyed most of the stock in the binder, of Hall & McChesney wiped out the new editions of the "Song Budget," the "Regents Gog-raphy," Harlow's "English Literature," and Welch's "Intermediate Problems in Arithmetic," none of which he has now on hand. The plates were uninjured, however, and of some of them he had more sheets in stock, so that the delay in filling orders will be less than a week.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. will publish on the 15th "The Labor Movement in America," by Prof. Richard T. Ely, of the Johns Hopkins University. The book is the result of several years' work on the part of Prof. Ely, who is at acknowledged authority on economic and social topics. It is one of the most complete historical sketches yet published of the origin and growth both of socialism and of labor organizations. No pains have been spared to secure accuracy. Prof. Ely has collected for years books, pamphlets, labor newspapers, constitutions of trades unions, and like material, with this in view; and during the preparation of this book he has travelled several thousand miles, visiting communistic settlements and leading industrial centres, and forming the acquaintance of labor leaders.

D. C. HRATH & Co. have just ready "Illustrations of Geology and Geography, for Use in Schools and Families," by Prof. N. S. Shaler, assisted by Prof. William M. Davis and T. W. Harris. This consists of twenty large photographs of pictures of the earth's surface, and an equal number of colored plaster models, designed to show the structure and history of the pictures. The models are 7x5 inches, and ? inches thick. They will publish on the 20th one of Hauff's tales, entitled "Das Kalte Herz." edited, with notes, glossary, and grammatical appendix, by William H. Van Der Smissen, appendix, by William H. Van Der Smissen, Lecturer on German in Toronto University College; "Elementary Course in Practical Zoology," by B: S. Colton, of Ottawa High Zoology," by B: S. Colton, of Ottawa High School, Illinois, which is desi ned to give the student a clear idea of the animal kingdom as a whole, by the careful study of a few typical animals; "A Select Bibliography of Pedagogical Literature," by G. Stanley Hall, of Johns Hopkins University, a valuable medium through which teachers may select their reading: "Modern Petrography," by George Huntington Williams, an account of the application of the microscope to the study of geology; and "The Study of Latin in the Preparatory Course," by Edward P. Morris, Professor of Latin, Williams College.
